San Eli graduate finds the path to success

By Phillip Cortez
Special to the Courier

SAN ELIZARIO — Private Oscar Carranza knows exactly what these students are going through. Clean-shaven and decked out in his Army uniform, Carranza quietly sits in the back of the Mathilda Mirabal's Health Occupations Students of America (HOSA) classroom at San Elizario High School and quietly mouths the answers to her questions.

"What are the three C's to remember when providing care?" Mirabal asks her class of first year students.

Although he won't say it, Carranza is now worlds removed from this setting where he was a HOSA student at San Elizario and mere months removed from his high school graduation this past May. But in the short period of time since then, Carranza has gone from a life of uncertainty to a life filled with endless possibilities thanks to Mirabal and the HOSA program.

"I didn't apply to college my senior year because I thought there was just no way I was going to be able to go," Carranza says. "I just didn't think we were going to be able to make it happen with the money we had."

Born near Mexico City, Carranza and his family would arrive in the United States when he was only nine and began attending San Elizario schools. While all his friends were applying to college and anticipating graduation, Carranza did the next best thing that would ensure him of finding new horizons. He enlisted in the Army.

While his friends hit the books, Carranza hit the barracks at boot camp in Ft. Benning, Georgia, where instructors quickly realized that the Army would benefit from Carranza's HOSA training rather than stick him with an infantry unit.

"(Basic training) was tough," Carranza said. "The second week there, two guys died of dehydration."

After basic, Carranza returned home to Texas, where he was able to hone the HOSA skills he had learned as a high school student by undergoing his Advanced Individual Training at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio. His day consisted of a healthy dose of school in the mornings and work in the afternoon. But even though Carranza considered this training mostly remedial, nothing could have prepared him for seeing some of the injured soldiers returning from Iraq.

"Some of them couldn't even talk," he said. "It was scary knowing that I could be in the same bed one day."

Because Carranza scored so high during his advanced training in San Antonio — he was ranked second in his class — going to Iraq or facing wartime conditions will be highly unlikely. Instead, Carranza will be headed to Frankfurt, Germany, where he will be a surgical nurse in the mornings and continue his education in the afternoons.

"It's a little bit scary, but I'm excited because I'll be going to school and seeing places I've never been to," he said. "And everything I learned in the Army was just a refresher to what I first learned in San Elizario."

City of Socorro appoints two city managers in four days

By Arleen Beard
Special to the Courier

SOCORRO — City of Socorro Council fired, hired, fired and hired city managers in a chain of events that affected three employees in only four days.

When Socorro passed a City Charter in 2002 requiring that the city hire a city manager, Reyes Fierro was selected to serve on an interim basis — which stretched to almost two years.

In November of 2004 Fierro was replaced by a second interim manager, Lilia Ruiz, who was finally given the official position early in 2005.

However, citing personal reasons, Ruiz recently submitted her letter of resignation to the Socorro council to be effective Oct. 19, though she attended the Oct. 20 city council meeting in an official capacity at the request of Mayor Willie Gandara, Jr. During the meeting, however, a council majority voted to accept her resignation effective immediately, at which point Ruiz vacated her chair and joined the public in the audience.

Then City Rep. Trini Lopez nominated George Carrillo, a former candidate for a seat on the Socorro council, to accept the position as Interim City Manager. Council approved the nomination, and Carrillo, who was in the audience, was invited by council members to take the seat Ruiz had vacated minutes before.

In a series of quick events, however, challenges were made as to Carrillo's qualifications to function as city manager, and Mayor Gandara scheduled a special meeting on Oct. 24 to consider the matter and accept alternate applications.

The outcome of the special meeting was that Carrillo was removed from his freshly appointed post and replaced by Carol Garcia, who has served the City of Socorro for about 15 years, most recently as City Municipal Court Clerk. She holds a degree in business management and is certified in the field of human resources, city sources said.

Meanwhile, during the Oct. 20 meeting, a switch was made in the position of mayor pro-tem. Luis Varela had held that position until his resignation from council earlier this year, at which time City Rep. Jesse Gandara was appointed to the pro-tem position. Without citing reasons for the change, a council majority voted to remove Jesse Gandara as mayor pro-tem and instead appointed Trini Lopez to that position.

Hearing Carranza speak and watching proudly, Mirabal marvels at his transition from a young man with limited goals only a few months ago to a confident and proud soldier bettering his life by continuing in the field she is so passionate about.

"Sometimes you don't think you make a difference but when one kid comes back, it's really satisfying," Mirabal said.

Added Carranza, "I feel like I'm somebody now. People treat me with respect and I'm happy I know I made the right decision."

Tornillo ISD receives huge E-rate award, puts district on tech map

By Rudy Barreda
Special to the Courier

TORNILLO — On Oct. 17, Tornillo Independent School District was awarded over half a million dollars to upgrade the district's networking, computer, and phone equipment. According to Paul Vranish, district superintendent, the E-rate award granted to Tornillo ISD this cycle was the largest of all awards granted to Region XIX area school districts, and the fourth largest award granted in the nation.

E-rate, otherwise known as the Schools and Libraries Universal Service Support Mechanism, provides discounts to assist schools and libraries in the United States to obtain affordable telecommunications and Internet access.

The award will fund four district projects. The first is upgrading the district's existing computer network. The project includes cabling, Internet upgrades, and fiber optic wiring among the district's four campuses. This project received the biggest amount of the award, over $533,000. The second project involves the purchase of a new server to upgrade the district's phone system, at a cost of almost $9,500.

Last May, the community approved a bond that will enable the district to build a new campus. Fiber optic cabling for this future campus is the third project funded by the award. Over $10,000 has been allotted to this project. Finally, approximately $4,500 was awarded for district software licensing costs, the fourth and final E-rate project.

The Tornillo ISD Technology Department is very excited about the upcoming projects, which are expected to begin later this year. "This will put Tornillo on the map as far as network technology goes," said Armando Gonzalez, the district's network administrator. District web designer Carlos Garcia and computer technician David Witter are also quite pleased with the grant award.

Despite the major renovations and long term projects currently in place, the department is eager to take on the new challenges and is confident that many other great things are to be expected in the near future that will help Tornillo ISD remain the technology leader in the Region XIX area, Vranish said.

One perspective

By Francis Shrum

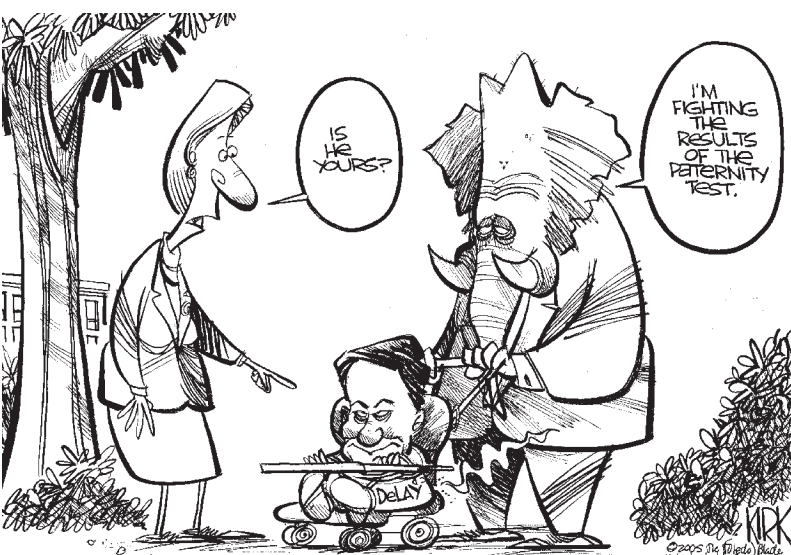

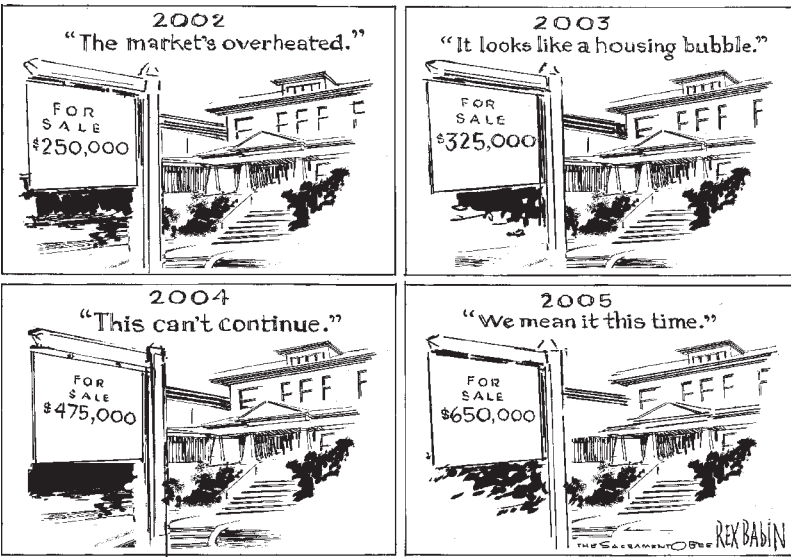

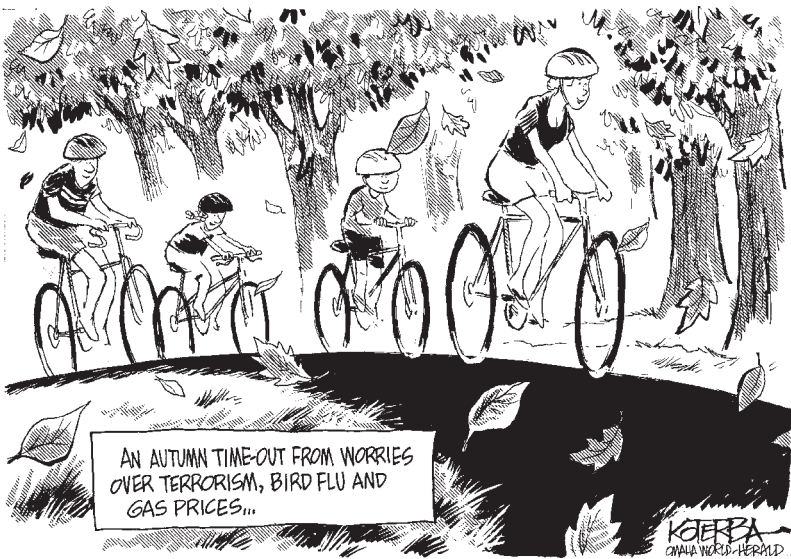

Comfort insured

There's nothing like misfortune striking in your general vicinity to make you sit up and take notice of just how vulnerable you are. Like a neighbor's house catching fire. House fires are devastating events and unless you live through one, it's hard to describe just how vulnerable and lost you feel. My grandmother's house burned when I was a kid. I'd spent a lot of time there with her. I remember standing in her front yard staring at a pile of black rubble where her little house had been. Lying twisted and ravaged were dishes, keepsakes, bed frames, table legs, appliances and other possessions rendered useless and barely recognizable. Her stuff was all gone, and she had to start over. Some folks in Louisiana recently lost their homes to flood and water damage, and some houses ironically caught fire while surrounded by a sea of putrid water. The lucky ones took their most important things with them when they fled before the storm. Still, coming home to find the familiar objects that have populated your existence are no longer there or are rendered useless opens a chasm of uncertainty unfelt by those of us who, when we move, do so at comparable leisure. Ordinary moves may not be pleasant but at least we have the luxury of deciding between what we want to keep and what will be disposed of. When flames — or water — rip through your residence, it takes away your freedom of choice with a fierce and uncaring force. It's even worse than having a break-in. I've had my home burglarized and even if your valuable possessions are no longer there, at least they weren't wasted in wanton destruction. Maybe somebody, somewhere will get some use out of them. Practically everybody who owns a home has insurance nowadays but, unfortunately, we find out too late that the policy probably has more loopholes in it than a block of Swiss cheese. When we send in our check every year for a policy that proudly states that our home and possessions are protected for so many thousands of dollars worth, we may not realize that the insurance company doesn't automatically cut a check for that amount if our home is destroyed. No, indeed. Quite to the contrary, it suddenly become a question as to whether the insurance company will pay a penny for any item it cannot be proved was actually owned and destroyed with the house. In other words, the comforting figure shown on the insurance policy should be preceded with the words "up to..."

It's a good idea to make sure your policy indicates that it will pay "replacement" costs for your possessions rather than simply reimbursing you for what you paid for them. This can be especially important if your living room sofa has seen its better days — you sure won't be able to purchase a comparable product for the same price you paid five years ago. Some companies even require actual receipts for the items they will cover, which can be a real problem if all your receipts went up in smoke with the furniture. Some folks videotape their home as proof of what they have, but I guess the insurance companies figure that in our scam-riddled society it is likely that the expensive jewelry shown draped over the velvet box on the dresser may have just been borrowed over the weekend from your Aunt Aggie. There is no way to actually document everything in your home, though, that made it yours. There is no price that can be assessed for the pictures, diaries, letters or baby shoes that were made absolutely unique by the hands — or feet — of someone you love. If you want replacement value for an antique quilt hand-stitched by your grandmother, you'd better figure out some way to document its value in cold, hard cash. That's all the insurance company understands — even if the adjuster who surveys your damaged property had a grandmother, too. Recent misfortune suffered by some good neighbors got me started sifting through our own coverage, a virtual maze of we-dos and we-don'ts, we-wills and we-won'ts. Time limitations and deadlines. Causes and effects of causes, etc. Somebody stayed up nights working all this out. Included in the policy packet were several pages of documents labeled "endorsements" and "amendments." I guess these were added after the policy-writers finally got some sleep. Some were a little amusing, though. Under cancellation conditions we were assured that our insurance company "may not cancel this policy solely because you are an elected official." I feel better already.

Jose H. Damian Elementary earns Recognized rating, named to honor roll

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

UPPER VALLEY — Canutillo Independent School District officials received notice recently that the Texas Education Agency (TEA) granted the school district’s appeal and has changed the 2005 accountability rating for Jose H. Damian Elementary School from “Academically Acceptable” to “Recognized.” Canutillo ISD was also notified that Damian Elementary has been named to the Texas Business and Education Coalition (TBEC)/Just For The Kids (JFTK) Honor Roll for the fourth year in a row. “The two notices are certainly welcome news for Damian Elementary and Canutillo School District. We are very proud of Damian’s faculty, staff, and students; they are outstanding,” said Charles Hart, CISD superintendent.

TEA changed the rating to Recognized based on the supporting documentation provided by the district and a review of the performance-based monitoring indicators pertaining to special education’s State-Developed Alternative Assessment II (SDAA II) results, according to a TEA correspondence sent to the CISD superintendent. The naming of Damian Elementary to the JFTK Honor Roll for the fourth year in a row places the Upper Valley school among the top 83 elementary schools in Texas. This recognition is the most prestigious award for sustained academic excellence in the state, according to TBEC officials. “Damian earned this recognition through hard work and student achievement because there is no application process for this award,” said Margarita Grant, Damian ES principal. The 83 elementary schools have been invited to send delegates to a “Share the Success” seminar and awards presentation, which is scheduled for Dec. 6 in Austin.

Anthony Middle School appeals ruling, now rated Academically Acceptable

By John R. Carrillo
Special to the Courier

UPPER VALLEY — Anthony Middle School has received official notification that it is currently rated “Academically Acceptable.” Earlier, the Texas Education Agency (TEA) had ranked the campus as being “Academically Unacceptable” based on 2005 State-Developed Alternative Assessment II (SDAA II) scores. In a letter dated Oct. 17 from the Texas Education Agency (TEA), Commissioner Shirley J. Neeley granted the school’s appeal of the Unacceptable rating. The Academically Acceptable rating was granted on the basis that admission, review, and dismissal (ARD) expectations of special education students were difficult to accurately determine in the first year of the SDAA II assessment. Therefore, the 2005 SDAA II results do not fairly reflect the academic performance of the campus. Anthony Middle School will continue to take a proactive approach to better prepare these students for the rigors of high school and the real world by challenging its special education students to test at grade level. Now all schools within the Anthony Independent School District are now considered to be Academically Acceptable.

Eye on D.C. By U.S. Rep. Henry Bonilla

National Diabetes Month

Every November this column announces National Diabetes Month. The goal is to increase awareness of this killer, as well as update you on recent developments. Blindness, heart attack, stroke, kidney failure and amputations can all result from diabetes, which impairs, or even halts, your body’s ability to process food sugar into energy. You may already know this because a friend or family member suffers from this terrible disease. Maybe even you have it. In fact, perhaps the scariest thing is that of the 850,000 Texans who have diabetes, half of them may not even know it. Could you be at risk for diabetes? You are if you are over 45, overweight, do not exercise regularly or have a family history of diabetes. Keep an eye out for these warning signs of diabetes: fatigue, excessive thirst, rapid weight loss, blurred vision, frequent urination and cuts or bruises that are slow to heal. The best defense against it, though, is prevention. Just by exercising, eating right and controlling your weight now, you can help control or prevent diabetes later. The medical experts tell us that we are close to curing this killer disease. To that extent, I and several members of the House Appropriations Committee have worked to ensure that these researchers have the funds they need to battle diabetes. While the researchers make progress in the labs, there is other good news for diabetes sufferers. Recently, the Health Care Financing Administration agreed to provide Medicare coverage of insulin infusion pumps for beneficiaries who have Type I, or juvenile, diabetes. In Type I diabetes, the body can’t make any insulin to process blood sugar. The battery-powered insulin pumps are about the size of a beeper. They inject pre-programmed dosages 24 hours a day through a tube to a needle inserted just under the skin. The pump not only provides diabetes patients greater freedom, but also means greater safety and fewer complications from inaccurate dosages. Let’s not forget that it is your tax dollars that help pay for medical research. Hopefully, we agree that these are national priorities that need to be addressed. Diabetes alone costs Texans almost $3 billion each year in medical costs and lost productivity. More importantly, it is costing the lives of our fellow citizens. One day, I hope this column can report a cure for diabetes. Until then, best defenses against diabetes are awareness and education. For more information regarding diabetes, please call the American Diabetes Association at 1-800-DIABETES.

Clint High principal noted for work in foreign language education

CLINT — Clint High School Principal Morris Aldridge was selected as Administrator of the year by the Texas Foreign Language Association (TFLA). The purpose of TFLA is to advance the study of modern and classical languages and their literature and culture at all levels of instruction. Aldridge, who has been in education for 20 years, was selected for the award because of his dedication to education, the district, the teachers and students. He was also commended for his understanding and support of foreign language learning. Currently, Clint High School offers foreign language courses in Spanish 1 and 2 for native and non-native speakers, AP Spanish Literature, AP Spanish Language, German 2, Pre AP German 3, and AP German 4. Aldridge accepted his award during the TFLA Fall Conference Awards Dinner on Oct. 21, 2005 at the Camino Real Hotel.

Reyes Reports By U.S. Rep. Silvestre Reyes

BRAC: New troops will revitalize Fort Bliss and El Paso

“BRAC is a four letter word.” So said the resident of a city where the local military base was slated for closure. BRAC, which is, of course, an acronym rather than a word, stands for Base Realignment and Closure, and for some communities the 2005 BRAC closure list did indeed bring bad news. For El Paso, BRAC represents prosperity and growth. When I was elected to office in 1996, Fort Bliss had just recently lost the 4,400 person 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment, and the post’s future did not seem bright. Working with El Paso’s far-sighted military and civilian leaders, we crafted a plan that turned Fort Bliss from a potential loser in the next BRAC round to one of this year’s biggest winners. We focused on the under-appreciated strengths of Fort Bliss. While Fort Bliss on its own is an impressive post, when considered with White Sands Missile Range and Holloman Air Force Base, the region represents an unmatched military asset. By working together as a region with leaders from White Sands and Holloman, we effectively showcased the area to national leaders. We dispelled the myth that El Paso does not have enough water to support military and civilian households. The El Paso Water Utilities developed a long-term plan, including the construction of a desalination plant, which we helped bring to fruition with federal dollars. When some at the Department of Defense wanted to restrict training areas on Fort Bliss, we passed legislation to ensure troops could continue to use the land in the same manner as the air defenders and cavalry before them. With the training lands secure long before the BRAC process commenced, we were able to demonstrate to the Army and Department of Defense that our post could easily handle the location and training of a large influx of soldiers. Due to BRAC, Fort Bliss will grow by 11,500 troops, making it the largest gainer in military personnel, and the Army has announced that they will move additional troops to Fort Bliss over the next several years as we close bases in Germany. In the end, Fort Bliss is expected to grow by over 20,000 new troops, which means about 60,000 soldiers and family members in all. These troops and their families will have a huge positive impact on our community. New jobs will be created to support these new families, and it is estimated that the potential boost to our economy is over $4 billion annually. This great win for El Paso did not come about as the result of a single action or a single person; rather it was the collective efforts of many people that brought about this unprecedented win for our community. Now that we have achieved our goal with the BRAC recommendation, our next challenge is to prepare our community for this growth. We must improve our schools for all students. We must build the roads that will allow prosperity to flow through all El Paso. We must build homes to match our growing needs. And we must ensure that growth at Fort Bliss translates to growth and improvement in the lives of all El Pasoans. We all worked hard to secure this important win for our region, and we should all share in the benefits.

Tornillo Red Ribbon activities encourage drug free students

By Antonio Rosales
Special to the Courier

TORNILLO — A number of events took place as part of Tornillo ISD’s Red Ribbon Celebrations. The first event, which began the week-long celebration last Monday, had the Tornillo Drug Free Coyote making an appearance at Tornillo Elementary School to bring a drug free message to each classroom. The message was to give “Hugs Not Drugs.” The Coyote visited each kindergarten and first grade class. Next, U.S. Customs gave a drug awareness/prevention presentation to students in grades second through fifth at Tornillo Elementary and Tornillo Intermediate Schools. The Customs Agents provided students with information regarding drug prevention and also with tips on to how to become a customs agent. The presentations concluded with the U.S. Customs K-9 Unit giving a live demonstration on how the dogs find drugs. Last Friday, the culminating event had Tornillo Elementary and Tornillo Intermediate School students participate in a Red Ribbon Week Parade. The parade route led students around the two campuses. Guest participants included the El Paso County Sheriff’s Department, McGruff, the Crime Prevention Dog, the Tornillo Drug Free Coyote and the Tornillo High School Football Team.

Saying no to drugs with a smile!

By Phillip Cortez
Special to the Courier

SAN ELIZARIO — There are plenty of ways to send a message to children, whether it’s telling them to clean their rooms, take out the trash or, more importantly, to say no to drugs. El Pasoan Ron Webb certainly has his way of conveying such an important message — even if it means getting a little help from his puppet friends.

Webb sang and entertained the students at Sambrano Elementary School in San Elizario on Oct. 12 in an effort to reaffirm what they have already learned from their parents and teachers: illegal drugs are not cool.

With characters such as Sniffles, his drug-detecting dog, and bodybuilding champ “Hans” providing plenty of laughs, Webb — he wore a fish tie — had students singing and laughing throughout the entire program.

“Listening to the kids laugh is the best part of this,” Webb said in between shows. His days as a drug awareness presenter began roughly 15 years ago while attending a junior high anti-drug rally to watch a friend’s band play.

“I saw some of the presenters and thought, ‘I can do that, too,’” he said. “The big difference between performing then and now is that I don’t need scripts anymore.”

Important messages, however, were mixed in with the fun and laughter, and it was important that Webb had all students repeat the “Hans Creed,” which went:

I don’t do drugs.
If I see someone use drugs,
I’m going to tell an adult,
And save their life!

■ Canutillo Independent School District employees and community members will be offered their annual flu shots through the district’s third party administrator, Access Administrators, Advantage Care Network, and Pro Action. Employees and their covered dependents will receive the flu shots at no cost as long as they have the District Health Coverage. Anyone covered under Medicare can receive the shot at no cost as well. Any employees or dependents not covered on the District Health Plan, and community members can receive the flu shot for a fee of $20. Students must have a parent present in order to receive the flu shot. The shots will be administered on the following dates and locations:

- Thursday, November 3, 2:30-4:30 p.m., Canutillo Middle School, 801 Talbot Road;
 - Friday, November 4, 9:00-11:30 a.m., Canutillo Administration Facility, 7965 Aircraft Road; and
 - Monday, November 7, 2:30-4:30 p.m., Bill Childress Elementary School, 7700 Cap Carter Road.
- For more information, call Tracey Benson, 877-7408.

■ The El Paso Water Utilities Turf Rebate Program is offering seminars for the public through the Texas Cooperative Extension Service. Turf removal, planting water-smart plants and more are covered. The remaining two dates of the course are Nov. 5 and Nov. 14, at the TCE location at 1030 N. Zaragosa, Suite A. Call to register at 859-7725, ext. 221 or 235.

■ El Paso Collaborative for Community & Economic Development, a nonprofit organization whose mission is to facilitate affordable housing, has received a donation in the amount of $1,000 from Jerry Romero on behalf of Wells Fargo Foundation. The El Paso Collaborative is a resource organization that provides access to capital, technical support and advocacy for economic development.

■ Dr. Armando Aguirre has been named by the Socorro ISD Board of Directors as the principal for the Early College High School and John H. Alarcon as the executive director of Operational Services.

HCPD honors first graduates of Citizens Police Academy

By Arleen Beard
Special to the Courier

HORIZON CITY — The first graduates of the Horizon City Citizens Police Academy were recognized during the regularly scheduled council meeting on Oct. 11.

The Academy was approved by the Horizon City Council in October of 2002 as a community relations program for the Horizon City Police Dept. Police Chief Tony Aguilar said the primary objective of the program is to promote and develop positive interaction between the HCPD and the citizens it serves.

The first session of the eight-week, 24-hour program began Aug. 17 of 2005 and concluded Oct. 5. Of the 18 original applicants, 14 completed the course, having spent each Wednesday from 6-9 p.m. learning about the police department through classroom instruction and hands-on experience, including tours of the police facility, demonstration of police equipment, collection of evidence and role-playing scenarios. Some of the classes were conducted by the El Paso Community College Police Academy.

The Academy will be an ongoing part of the HCPD, Chief Aguilar said. The requirements to enroll are to be at least 21 years of age, live or work in El Paso County, be of good character, and have no criminal or arrest record involving a felony offense. There is no charge for the class and the next session will begin in April of 2006.

Aguilar encouraged interested citizens to contact the HCPD at 852-1047 for more information.

Socorro High’s second annual parent summit well received

By Carlos A. Briano
Special to the Courier

EAST EL PASO COUNTY — Hundreds of parents of Socorro High School Students went back to high school on Saturday as part of Socorro’s Second Annual Parent Summit, offering parents an opportunity to learn more about matters related to their children’s education.

“We wanted our parents to become more involved,” says Rosario Rojas, Socorro’s 10th Grade Success Initiative and G/T Coordinator. “So we created the Parent Summit last year. The idea is to show parents what kind of programs we have at school.”

The Summit took place from 8 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. with 11 break-out sessions taught by 13 presenters. The sessions included College Prep/Dual Credit Courses, Internet Use, The Importance of the TAKS, Graduation Requirements & High School Credits, Parent Services and Volunteering, Stretching Exercises, Tutoring Programs, Mental Health, Protective Orders and Fiesta Trends.

Free childcare, breakfast, lunch and entertainment were provided. Lucy Marquez, who has a child at Socorro High School and a child at Campestre Elementary, says the Parent Summit is definitely a valuable resource. She decided to take advantage of the Internet Use class to help her children with their schoolwork.

“This allows us to get better knowledge of what our kids are doing now,” she says. “Plus it’s free. It’s just up to us to show up. Plus they feed us breakfast and lunch.”

Pedro Villagrana, field reporter for KINT Channel 26, was a guest speaker and also presented the session on Fiesta Trends, a course designed to teach parents about mixed messages sent at family gatherings about underage drinking. He applauded the parents for supporting the Parent Summit.

“I think all parents know that education is fundamental in our society,” he says. “And parents all want better things for their children. But sometimes they are so busy working they forget they can best help their children by assisting them with their education. These parents made the great effort to be here and learn all this valuable information.”

See The Difference

The 12th man makes a huge difference for Miners

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

My hat is off (and I don’t even wear a hat) to all those Miner fans who filled the Sun Bowl at UTEP’s last home game against Marshall. The Miners fed off the enthusiasm and crushed the Thundering Herd 31-3 in a contest that was decided right from the beginning. Sardine-in-the-can-like, 51,500 fans crammed into the Sun Bowl and filled the air with a deafening roar that didn’t end until the game’s final whistle. Good stuff, El Paso. But can you do it again? To my knowledge, I don’t think UTEP has ever sold out consecutive games in its rather disappointing football history. But this Saturday the first-place Miners host the first-place Tulsa Golden Hurricanes in what will be a battle for the inside track to hosting the Conference USA title game. Both teams are 4-1 in the West division of C-USA and both need the victory desperately. After the last home game, Mike Price went on and on about the magnificent crowd at the Sun Bowl and how much it inspires his team to see thousands of fans tailgating hours before kickoff. Price said they see that and automatically perk up and take notice. He said it makes them want to pay the fans back for their loyalty and support. UTEP is coming off a very disappointing effort against Rice, who came into last Saturday’s game with a 12-game losing streak. The Miners hung on by their fingertips to beat the Owls 38-31 in a performance that may have cost them crucial votes in the top-25 polls. If the Miners can get an explosive effort and handle Tulsa by a convincing margin this weekend, the voters will surely have UTEP in the rankings. And it all starts with the crowd. El Paso has waited over three decades to get this kind of national recognition. Imagine what the rest of the country will think if the Miners fill the Sun Bowl two straight games and come out of it with a 7-1 overall record.

Big time college football is fun, isn’t it, Miner fans? See, patience pays off. It just took us 35 years to experience it. Heisman watch The NCAA football season is nearing its homestretch and the talk will soon turn to individual awards and that means Heisman Trophy time. Coming into the season all the talk surrounding the Heisman was centered around Southern Cal quarterback Matt Leinart and Oklahoma running back Adrian Peterson. But a new cast of characters has emerged and can make this the most difficult Heisman choice in years. Usually everyone has a pretty good idea who is going to win the trophy, but this year’s award has garnered a number of legitimate contenders. Emerging as frontrunners are Texas quarterback Vince Young, Virginia Tech quarterback Marcus Vick, Notre Dame quarterback Brady Quinn and USC’s running back Reggie Bush. Any one of these guys can hold the trophy high and it would be hard to argue with the selection based on the incredible season each is having. But regardless of who wins the award, it’s clear to me who the most exciting player in the nation is. It’s obviously Reggie Bush. The Southern Cal junior tailback has the same kind of moves that made Gayle Sayers famous. He has the kind of breakaway speed I’m not sure I’ve seen on the football field. And Bush has the charisma that makes him a natural with the voters and the public. The leading candidate for the Heisman right now has to be Vince Young, who is leading Texas toward a national-championship showdown with Leinart, Bush, and the rest of the USC Trojans in the Rose Bowl. And Young is an exceptional athlete who runs like, but throws better, than Michael Vick. But in the end, it’s Reggie Bush who is far and away the most special player in the United States today. He may not get the Heisman, but he’s got more natural talent and ability than any other athlete in the country. And if he doesn’t, there’s always next year. If he’s not in the NFL next year.

Canutillo alumni organization sponsors golf tourney

By Kim Guzman

Students present beer breakthrough

By Don Flood

Thirty years after graduating from high school, you learn to appreciate your classmates in ways you didn’t back then.

Noah Piper, for example. Thirty years ago I ran track with Noah and always considered him a good guy. But at a recent class reunion I learned something about Noah that made me appreciate him even more.

That night I learned Noah didn’t drink beer, allowing me to win the 30-pack of Coors Light that was being given away as a door prize.

You don’t forget about things like that.

Some classmates didn’t recognize me, a sad testament to their failing eyesight, since I hadn’t aged a day.

That may be a little stretch, but at least with the Coors Light I can experiment to see if the well-known “beer goggles” effect would work on myself.

I could down a few, look at myself in the mirror, and say, “Doggone it, Don. You haven’t changed a bit since 1975, except now you’re showing off more of that fine-looking scalp of yours.”

Speaking of beer — budding writers might want to note the smoothness of this transition — two German students have developed “smart beer mat” technology, a computerized system that tells waiters and bartenders when beer glasses are empty.

(And no, these two students, inexplicably, were not awarded this year’s Nobel Prize for Barroom Science.)

Finally — a real breakthrough! I don’t know about you, but I’ve been just a little disappointed with how the future has played out.

If you had asked me in high school, I would have said that having traveled to the moon and back — not me personally, you understand — the promise of “smart beer mat” technology was just around the corner.

Didn’t happen. For decades now, we’ve had to raise our glass when our mugs are empty, risking tendonitis every time we did so.

And this new technology has another important function, which I swear I’m not making up:

Because the mats contain computer chips that measure gravity, they can sense if the glass has been turned upside down.

So what, you say? Good point.

Except that, according to the CNN.com story, this means it could be used “as a ‘voting system’ during karaoke competitions: Patrons could raise their glass if they liked a singer, or flip it over if they did not.” (!!!)

Of course, if the mug were full the patron would spill beer all over himself. But that’s OK because with “smart beer mat” technology, the bartenders would know instantly it was time for a refill!

And that’s just the beginning. Employing this new system, we could hold a national Karaoke Night where, before the singing started, we could elect a president with the confidence of knowing that our votes aren’t being counted the way they are in Florida.

Or, we could vote after the singing, when voters were more properly fortified to face an election.

As for myself, I’d prefer making the presidential election itself a karaoke contest.

I plan to raise my glass for Noah Piper.

Traditional football rivalry between Clint and Fabens memorialized with trophy

By Vivian Manzano
Special to the Courier

CLINT/FABENS — The yearly football showdown between Fabens High School and Clint High School will have a new twist, set for 7 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 4 at Fabens’ Wildcat Stadium.

This is an annual “friendly” rivalry and this year the Lions and Wildcats will be battling it out for “The Pride of the Lower Valley Trophy.” The traveling trophy, which is the “brain-child” of Clint High School Principal Morris Aldridge, will be presented to the superintendent of the winning district after the game.

Either Clint Superintendent Dicky Estrada or Fabens Superintendent, Mr. Poncho Garcia will have bragging rights for one year. The trophy will be presented by Aldridge from Clint, and Robert Sepulveda from Fabens.

The trophy will be retired to the team that wins it for three consecutive years and another one will be bought in its place. The tradition is expected to continue. Friday night the lights of the Wildcat Stadium will shine on “The Pride of the Lower Valley.” May the best team win.
