Grape stompers

El Paso County keeps racking up historical credentials. Historians say that Spanish missionaries planted the first grape vines in the fertile valley of El Paso back in 1629, in the area of Socorro, and that wine was made in this area long before California tapped into the nation's wine industry. And interest hasn't waned since. To prepare a new generation of aspiring winemakers, the Texas Cooperative Extension and NMSU Cooperative Extension Service are co-sponsoring a workshop Aug. 9-10 at Zin Valle Vineyards in Canutillo. Topics of interest for both veteran growers and beginners will be offered, from irrigation, harvesting and fertilization, including a workshop especially for homeowners. Space is limited and pre-registration is recommended by calling Daphne Richards at 859-7725, ext. 235, e-mail drichards@ag.tamu.edu; or John White, 505-525-6649, e-mail whjohn@nmsu.edu.

New agents

The first installment of the 300 Border Patrol agents dedicated to the El Paso area during this fiscal year by the Department of Homeland Security as the El Paso Sector has been designated as a "focus sector." About 14 new agents have completed their training at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Academy in Artesia, N.M. Of those, seven are set to deploy at Ft. Hancock and Fabens; seven will go to Deming and Lordsburg, New Mexico.

A little heat isn't slowing down the San Eli band this summer

By Phillip Cortez

SAN ELIZARIO — Talk about dedication. Members of the San Elizario High School band are finding out what real dedication is, as they endure two weeks of band camp that will assure that the final weeks before school begins is spent at the school — from 8 in the morning to 9 o'clock at night on some days.

With the bright sun pounding on their faces combined with triple digit heat, band students looked to be in mid-season form as they went over cadences, marched to drills, following every command from a host of student squad leaders. According to Sharon Hittle, band director at the school, this is the first time the band will be utilizing the strengths of student squad leaders, a move she hopes will help build ownership amongst the ranks.

"We have 12 squad leaders," she said. "They want to feel like they have ownership in this.

The more they put in, the more they'll feel like this is theirs."

The responsibility that the squad leaders carry will transcend beyond the band room or the bleachers or the field, Hittle said.

"They'll be keeping an eye on their squads,

But band camp is not all work. Perhaps just as important as the work the students put in is the fun they get to have together, including a

EAST EL PASO COUNTY — He made them smile, he made them laugh — and he made them think. Socorro Independent School District Superintendent Robert J. Durón was the keynote speaker for the Third Annual Mission of Excellence Conference.

With his proverbial lunchbox signifying the start of the new school year on the big screens at the Socorro High School Theatre, Dr. Durón addressed approximately 2,000 teachers, librarians and counselors. He congratulated them on student progress over the past year and pointed to various ways Socorro ISD as a whole has improved.

"Our finances are in great shape, we have no problem recruiting teachers, the curriculum and instruction continues to be tightly aligned, improving each and every day and our construction is on time and under budget," Durón says. I don't love your dog

Okay, I a different story. know people have blind spots. In some ways, that can be a good thing. It helps you get through the rough spots with your kids, your mate, your friends. You simply refuse to recognize their faults. That's good if their faults include minor infractions like leaving their underwear in the bathroom floor, forgetting your birthday, slurping their soup, chewing gum with their mouths open, and missing the bus occasionally. It's a really bad thing if their faults include domestic violence, illegal drug abuse and shoplifting. Sometimes people refuse to accept that the people they love are capable of destructive behavior. Or their dogs. Just like I won't look the other way if I see your teenager breaking into a car or shooting up with a needle in the alley behind a convenience store, I won't hesitate to call the law if your pit bull is loose on the street, especially if it is growling at a child. Because, you see, I don't love your dog. I don't understand the motivation for regular folks to acquire and keep dangerous dogs, but it becomes incomprehensible if they don't make provision to keep those dogs on their own property — and I'm talking about good and sure and absolute provision, not just kinda, sorta. The problem is, I think, that people have blind spots when it comes to how their dogs behave toward other people. Why, he's just a big, old softie. He wouldn't hurt a soul. Well, maybe not anyone at your house. At my house, in my backyard, in the street in front of my house, that's

It happens all the time. Big dogs of dangerous breeds get loose and, for whatever reason, get riled. The results are dire and irreversible — the injuries and scars don't evaporate in the glow of an owner's affection. The death of a child from dog attack is not something that is ever intended but it can't be changed once it happens. It is something that could have been prevented. I took a rashing from a reader not long ago because I mentioned that we kept our dog on a chain. What I hadn't included in the mentioning was exactly why that dog was on a chain. When our boxer was young, she had more energy than brains. She simply wouldn't stay in the yard. We tried various remedies to no avail. She either climbed, jumped, forced or dug her way out. Worse yet, she kept bringing home evidence that her excursions into the night had not been innocent romps. Dirty diapers, burrito wrappers and various leftover bones from some hapless neighbor's trash were strewn across the lawn. Now, I've found my own trash all over the street on more than one occasion, victim of someone else's wayfaring canine. I know how that feels. Besides, I wouldn't want to come face-to-face with our boxer loose on an empty street if she didn't know me. Something had to be done. We weren't going to get rid of her and she wasn't coming indoors. Being the primary cleaner-upper in our household, I'd long ago prescribed to the theory that since people are

Texas should use this opportunity to improve education, not just finance it

We've got every state lawmaker and the Governor in Austin right now in special session, working under a court order to fix school finance, and all they can talk about are tax swap schemes. I'm a homeowner, so I won't turn down a property tax cut, but as a dad with two boys in public school, I think Texans are missing an historic opportunity to focus on reforming what we teach in schools and not merely on how we pay for them. Texans don't need a pollster to tell them that education is the best economic development program ever created. Our state government needs to make a commitment that if parents do their part, then we'll do ours; we'll make sure that teachers have the freedom and the resources they need to teach our kids something more than how to take yet another standardized test. Increasingly, that's all we are doing in schools. The absurdity of "teaching to the test" is alarming, to say the least. Taking time out of science or music classes to brush up on an upcoming TAKS test has become commonplace in Texas. Rice University professor Dr. Linda McNeil found schools that hired test-prep consultants that taught kids how to pass reading comprehension tests — without even reading the passage. We've replaced a solid curriculum and real knowledge with how to best go about filling in little ovals with #2 pencils. Dr. McNeil calls this "Enron-style accountability" because, like the notorious energy company that used its stock price as the sole measuring stick, our state government judges our kids based on one single number — their TAKS score. Whether Johnny reads books doesn't matter; it's all about whether he passed the TAKS test. Using the TAKS test as the only measure of success is nothing less than one-size-fits-all education, and as a dad with two boys, I can tell you from experience that no two kids are alike. But the financial pressure on schools to get their students to pass the TAKS test is so great that administrators are treating some kids like Enron treated debt. Enron shipped its debt to dummy offshore corporations, but Dr. McNeil says that administrators are systematically holding back students with lesser chances of passing the test knowing good and well that many if not most of those students will drop out. The result is that the dropout rate is around 40 percent in this state — the worst in the country. It is time to stand up and say these are our children. We cannot stand idly by and watch almost half of each generation drop out of school. Enron-style accountability has corrupted the curriculum and increased the dropout rate, and it's left our kids needing more remedial help when they are fortunate enough to get to college. But the powers that be in Austin want you to believe that we are on the right track to solving our education problems. Don't be fooled. The so-called "Texas Miracle" is nothing more than a politically expedient mirage. We can no longer simply accept test-driven curriculums that are driving away our children in droves. We know how to improve

Sports: Just try them!

In today's modern world our lives are becoming busier and busier with every passing day. Adults and children alike have become less active as we face long hours in front of the computer. Our children are often entertained by video games, television shows and the Internet when they get home from school. As our schedules fill-up, exercise is often the first thing we eliminate from our busy lives.

Even heading to the gym sometimes seems tedious and time-consuming, especially when there's already so little time to spend with family and friends. So why not incorporate sports into your agenda. Sports make exercise enjoyable while enhancing friendships and providing quality family time. From swimming to playing a friendly game of flag football, there is a sport for every walk of life.

You'd be surprised at all the ways you can integrate sports into your life:

- Enjoy sports as a family

If you're headed to the park for a family picnic, consider bringing a frisbee or football for a friendly game. The time before dinner is easily spent watching TV, but why not take time-out to shoot hoops or play catch. Who knows what kind of sports your family will enjoy together, so try out new team sports like soccer, tennis, or volleyball.

Introduce sports to your children

It's much easier to develop good habits at a young age. It's also easier to establish good habits in our children by making these habits enjoyable. Find a sport your child enjoys and consider signing them up for a local sport league.

- Start a sports team at your office

The staff of my Washington, D.C. congressional office recently formed a softball team. "Team Bonilla" plays softball against other congressional offices every weekend. Although they may not win every game, they enjoy spending time together, being outdoors and getting a little exercise.

- Take personal initiative

There are dozens of sports you can play on your own. I enjoy visiting the driving range when I want to wind-down or think. Other great individual sports include jogging and walking, swimming and biking.

There is no better time than summer to start playing sports. Even a couple days a week can make all the difference in how you feel every day! I hope you'll take my advice and add a sport to your day — you'll be amazed at how good you feel!

Reyes Reports By U.S. Rep. Silvestre Reyes

OTMs and border security

During a meeting with the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) Secretary Michael Chertoff last week, I emphasized a critical immigration problem facing our country that — based on my experiences in the Border Patrol in the mid-1980s — has a practical and proven solution.

This year alone, more than 75,000 immigrants from countries other than Mexico — known as "Other than Mexicans" or OTMs — have illegally crossed the U.S.-Mexico border, with approximately 36,500 crossing in the Border Patrol's Rio Grande (formerly McAllen) sector. This is a 226 percent increase from the same time period in 2004.

Although they are initially detained by the U.S. Border Patrol, OTMs are released with merely a paper notice requiring them to return for a future hearing — a requirement that is largely ignored. This disjointed effort not only contributes to our failed immigration policy, it poses a danger to the safety and security of our country.

The Border Patrol's "catch and release" policy for OTMs is well known among undocumented immigrants. In fact, upon crossing the border illegally, OTMs actually approach Border Patrol agents for their hearing papers, which provides them with a de facto pass into the country. This crisis exists because Immigration and Customs Enforcement claims it lacks detention space to house these undocumented immigrants prior to their hearings.

As Chief of the Border Patrol's McAllen (now Rio Grande) sector in the mid-1980s, I encountered an almost identical situation and addressed it by developing a plan and strategy to protect the border with an around-the-clock presence of Border Patrol agents, known as the original "Operation Hold the Line," and by expanding the detention space for illegal immigrants in South Texas on a temporary basis.

As a result of these measures, a large

True Texas by Roger T. Moore, July 25, 1839: Doctor Ashbel Smith resigns as Surgeon General after "buggy whipping" Sen.S.H. Everett in the Senate Chamber.

I am calling for congressional hearings to address this problem and in our recent meeting, Secretary Chertoff also acknowledged the gravity of the situation and stated that DHS would act quickly to resolve it. In the post-September 11 world, allowing OTMs into the country without proper documentation is of critical concern to our national security. I look forward to continuing to work with Secretary Chertoff to ensure that we no longer put ourselves at risk in this manner.

Socorro ISD principals prove there ‘ain’t no mountain high enough’

By Carlos A. Briano
Special to the Courier

EAST EL PASO COUNTY — When educators decide to take the responsibility of becoming a principal, they know there will be obstacles to overcome. But literally climbing a mountain was probably not what they had in mind.

Six Socorro ISD principals, Adalberto Garcia of Loma Verde, Rubina Rodriguez of Myrtle Cooper, Irma Rodriguez of Vista Del Sol, Isabel Andresen of Benito Martinez, Carmen Moran of O’Shea Keleher and Esther Gonzalez of H.D. Hilley did just that on June 17.

The group scaled the highest point of the Franklin Mountains near the Wyler Aerial Tramway as part of the “The Rock Challenge.” The team-building exercise, designed by Dr. Marius Ruja of Alpha and Omega Wellness Center, was initially geared for local high school football teams. The players hike the difficult mountain trail while carrying a heavy rock. The goal is for each individual to reach the top as a team, helping one another along the way.

Anna Lisa Banegas Peña, Assistant Superintendent for Elementary Instruction, asked Dr. Ruja to adapt “The Rock Challenge” for elementary principals. She facilitated the exercise as part of their summer staff development.

“One of the ‘Core Values’ of the Socorro Independent School District is ‘we believe in the discipline and power of teamwork,’” Banegas Peña says. “This ‘Rock Challenge’ really helped us to pull together and help each other. For most of us, it was probably the hardest thing we have ever had to do. But it was very well worth it.”

Irma Rodriguez vividly remembers the difficulty of the exercise, since she took a fall coming down the mountain. Still, she would do it all again.

“All along the way we would stop and make connections to real life,” she says. “When any of the team members was short of breath, we would all put our hand on that person. That was our ceremony to help give that person the strength and support to go on.”

Dr. Ruja says principals often don’t know how to unwind after a difficult day at school.

“The rock they carried up the mountain symbolized the issues they deal with everyday,” he says. “But at the top they had to release those issues and come back down as a team. We want them to create a network, a cohesive type of environment where they will be more likely to communicate with one another to help one another.”

Isabel Andresen says the experience brought the team together in a new way.

“It brought me closer to people I hadn’t really interacted with before. And we’re all principals,” she says. “I think it did create a tighter relationship. We cheered for one another. And when the going got tough, we helped one another.”

ASBESTOS MANAGEMENT PLAN PROGRAM NOTICE

The Canutillo Independent School District, in compliance with government regulations requiring the development of a written plan for the management of Asbestos Containing Building materials (ACBM's) in schools, maintains on record, a management Plan for each campus and facility.

School Districts nationwide have expanded a great amount of effort and substantial number of dollars in identifying materials in our buildings which may contain even small amounts of asbestos. Many of these materials are the same materials we may have in our homes: some are located in areas not accessible to students or teachers; others are covered with protective covering which restrict direct access. The intent of the government requirements is to identify these materials and develop a written document dealing with the ways of managing them to ensure that they continue to be non-threatening.

A mandated 3-year reinspection was recently completed and was placed on record at the District's main office and at each school. The EPA requires that schools perform both visual and physical assessments of condition of asbestos containing materials in the schools in the form of a six-month periodic surveillance inspection and a three-year reinspection, respectively. Asbestos abatement activity is scheduled in the schools to facilitate planned renovation projects and maintenance work in schools where asbestos is present. All activities involving asbestos are recorded in the Management Plans and are available for review during normal business hours at either the school's administrative office or the Support Services Office, 7710 Cap Carter Rd. Muchos de estos materiales son los mismos materiales que tenemos en nuestros hogares; algunos se encuentran en áreas que no son accesibles a los estudiantes o maestros, otros están cubiertos con capas protectoras que no permiten el acceso directo. La intención de los reglamentos del gobierno es de identificar estos materiales y desarrollar un documento escrito que trate las maneras de controlarlos y así asegurar que no sean peligrosos.

Dear Editor:

The SYSA (Socorro Youth Sports Association) 14 and Under National All-Star Team would like to extend its sincere appreciation to those who gave donations to the team so that they could represent the City of Socorro at the San Angelo Qualifying Tournament this past weekend.

On Wednesday, July 13, the players hit the street at North Loop and Horizon with their helmets to collect money to pay for travel expenses. Thanks to all the motorist who gave what they could. From the 25-cent to $20 donations, it made a difference.

Thanks to our corporate sponsors for their generous donations. Also to the numerous individuals who made donations.

Although the boys came home early, beating Borger and losing to Lubbock and North Concho, it was an awesome experience for them and one they will never forget. Once again thanks to all those who supported the Socorro All-Stars.

Dear Editor:

The proposed Free Trade Areas of the Americas (FTAA), scheduled for Congressional debate in early 2005, is the framework for a socialist regional government modeled after the European Union (EU). The successor to NAFTA, the FTAA would entangle 34 Western Hemisphere nations in exactly the kind of sovereignty-destroying arrangement in which nations in the (EU) now find themselves. Instead of promoting "free trade" it would decimate our economy, and seriously undermine our middle class along with our national independence. Americans will no longer have to worry about illegal immigration because there will be no effective borders, instead we will have to deal with "mass migration." Middle class Americans will be devastated by the lowering of wages from a "flood" of unskilled workers to the burden of massive increases in spending on social services.

This proposal promoting "free trade" calls for government-controlled — even internationally controlled commerce. This pact has little to do with freedom when it contains hundreds — even thousands of pages of regulations. U.S. citizens will be bound by regional courts, not our own legal system. A regional currency much like the Eurodollar will be instituted and our currency will be phased out!

Help protect our Nations sovereignty and culture from this so-called "free trade agreement." We must demand that Congress stop the FTAA!

Dog

hard enough to clean up after, I don't need animals in the house. I can't make the kids stay out in the backyard but I can the pets.

Finally, we ran a long, strong wire across the yard and through a sturdy chain and collar. She had full range of most of the backyard with access to food, water and shelter but she couldn't jump out anymore.

Cruel? I don't think so. It was the only responsible thing to do.

I watched a cop show the other day in which this woman's pit bull and Rottweiler had been over in the yard of a neighbor at least six times, behaving in a more aggressive manner each time, according to witnesses. Asking her to control her dogs had proved futile so they finally called animal control. The pit bull backed off and ran home but the Rottweiler didn't. Restraining him was some kind of fearsome sight.

When the police told the woman that they had to take her dog away, she cried and fawned over the dog, now safely caged in the back of a paddy wagon.

What struck me was that, despite repeated complaints, she still had only a rickety net-wire fence around her yard that couldn't have restrained a sick kitten, let alone the burly dogs she was keeping. I wondered if she would have been equally touched if her neighbor's arm had been partially severed by her darling.

The excuses for Fido's bad behavior are also incredible — if their dog is handled appropriately by those with which they come into contact, they won't become aggressive. Well, I don't think that a person's ignorance of what to do when they run across a big, snarly dog is an offense that deserves having the flesh torn from their limbs.

You own it, you exercise control over it — that is the underlying sentiment of every ordinance ever enacted, because, unfortunately, some folks out there can't seem to understand that I just don't love their dog.

Schools

our schools. We need to put principals and teachers back in control of schools and classrooms, give them textbooks that aren't censored by cynical word police, the materials they need to teach, the technology needed for kids to learn — and then we might really witness a miracle.

Testing isn't the answer; it's just another way to ask the question. The folks running schools by remote control from Austin think they can use tests to make our kids smarter. Tests don't make our kids smarter any more than a ruler will make you taller, but politicians and the lobbyists for the testing companies either don't get it or hope you won't figure it out.

New immunization requirements take effect Sept. 1

By Emily Palmer
Special to the Courier

EL PASO COUNTY — A new law effective Sept. 1 requires that children attending child-care centers and enrolled in early childhood programs be vaccinated against invasive pneumococcal and hepatitis A diseases, according to the Texas Department of State Health Services (DSHS).

Pneumococcal disease is caused by a bacteria that often leads to middle ear infections, pneumonia, blood stream infections, sinus infections and meningitis. The vaccine is required for all children age two months through 59 months attending child-care facilities and pre-kindergarten programs.

Hepatitis A is a liver disease that is spread from person to person, often by putting objects in the mouth that have been contaminated with the stool of a person with hepatitis A. Children in child-care centers and pre-kindergarten programs who are two years old or older will need two doses of hepatitis A vaccine given six to 18 months apart.

To attend child-care facilities and pre-kindergarten programs, a child also must be immunized against diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis (whooping cough), polio, measles, mumps, rubella, hepatitis B, varicella (chicken pox) and Haemophilus influenzae type b (Hib) at the appropriate age. If children do not have at least the first dose of the required vaccines by Sept. 1, they may be excluded from child-care facilities and pre-kindergarten programs.

New this year for school children are expanded requirements for hepatitis B and varicella immunizations. Students in kindergarten through 11th grade must have received hepatitis B vaccine. Those in kindergarten through fifth and seventh through 11th grades must have received the varicella vaccine before the start of school.

"Parents should be sure their children are in compliance with all school-enrollment vaccination requirements prior to the start of school," said Monica Gamez of the DSHS Immunization Branch. State rules require that school students be vaccinated against nine illnesses: diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis, polio, measles, mumps, rubella, hepatitis B and varicella.

In addition, hepatitis A vaccine is required for students in kindergarten through third grade who attend school in a county with a high incidence rate. These counties include El Paso and Hudspeth.

Routine vaccination recommendations call for most of the vaccine doses required for school attendance to be given by age two with boosters between ages four and six. Catch-up schedules are available for students who did not receive the vaccines when younger.

Military dependents, homeless students and certain students transferring from other Texas schools will be granted temporary enrollment regardless of vaccination status. Some students are exempt from vaccination requirements for medical reasons or for reasons of conscience.

Specific vaccination requirements for school attendance are available from schools, physicians' offices and local public health departments. The information also is available online at www.ImmunizeTexas.com or by calling DSHS toll free at 1-800-252-9152.

Vaccination requirements apply to students in all public and private primary and secondary schools, those in registered child-care facilities and students enrolled in pre-kindergarten programs in Texas.

Proceeds will benefit El Paso's area libraries:

Football: Where the paycheck is mightier than the word

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

I know it’s only late July but there’s no hiding it — football season is just around the corner.

And the king of all football, of course, is played in the National Football League.

And the NFL has certainly been in the news lately. Well, two NFL players have really been in the news lately.

Both are star-quality players, both play for teams with rich traditions and both players make enough money they’ll never have to work again.

Oh, and both are about as selfish as they come.

I’m talking about Terrell Owens and Ricky Williams.

T.O., as he is now known, may have the most appropriate nickname in sports because, like my three-year-old niece, the man needs a time out.

You’ve all heard the story. Owens has a brilliant year with the Philadelphia Eagles and demands to be paid more money, though he is still under contract.

The man signs a seven-year deal worth $47-million and says he’s underpaid.

Let’s think about that for a second. He signs a contract — and as far as I know it wasn’t inked with a gun against his skull. He plays well and takes the Eagles exactly one game further than the team has managed each of the two years prior to his arrival.

And for that, he thinks he’s entitled to more.

A month ago Owens declared that he would not play a single down if he didn’t get more money. He stood with his chest out, a defiant look on his face, determined to squeeze the Eagles.

This week Owens, looking a little squished himself, decided to report to camp. He said he wasn’t stupid and wasn’t going to pay the hefty fines and lose those welfare checks the Eagles were going to pay him to play football.

It’s funny how the biggest talkers fold like a cheap suit once you call their bluff.

Here’s to you Philadelphia Eagles, for having the guts to stand up to a whiney little brat who cares for absolutely nothing but his own interests.

May other NFL teams follow your lead — teams other than the Miami Dolphins, anyway.

The Dolphins were humiliated by Ricky Williams last year, quitting just before the start of the season for — it’s still hard to believe — the chance to lay out on the beach and smoke more dope.

Now there’s a dedicated man. Williams left the team vowing never to return — liar!

And the Dolphins vowed never to have him back — liars!

Talk about a match made in heaven. Not since, ah, well, a month ago when Phil Jackson returned to the Lakers, have I encountered a more questionable reunion.

What happened to the party? I thought Williams had lost all his desire to play the game of football. Maybe he had a change of heart, maybe he matured in the last year, maybe it was the millions in signing bonus money he was going to have to return to the Dolphins.

And what about the Dolphins, or should I say Jellyfish? They said they were going to stand strong for all the guys who didn’t quit the team.

Terrell Owens and Ricky Williams, two very different characters who share the same profile — dumb punks with sports agents.

Heisman jinx

With college football just beyond the horizon it isn’t too early to start thinking about this year’s big winner.

USC’s Matt Leinart is the odds on favorite to win the thing again this year but I’m not so sure that would be a good idea.

I don’t know if it’s a coincidence but over the last 15 years or so, the Heisman Trophy winners have been, well, horrible NFL players.

Case in point, from 1976 to 1988 the Heisman winners included names like Tony Dorsett, Earl Campbell, Billy Sims, George Rogers, Marcus Allen, Herschel Walker, Doug Flutie, Bo Jackson, Vinny Testaverde, Tim Brown and Barry Sanders.

A lot of Hall of Famers in that group.

Since 1988 the list of winners include Andre Ware, Ty Detmer, Desmond Howard, Gino Torretta, Charlie Ward, Rashaam Salaam, Danny Wuerffel, Ron Dayne, Chris Weinke, and Eric Couch.

Now that’s a list only a mother could love.

Matt Leinart, listen to me, have a very good year — but not a great one.

collective strengths to enhance the tremendous work they have already accomplished,” said Porras-Grant.

The new JDE principal received her bachelor’s degree from the University of Texas at Permian Basin in Odessa, a master’s degree in Bilingual Education and Special Education, and her Principal’s Licensure from the University of Texas at El Paso. Porras-Grant is also a graduate from Canutillo High School, which gives her additional insight into the diversity of the students that attend the Canutillo schools.

Jose Damian Elementary School serves nearly 750 students and employs 52 teachers and 21 staff members.

water balloon fight that took place on the first day.

Stop by and watch the band practice and one gets the combination of seeing kids having fun while working hard. Trips to the bowling alley as well as going swimming are planned during the camp. It’s all an effort to create a bond — to become a group of students banded together to produce good music that will make San Elizario High School proud as well as the community.

And so far, the community has become a major force behind the band’s current success, Hittle said. A gordita fundraiser recently sponsored by the SEHS Band Booster Association was a huge success, Hittle said. Her take on the parental involvement thus far, especially from new parents following their kids from the Middle School could be summed up in one word.

“Wow!”

Strong community support will allow the students to concentrate on the new music they must learn, which will be downloadable for every member of the band on a program that even includes a virtual rendition of what their performance is supposed to look like. This year the group boasts new uniforms that feature three interchangeable designs as well as brand new marching horns and baritones. And judging by the excitement and the enthusiasm from band campers’ faces — they could be heard yelling above the library construction crew on the other side of the building — 2005-2006 is going to be a strong year for music in San Elizario.

the state. We’ve made those gains due to the hard work of our teachers.”

Joni Jordan, fourth grade teacher at Lujan-Chavez Elementary, was glad Durón pointed out the accomplishments of their work. “I appreciate that he sees our efforts,” she says. “We do work hard to help the children succeed. I appreciate that he notices that.”

On Thursday and Friday, July 21-22, educators attended various training sessions throughout the district in preparation for the start of the school year July 25.

“The goal of the Mission of Excellence Conference is to provide high quality, relevant professional development which meets the needs of our teachers,” says Dr. Debra Melton-Livingston, Executive Director of Curriculum and Instruction. “They, in turn, meet the academic needs of our students.”

Irma Mejia, a bilingual fourth grade teacher at Elfida P. Chavez Elementary, said the Mission of Excellence is worth the invested time. “It motivates us and sets the tone for the school year,” she says. “We all have the same vision and walk along with the same purpose.”

- $46,025 to the Housing Authority of Anthony

“The Housing Authorities of the El Paso region provide safety and shelter to residents at a time when they need it most,” said Reyes. “This federal funding will allow the Housing Authorities to improve and expand their services and I applaud HUD for recognizing this critical need in El Paso.” HUD awarded these grants through their fiscal year 2005 Capital Fund Program. Housing Authorities will use these funds for modernization, development, financing and management improvements.

■ El Paso Mayor John Cook will roll the first ball at 1 p.m. Saturday, July 30, when bowlers and donors team up to fight pet overpopulation at Fiesta Lanes, 5850 Onix in west El Paso, during the El Paso Paralegal Association’s Bowl-a-Thon. With games starting at 1 p.m. and 4:30 p.m., teams compete for donated prizes while raising funds for Pets Alive El Paso’s spay/neuter programs. To register or donate funds, call (915)

More than 25,000 dogs and cats were killed in El Paso animal shelters last year, most of these at El Paso Animal Regulation and Disease Control.

■ Marine Corps Cpl. Carlos R. Barraza Cabrera, son of Maria D. and Vicente Barraza of El Paso, County recently received a Letter of Appreciation while assigned to Marine Wing Support Squadron 172, Okinawa, Japan. Female driver rattles racers

By Don Flood

Maybe the next big Indy Racing League event should start like this: “Gentlemen, start your whining.”

Racer Robby Gordon recently complained about Danica Patrick, the female driver who finished fourth in this year’s Indianapolis 500. His beef: She weighs less, giving her car an advantage.

“I won’t race against her until the IRL does something to take that advantage away,” he declared.

Afterward, he slunk to his tree fort, the one with the big “No Girls Allowed!” sign in front.

Here’s one possible solution. You could have a Major League for women and some of the more competitive men, and a Minor League for men who are not quite up to the challenge.

But while Gordon’s comments seem a tad churlish, they were not the most peculiar remarks made about Miss Patrick.

That distinction belongs to Formula One boss Bernie Ecclestone. He said in an interview and then repeated to Patrick in a congratulatory phone call the following jaw-dropper:

“Women should be all dressed in white, like all other domestic appliances.”

Where to begin?

First, not to put too fine a point on it, but women, biologically speaking, are not appliances. An appliance is defined by the American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language as “a device or instrument designed to perform a specific function, especially an electrical device, such as a toaster, for household use.”

For her job, Patrick does perform a specific function — drive a race car — but most observers would agree her skills are beyond that of a toaster, blender or even a microwave oven.

Not that Robby Gordon would be caught dead racing a toaster either: “Are you kidding? That toaster only weighs 18 ounces! I’m not racing that toaster until the IRL addresses the weight issue!”

(A publicist later confirmed, however, that he would welcome challenges from heavier appliances such as washing machines. “Bring ‘em on!” is how the publicist put it.)

So, how to explain Ecclestone’s remarks? One possibility is that he is not a particularly discerning individual and so the subtle differences between women and, for example, vacuum cleaners have escaped him.

(Tip for Mr. Ecclestone and others: Generally speaking, appliances are plugged into electrical outlets, unlike women, who function without them.)

Another explanation is that the women in Ecclestone’s life are electrical devices.

Then there’s the issue of all women wearing white.

If Ecclestone were to explore why Danica is so popular, he might want to check out a magazine spread of her provocatively posed in front of a car wearing a red bikini. (She’s the one wearing the red bikini, Mr. Ecclestone, not the car.)

No, she’s not wearing white, but I have a feeling most race fans would forgive her transgression.

It’s also unlikely they would mistake her for a domestic appliance.

And since when are all domestic appliances white? But I digress too much, because I want to get to my final point, which is:

YOU BONEHEADS, SHE’S THE BEST THING TO HAPPEN TO YOUR STUPID SPORT SINCE THE AGE OF DINOSAURS!

Gentlemen, shut your mouths.

Social Security Q&A

By Ray Vigil

Q: My aunt receives Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and is, I think, beginning to show signs of Alzheimer's disease. I'm also worried that she's becoming unable to manage her benefit payments. Can anything be done to help her?

A: If a person is unable to manage his or her own funds, we can arrange to send the SSI payments to a "representative payee." This can be a relative or someone else who agrees to manage and use the money for the well-being of the person getting benefits. For more information, see the publication, A Guide For Representative Payees. You can get a copy by visiting our website.

Q: Last month my husband and I got a letter and an application from Social Security about some extra help that might be available for the new Medicare prescription drug plan. But I think we might have thrown it away by mistake. Can we get another application?

A: Yes. Social Security wants everyone who might be eligible for the extra help with their Medicare prescription drug costs to apply. You can complete the Application online or call the local social security office for a replacement application. Please do not photocopy applications.

Q: My parents are retired, on Medicare, and rely almost totally on their Social Security checks to get by. They have been using their savings to help pay for their prescription drug costs. I have read about the new Medicare prescription drug plan, and about extra help that will be available to help pay monthly premiums, annual deductibles and prescription co-payments. Can my parents qualify?

A: In order to qualify for the extra help that is available under the Medicare prescription drug coverage, individuals and couples have to meet certain income and resource limits. Generally speaking, married couples living together can have $19,245 in combined annual income. In addition, their bank accounts, investments, cash and other countable resources must be less than $20,000. This limit can be slightly higher (an additional $1,500 per person) if they will be using some of their money for burial expenses. If you have questions about what is and is not counted as income or a resource, visit our website. After applying for extra help, beneficiaries also will need to enroll in a Medicare-approved prescription drug plan between November 15, 2005 and May 15, 2006.

For more information visit your local Security office, see www.ssa.gov or call us at 1-800-772-1213. If you have any questions that you would like to have answered, please mail them to the Social Security Office, 1111 Gateway West, Attn: Ray Vigil, El Paso, Texas 79935.
