Drought lessens

Rio Grande Supply Forecast Leaps to a Full Supply for 2005 After many years of drought conditions and two years of severe cut-backs in river water supplies, the early February projection by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation's El Paso Field Office indicates a possibility for a full water supply for Rio Grande Project water users in 2005. A greater-than-average snow pack in the upper Rio Grande basin and record breaking rains in the lower elevations have resulted in almost doubling January's 53 percent water supply projection for the year. Snow pack conditions in much of the upper Rio Grande basin mountains of northern New Mexico and southern Colorado range from 110 to 155 percent of average for this time of year. The Bureau of Reclamation's supply projection is based on the assumption that these conditions will continue through the remainder of the winter season as it is still early in the year. Projections and actual water supply are subject to many factors such as changes in weather patterns, the amount of water kept in up-stream storage, evaporation and division of water under interstate Compact rules for the Rio Grande.

Internationally acclaimed artist again captures spirit of Siglo de Oro festival

EL PASO COUNTY — Captured by the flickering light of her candle, a young woman appears focused on what lays before her. The contrast is sharp. Darks and lights receive dramatic play as scrolled letters proclaim Siglo de Oro XXX.

Aleksander Titovets, an El Paso artist of international stature, has crafted this work carefully.

Each year, the Chamizal National Memorial links the performing and visual arts by utilizing a visual image to promote this now 30-year-old festival, which celebrates the cultural, literary and historic ties of the border region with Spain.

Born in Siberia, Titovets was raised and educated in St. Petersburg, Russia. He earned a master's degree in Fine Arts from the State University in St. Petersburg. Following graduation, he was inducted into the Union of Artists of the USSR.

Since his 1992 arrival in the United States, Titovets has been widely recognized. The National Academy of Design, New York, NY and the National Oil and Acrylic Painters Society, Osage Beach, MI have featured his work.

He has been a featured artist in the national invitation exhibition Artists of America in Denver and the Great American Artists in Cincinnati. Many of his paintings can be found in public and private collections throughout the United States, Canada, Mexico, England, Germany, France, Israel, Russia and Finland.

An exhibition featuring the work of this widely recognized painter will open in the Los Paisanos Gallery, on Thursday, Feb. 24, 5-7 p.m. prior to the opening of the 30th Siglo de Oro Drama Festival. The show will hang through April 3.

The reception is open to the public. Admission is free.

Chamizal National Memorial, El Paso's National Park, is located between Bowie High School and The Bridge of the Americas at 800 South San Marcial. For additional information, call 532-7273.

YOUNG AT 30 — The Siglo de Oro festival, now in its 30th year, is celebrated in this painting (used in the festival's promotional poster) by Aleksander Titovets. A exhibition of his work will appear at the Chamizal beginning Feb. 24.

Some concerned about proposed Horizon City annexation

By Arleen Beard
Special to the Courier

HORIZON CITY — Some opposition to a proposed plan for annexation of over 800 acres by Horizon City was voiced during a public hearing on the issue during the Feb. 8 regular City Council meeting.

Alex Contreras, a concerned citizen, asked council for their reasoning behind the annexation if they continually state there is not enough money for police cars, to fix parks or to pave roads.

Most of the concerns voiced were from people who bought land outside of the city limits for the purpose of avoiding city taxes. These landowners said they don't want to become a part of Horizon City.

David Ballard, a land developer, also expressed his opposition to the annexation.

In other business, council discussed at length an ordinance to establish a Board of Citizen Police Review. The purpose for this board is to investigate any complaints made towards the police department. Lillard Thompson, a former mayor of Horizon City, expressed his opposition to the ordinance because he said it will only cause micro managing.

Council member Keenen Greseth said he feels the creation of this board is "going a bit overboard." He said he is not convinced there is a need for a board such as this one.

Council member Byron Taylor is in favor of establishing a review board because he said it will keep employees from becoming complacent. He compared his view to that of an experienced teacher as opposed to a new teacher with lots of energy. After considerable discussion, council voted to table the agenda item, to allow for the two absent council members to have a vote on this issue. The two council members who were not in attendance were Walter Miller and Robert Reyes.

Council approved an ordinance authorizing the submission of Charter Amendments to the qualified voters of the town in the upcoming election. One controversial amendment includes that of wanting to put the Police Chief's contractual position on the same schedule as that of the mayor's.

Another amendment of concern is one which provides for compensation for the mayor and council members. Originally, Mayor Whitty had included a $3,000 a month compensation for the mayor and a $50 per meeting compensation for Council members. The amendment has been changed to read that the elected council members will decide on the compensation for the mayor.

MORE HONOR — Nubia Gomez was named to the All City squad in December and now has been selected to receive the Flo Hyman Award.

San Eli senior to receive prestigious Flo Hyman Award

By Phillip Cortez
Special to the Courier

SAN ELIZARIO — San Elizario High School senior Nubia Gomez has been selected to receive the Sixth Annual Flo Hyman Award based on her contribution and participation in academics, athletics, and leadership. The award is given to El Paso's most outstanding elementary, junior high, and high school female student-athlete.

According to Lisa Campos, Associate Athletics Director/Senior Woman Administrator at UTEP, the award recognizes female athletes who have made sports an important part of their success in life. The award is dedicated to Flo Hyman, an Olympic Volleyball player who passed away suddenly from a rare heart disease. Hyman was a leader on and off the volleyball court. She took an active role in promoting opportunities for women athletes. Hyman spent much of her time lobbying to gain passage for the Civil Rights Restoration Act, which restored protection against sex discrimination in high school and college athletic programs.

The national Flo Hyman Memorial Award is given by the Women's Sports Foundation in her honor each year on National Girls and Women in Sports Day. This national award is presented to an athlete who captures Flo Hyman's "dignity, spirit, and commitment to excellence." Past national award winners have included Martina Navratilova, Chris Evert, Jackie Joyner-Kersey, Evelyn Ashford, Diana Golden, Nancy Lopez, Lynette Woodard, Billie Jean King, Nadia Comaneci and Bonnie Blair.

Gomez took part in a week-long celebration, which included attending the Flo Hyman Reception on Monday, Feb. 14. She will receive her award from the UTEP Department of Intercollegiate Athletics and the El Paso Parks and Recreation.

Tuesday, Gomez was present at City Hall as El Paso Mayor Joe Wardy proclaimed the day as the "National Girls and Women in Sports Day."

Finally, on Thursday night, Gomez will be recognized along with the two other Flo Hyman recipients at the UTEP women's basketball game.

One perspective

Cell phone hangups

A friend has a bumper sticker on his car that reads: Hang up and drive.

Not a bad idea. What is astonishing to me is why that bumper sticker was ever printed in the first place. How on earth did so many of us become so important that we couldn't afford to be incommunicado for a trip to the store? It is an amazing fact that the world will actually keep right on turning without our input for hours — even days.

I'm not pointing fingers at anyone who wouldn't have a perfectly legitimate reason to point right back at me. You see, I have a cell phone, too.

I don't leave home without it. I make sure its little power source is appropriately recharged every night. I keep it warm and dry. If I lose it, I make sure I find it again right quick.

If I'm out of range of service — and some of the places I go, believe it or not, really are outside the reach of a cell phone communication tower — I have begun to get this uneasy little feeling in the back of my mind, a whispering that says if something happens I can't phone home.

It's a little hazy in my memory as to when I began developing this cell-phone dependence. I used to be one of those folks who sniggered when I'd see people with their cell phones glued to their heads, jabbering away in the check-out line, in the restaurant, and worst of all, in the car.

I used to have this wonderful sense of liberation when I left the house or office, knowing that no one could reach me — that for an all-to-brief space of time I was out of touch.

Then I got a cell phone. Rather it was given to me. You know, as part of a family plan the cell phone companies are so good at concocting so that everybody and the family dog are wired for communication. It's not about connectedness with your friends and family, of course, it's about money — training new customers from an early age to either buy or whine for the latest, greatest, most colorful, and, oddly, the smallest rather than the biggest model on the market.

At first I scowled and had an attitude about having to have one. I didn't want a leash, I said. I don't want to be where everybody can reach me all the time, I said. But I took the thing and stuffed it in my purse.

A cell phone is like a television. It has a persona of its own, endowed with the ability to form a relationship with you because it transmits the ideas, the presence, the influence of other human beings. So, of course, my phone didn't just stay quietly in my bag. It began to issue summons.

At first I didn't turn it on. It wasn't part of my routine so I didn't do it. Then people would ask me why I hadn't turned it on, how come they couldn't contact me now that I had a cell phone. So I started turning it on. It was all down hill from there.

Like all modern inventions — computers, televisions, CD players, cars, etc. — the cell phone is simply a tool. Of itself, it isn't a bad thing. But it has the potential to be used equally for good or evil. It has come in real handy when my car broke down and I needed to call for help. It has helped out when I forgot the grocery list and found myself in the store with a blank slate. It has simplified my schedule when I needed to pick up a kid who didn't know exactly when the school trip would end. It is also frequently a contributing factor in those terrifying moments when we find that the car next to us is sharing the same lane, or we sit with our teeth on edge listening to someone we're with talk to someone else who isn't even there.

I'm not sure why it seems so inconsiderate to have interaction between people interrupted by a cell phone, except I feel like if you are with someone, you should be with them. Shut the thing off — we need to learn how to put the rest of the world on hold.

I watched a young family in a store last weekend strolling around, spending a little quality time together. The only problem was that both the man and woman were talking on their cell phones, and I can virtually guarantee it wasn't to each other. Their little kids were tagging along behind, probably yearning for the day they can have their own phones so they can talk to somebody interesting, too. And you can be equally sure it won't be mom or dad.

I hope they hurry up and pass a law against using the cell phone in the car so I can't — right now it is so easy, so convenient, so not against the law, to slip in that quick call without pulling over. I tip my hat in admiration to folks who do. Now that my kids are older, I make them do the calling if I'm driving.

For now, we co-exist, me and my cell phone, that ticking little time bomb that can at any given moment erupt into a raucous electronic melody summoning me to attention — or lie patiently at the ready in case I need to use it.

As advanced as the features on these electronic gadgets are becoming, maybe someday I can simply look over at it and say: Hang up and drive.

Reyes Reports By U.S. Rep. Silvestre Reyes

Funding of border programs should be reconsidered

The Bush Administration recently released its $2.5 trillion fiscal year 2006 budget, which unfortunately cuts funding for key border, veterans, health care, and education initiatives. This week, let's take a look at how federal programs that promote safety and security along the border fared in this year's budget proposal:

- State Criminal Alien Assistance Program (SCAAP)
- Southwest Border Prosecutor Initiative

In a budget that emphasizes homeland security and defense programs, zeroing out funding for the SCAAP program is unfair to El Paso and other border communities. El Paso is on the frontlines of our nation's defense, yet the proposed budget leaves paying for the incarceration of criminal aliens up to our already over-burdened taxpayers. This is the fourth year in a row the SCAAP program has been cut. As always, I will lead the fight in Congress to re-instate the program. We have successfully kept SCAAP alive, although it suffers from continual shortfalls. Even before the Administration released this budget, I supported legislation to fund SCAAP at $750 million next year.

The Southwest Border Prosecutor Initiative was also eliminated, which helps relieve El Paso and other border communities of the burden of financing federal drug prosecutions. President Bush recognizes the importance of this initiative — he has funded it for the past four years and was even the first administration to ever allocate federal money to the program. As a former federal law enforcement officer in El Paso, I know the high volume of drug-related cases tried in El Paso's court system and that these cases are complicated and dangerous. This program was created in El Paso and needs and deserves continued federal support.

- Border Patrol

The President and his Administration continue to severely underestimate the needs of America's first line of defense — the U.S. Border Patrol. At a time when we're being told that the nation continues to be at risk, the President's budget provides for the hiring of only 210 Border Patrol agents, which is barely two percent of what was proposed in last year's intelligence reform bill.

- High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area (HIDTA)

Elimination of funding for the HIDTA program would be another huge mistake. The West Texas Region of the Southwest Border HIDTA alone must try to dismantle drug trafficking organizations over a stretch of 490 miles of international border, including five of the busiest ports of entry we have nationwide. A loss of over $7 million annually in West Texas to do this job would be devastating.

Not only does El Paso rely on these important programs, but they are important to the safety and security of the country as a whole.

Write stuff

Dear Editor,

When the council of the City of Socorro tries to cross the minds of the people by saying that a Master Plan needs to be done, makes you wonder. When a plan was conducted a year and a half ago then something not positive was in the works. It costs the taxpayers a portion of $63,000 to conduct a plan with the help of UTEP students and a state grant of $40,000 to complete the survey. Why would the City Council and mayor want to spend more thousands of dollars and why at this time? The only thing that this mayor and council would gain by doing this is the change of zoning at certain areas to benefit certain individuals. With a Comprehensive Plan there can be changes as the growth comes in. With a Master Plan, it is final. By doing this Master Plan it would say that the previous administrations were not doing a good job or did not know what they were doing. Everything was a waste. The areas that are residential should not be re-zoned. One specific area that needs to be left out of this plan is the Mission Trail.

Eduardo Flores
Socorro

Dear Editor,

How can the constituents of a poorly represented city deal with a council that has made a choice to maliciously misrepresent the citizens of Socorro. Time after time the people of Socorro have desperately tried to have faith in candidates who run for office. Unfortunately, it is the wrong people that are elected with the exception of one member each term. The council of the City of Socorro, once again, has proven itself to be dishonored. I am afraid that it will not be long before this city will be in a situation that it will not be able to recover from. When a person runs for election, it is his/her integrity that will determine if they will be good representatives. It is very sad when an elected official loses integrity. That is exactly what happens in the City of Socorro, term after term.

There have been times when the city has had professional, ethical, responsible persons that could be utilized to help the city evolve into a good, potential city for everyone, and not just a few. However, these persons are quickly terminated. A factual example is the removal of the city attorney to bring back a former individual who had already had the opportunity for the position and did not do a good job. How could anyone even consider doing something like this?

Remembering an American patriot

This weekend we will mark the birthday of “The Father of our Nation:” George Washington. President Washington is still hailed today as one of America’s greatest leaders. This holiday pays great tribute to a great American patriot.

George Washington was born on Feb. 22, 1732 to a Virginia farming family. His upbringing focused on learning the morals, manners, and body of knowledge requisite for an 8th century Virginia gentleman. He pursued two intertwined interests: military arts and western expansion. Many of his early lessons followed him through his years of service and leadership.

Washington demonstrated his tremendous leadership qualities long before becoming the first president of the United States. During our nation’s Revolutionary War, Washington proved himself to be a great general as he led our troops in the war for independence from Britain. As Commander-in-Chief of the Army, Washington defeated the British, and America soon became it’s own free nation.

Shortly after the war, he became the first president of the United States of America. There were several men that could have been chosen for this esteemed position. Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin and John Adams were all involved in the political landscape of our nation. But it was George Washington who was unanimously chosen by his contemporaries to serve as our first president. This is a true measure of greatness. These men looked first to Washington, knowing his leadership skills and his potential to make our nation great.

Washington served as president from 1789 to 1796. In eight short years, Washington helped to establish our nation’s Constitution and defined the president’s role in the new country. It is George Washington we have to thank for the notion of creating our nation as a democracy. He had the foresight to step down after his second term, hoping to bring America one step further from the monarchy rule of Britain. This was an instrumental move, which taught our nation the importance of elections and democracy. In a letter to James Madison, Washington wrote, “As the first of everything, in our situation will serve to establish a Precedent. It is devoutly wished on my part, that these precedents be fixed on true principles.” The model and examples that George Washington established are still respected today. Put simply: he created the foundation upon which America was built.

Citizens of our new nation began celebrating George Washington’s birthday long before his death. The first public celebration of Washington’s birthday was held in 1781 during the American Revolution. Americans were eager to pay respect to the leader who encouraged a strong democracy as the foundation of their new nation. Troops marched through the streets and the day was made an official holiday. Very few men in history have received this type of honor during their lifetime.

Let’s take this time to honor the leadership that created America. Washington’s birthday is commonly celebrated today as President’s Day. This is a day designated to honor the contributions of the many great presidents who have shaped this great nation. Please use this holiday as more than a chance to shop for “President’s Day Sales” events, and teach your children about the first American patriot, the father of our country, President George Washington.

SAN ELIZARIO — Construction will soon be moving forward on two fronts in San Elizario.

The first is the addition to the San Elizario High School library. Bids for construction of the new 11,000-square-foot facility were approved at the Feb. 9 meeting of the San Elizario ISD board of trustees.

Preparatory work is also under way on the grading, paving and signage of approximately a mile and a half along FM 1110, construction that will require two road closures.

Groundbreaking is scheduled for March 2 on the library addition, according to Superintendent Dr. Mike Quatrini. The new structure will be a separate building whose design complements the present high school complex. It will have classroom and administrative space as well as computers. It will be connected to the main library by a covered breezeway.

It incorporates features of UT El Paso's Undergraduate Learning Center and will be more than twice the size of the present library.

"It will be a very, very nice addition to the community as well as high school," said Quatrini who added that it will be available to community members after school hours. The superintendent pointed out that the number of books would qualify the libraries for exemplary status.

Construction of the library addition is expected to be completed in August.

Robert Longoria, SEISD's assistant superintendent for support services, updated the board on the road work. He first reported on the projects and their impact on the district at last October's meeting.

According to a statement from the Texas Department of Transportation road construction will take place on FM 1110 from Chicken Ranch Rd. to Camino Barrial and will commence on Monday, Feb. 21.

On Monday, February 24, construction will head south on FM 1110 from Chicken Ranch Rd. to FM 258 (Socorro Rd.). The project is expected to last approximately six weeks, Monday through Saturday.

Students in San Elizario riding buses in the area will be picked up at their regular time by their regular bus. Buses will take an alternate route on Chicken Ranch to and from school.

For more bus information, contact Barbara Orozco, principal at Alarcon Elementary at 872-3930.

Resource Center

SOCORRO — The Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE), a partnership program of the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA), the One Stop Business Resource Center of The Greater El Paso Chamber of Commerce and the City of Socorro have announced the grand opening and ribbon cutting ceremony of the Socorro Business Resource Center on Friday, Feb. 18 at 11:30 a.m. at the Rio Vista Center at 860 Rio Vista Road.

The Socorro Business Resource Center is a satellite office of the One Stop Business Resource Center and will provide both counseling and training in English and Spanish. The business center will support business and economic development in the Mission Valley and was initiated by the Mission Valley Business Alliance, Sen. Eliot Shapleigh, SCORE and the City of Socorro.

Chuck Wehmhoner, El Paso SCORE Chair worked with the national SCORE office in Washington, D.C. to obtain funds to open the office. An allotment of $5000 from SCORE allowed for the purchase of office furniture, a computer system, and small business educational materials in both English and Spanish. "We will open the office one day a week and as demand for counseling increases we will expand our services," said Wehmhoner.

Sen. Shapleigh, Socorro Mayor Willie Gandara and Council, the Mission Valley Business Alliance, SCORE, The Greater El Paso Chamber of Commerce, and SBA representatives are expected to attend.

“These competitions are held to promote mutual understanding and cooperation among business and educational institutions, and they help prepare students for a useful occupation,” said Guzman. “Students are taught to work efficiently, be responsible and to think clearly to help make the world a better place for everyone,” she added.

Eleven area schools participated in the annual area conference including Franklin, Del Valle, Socorro, Parkland, Burges, Eastwood, Ysleta, Cordova, Irvin, Hanks and Canutillo

Body of steroid-use evidence getting as large as the players

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

There was a time in American where the term “naming names” had to do with the McCarthy hearings on communism back in the 50s.

Well, the term “naming names” is back in the news, and the intent is just as un-American and damaging as it was back then.

Now the term has to do with the ranting of a bitter, washed up baseball player who has nothing better to do than to rat out his former friends and colleagues.

The saddest thing of all is that although the acts of Jose Canseco may be crude and unusually hurtful, it doesn’t mean they are without merit.

Canseco’s new book “Juiced” made its long-awaited appearance on the store shelves this week and just like the infamous Sen. Joseph McCarthy, his only purpose is to see people’s reputations wither away like his own career.

In his book, Canseco, who has a reputation of having about as much cork lodged in his brain as Sammy Sosa has in his bat, names several baseball players that he claims he has first-hand knowledge they took steroids.

Among the athletes Canseco names are some of the most beloved in the game like Mark McGwire, Pudge Rodriguez and Rafael Palmeiro. He also named former MVPs Juan Gonzalez and Jason Giambi.

We’re talking about some of the best players of the modern era.

Canseco even admitted during his “60 Minutes” interview with Mike Wallace last week that there was no way he could have played professional baseball if he hadn’t taken steroids.

Remember the Oakland A’s of the late 1980s and early 1990s resembled more a football team than a baseball squad — it’s all beginning to make sense now.

But the “naming names” bug didn’t get squashed by Canseco.

If all this isn’t worrisome enough, another person has come out of the woodwork to implicate Barry Bonds, and we’re talking more than just steroids use here.

Kimberly Bell made an appearance on Geraldo’s show last week and proclaimed that she had a 9-year affair with the married Bonds, when she claims he admitted to her that he knowingly took steroids.

Bonds, of course, has pleaded stupidity saying over and over again that he did take steroids, but didn’t know it was steroids.

I guess that’s the same as a teenager having a nice, cool drink of vodka and later claiming that he never knew it was vodka.

It happens all the time.

Bell claims that Bonds told her that he began using steroids back in 1999. She said that Barry claimed all the players in the league were doing it.

Bell, who is also promoting a book, added that Bonds told her he was worried that the steroids would begin to change his appearance, ranging from acne to bloating.

Have you noticed Bonds lately? If the man were in a western movie he’d wear a 14-gallon hat.

So the bigger question now is what does this mean for professional baseball?

If all the accusations are found to be true, and I think the evidence is beginning to swell, what do we do with all the home run records of the last seven years?

Major League Baseball suffered through a very difficult time after the strike season of 1994 but came back in a big way thanks to Cal Ripkin Jr.’s streak and then the 1998 home run derby that McGwire and Sammy Sosa put on.

I guess looks can be deceiving.

McGwire and Sosa — they will always be linked together for their home run duel and stomach-punching celebrations. Too bad they’re now known more for steroids and cork.

By the way, my 11-year old son began to take notice of the game of baseball in 1998. His two favorite players were Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa. Because of that magical season, many young boys claimed the two as their favorites.

My son had to learn a hard lesson in life when I told him that McGwire had taken steroids. He looked at me with very simple eyes and said, “but that’s cheating, dad.”

How do you go about explaining that one to a young boy?

NOTICE OF PETITION TO RECONCILE FUEL COSTS

El Paso Electric Company (“EPE”) petitioned the Public Utility Commission of Texas (“Commission”) on August 31, 2004 for authority to reconcile its eligible fuel expenses and revenues for the period of January 1, 2002 through February 29, 2004 (“Reconciliation Period”). In its petition, EPE has also requested to implement a fuel surcharge of its cumulative under-recovery of fuel expenses through the end of the Reconciliation Period. This petition, if granted, will affect all Texas retail customers who pay fixed fuel factors. This petition has no effect on EPE’s non-fuel base rates. EPE incurred a total of $264,144,513 in eligible fuel, fuel related, and purchased power expenses to generate and purchase electric energy for its Texas retail customers. At the conclusion of the Reconciliation Period, EPE had a cumulative under-recovery of such expenses of $8,632,150. EPE seeks to implement a surcharge of this amount, along with associated interest, over a 12-month period, effective with bills rendered during the first billing cycle of November 2004 through the October 2005 billing cycle. If the proposed 12-month surcharge is approved, a residential customer using 500 kWh per month will see an average increase of $0.65 in the monthly bill, 1.17% of the total electric bill during the surcharge on other customers’ bills will vary depending on the rate schedule under which the customers take service.

Persons with questions or who want more information on this Petition may contact El Paso Electric Company at 123 W. Mills, El Paso, Texas 79901, or call toll-free at 1-(800)-592-1634

(when instructed, press 7, then four-digit extension 5947 plus #) during normal business hours. A complete copy of this Petition is available for inspection at the address listed above. Persons who wish to formally participate in this proceeding, or who wish to express their comments concerning this Petition should contact the Public Utility Commission of Texas, Office of Customer Protection, P.O. Box 13326, Austin, Texas 78711-3326, or call 1-(512)-936-7120, or toll-free at 1-(888)-782-8477. Hearing and speech-impaired individuals with text telephones (TTY) may call 1-(512)-936-7136 or use Relay Texas (toll-free) at 1-(800)-735-2989. A deadline for intervention will be established for this proceeding. WTCC: 02/17/05

AVISO DE SOLICITUD DE CONCILIACIÓN DE TARIFAS

EL PASO ELECTRIC COMPANY (“EPE”) solicitó a la Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas

(“Comisión”) el 31 de Agosto del 2004 que se le otorgue la autoridad de conciliar gastos e ingresos elegibles de combustible desde el primero de enero del 2002 al 29 de febrero del 2004 (“Período de Conciliación”). En su solicitud, EPE también propone implementar un Sobreprecio de Combustible por el acumulado no recuperado en gastos por combustible hasta el fin del período de conciliación. Al otorgarse, esta solicitud afectará a todos los clientes de menudeo de Texas que actualmente pagan costos fijos por combustible. Esta solicitud no afectará las tarifas de EPE que no se basan en combustible. Durante el período de conciliación, EPE incurrió un total de $264,144,513 en combustible elegible, en otros gastos relacionados al combustible y en gastos por la compra de energía para la generación y compra de energía eléctrica para clientes de menudeo de Texas. Al concluir el período de conciliación, EPE tenía un acumulado de gastos sin recuperar de $8,632,150. EPE busca implementar un sobreprecio por esta cantidad y los intereses asociados durante un período de 12 meses, efectivo a partir de los recibos producidos durante el primer ciclo de facturación de noviembre del 2004 hasta el ciclo de facturación de octubre del 2005. Si el sobreprecio propuesto por 12 meses es aprobado, un cliente residencial con consumo mensual de 500 kWh tendrá un aumento promedio de $0.65 en su recibo mensual, 1.17% del recibo total de electricidad durante ese período de recuperación. El efecto del sobreprecio en los recibos de otros clientes variará dependiendo de la tarifa que les corresponde.

Las personas que tengan dudas o que requieran mas información sobre esta solicitud pueden comunicarse a El Paso Electric Company, 123 W. Mills, El Paso, Texas 79901, o pueden llamar gratis al 1-(800)-592-1634 (cuando le sea solicitado, presione el 7, después las hábiles extensiones de cuatro dígitos 5947, más el signo #) durante horas normales. Una copia completa de esta solicitud está a su disposición en la dirección arriba mencionada. Las personas que deseen participar formalmente en estos procedimientos o deseen expresar sus comentarios sobre esta solicitud deberán comunicarse a la Oficina de Protección al Consumidor (Office of Customer Protection) en la Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas, P.O. Box 13326, Austin, Texas 78711-3326, o llamar al 1-(512)-936-7120, o llamar gratis al 1-(888)-782-8477. Super babies could give Washington hope

By Don Flood

Last summer The Associated Press reported that somewhere in Germany there lived a 5-year-old “Super Baby,” with a genetic mutation that caused his muscles to grow twice the normal size.

Then last month, in Brazil, a woman gave birth to a baby boy weighing a whopping 16.7 pounds — a birth made even more unusual by the fact he is believed to be the first baby to sign with an agent while still in the delivery room.

Interesting stories, to be sure, but unrelated; only a journalist desperate for the attention that comes from needlessly causing panic would suggest these two boys are the beginning of a race of Super Babies that will soon rule the Earth. Sadly, I am that journalist.

It’s time to face facts. We humans will soon be replaced by genetic mutants the size of tyrannosaurus rex.

This will likely be the end of Western Civilization, though, on the plus side, it could result in some terrific football teams.

The Brazilian baby’s agent is already in talks with several NFL teams including, thankfully, the Washington Redskins, the team followed by all right-thinking Americans.

No word on the German Super Boy yet, though speculation that his mutant gene may allow him to fly like Superman has piqued the interest of basketball and football coaches alike.

Leading football strategists agree that a flying Super Boy, used either as a running (flying?) back or a receiver, would cause serious problems for most NFL defenses and — let’s be fair here — should be prohibited from even playing in the league, unless of course he were to play for Redskins, the team followed by all right-thinking Americans, but who, unfortunately, have not fielded a Super Bowl-caliber team since the days of King Arthur’s Round Table.

As the Redskins are the team of our nation’s leaders, their success has national and, indeed, international implications. Bluntly, we need Super Boy on our team — plus that kid from Brazil, though I realize it could be another two or three years before he’s playing at a professional level.

This becomes even more crucial when one considers that professional baseball will once again be rearing its ugly head in our nation’s capital.

Washington-area residents haven’t had to cope with the scourge of professional baseball since the Senators — long heralded as the all-time Loser Hall of Fame team — departed in 1972, an event that by all rights should have been celebrated with parades and fireworks.

(You may recall the old line: “Washington — first in war, first in peace and last in the American League.” It was no joke. Even with George Washington himself as cleanup hitter the Senators failed because, as he said in his second State of the Union Address, “Jefferson hit and ran like an old woman, resulting in countless double plays.”)

Now the threat of another losing team is staring Washington in the face.

Here’s a thought: how about Super Boy for the baseball team and the Brazilian Bruiser for the Redskins?

Washington, finally, could be first in war, peace — and in football and baseball.

Social Security Q&A

By Ray Vigil

Q: I'm getting Social Security disability benefits, and I've used up a few of my trial work months. Did the amount I can earn in a month without counting it as a trial work month change?

A: Yes, we've increased the monthly earnings amount that we use to decide if a month counts as part of the trial work period. In 2005, a person who gets disability benefits must earn $590 or more during a given month before that month counts as one of the nine trial work months. (For 2004, the amount was $580.)

Q: Recently, I began receiving a Social Security disability benefit. I also receive a disability benefit from a private disability insurance policy. Will the private policy affect my Social Security disability benefit?

A: No. Your eligibility for Social Security disability payments is not affected by any private insurance you may have. However, the amount of your benefit may be reduced if you get worker's compensation or certain other public disability payments.

Q: What happens to my monthly Supplemental Security Income (SSI) disability payment of $579 if I work?

A: If you receive SSI and work, earning more than $85 a month, your SSI payments will be reduced by $1 for every $2 you earn. The following example shows how we would recalculate your SSI payment: In January 2005, you earned $317; after deducting $85, you have countable earnings of $232. One half of this amount is counted against your benefits, which reduces your $579 SSI payment to $463.

Q: I'm disabled and want to work. But I don't want to risk losing my benefits. If I do try working, will there be a medical review?

A: Not anymore. Social Security encourages people who get disability benefits to work if they would like to do so. There are a number of work incentives in place to help you achieve your work goals. In the past, going to work was a reason for Social Security to conduct a continuing disability review of your medical condition. The Ticket to Work Program allows individuals receiving Social Security disability benefits to participate in the work force and at the same time suspend any review of your medical condition just because you are working.
