Clint ISD budget

Clint ISD Board of Trustees, at their regular board meeting held August 29, 2012, set the tax rate and adopted a budget for the 2012-2013 school year. Once again, taxpayers will not see an increase to the tax rate for this school year. The tax rate for the year will remain at $1.335050 per $100.00 of taxable property value. The average net taxable value, for a single family dwelling, in the District is currently $89,682.00, which is an increase from the previous year. A balanced budget of $84.4 million was adopted for the new school year. The budget was prepared based on a number of factors including an approved tax rate of $1.335050, projected student enrollment, and expected attendance rates.

Mackeben installed

Michael Mackeben, Principal at Red Sands Elementary in Clint ISD, will serve as District 19 President-Elect for the Texas Elementary Principals and Supervisors Association (TEPSA). Officers from the 20 TEPSA districts across the state were installed at the association's July Leadership Conference. "District officers play a vital role in communicating TEPSA's mission at the local level. They are committed to serving Texas PreK-8 educators and students," said Executive Director Sandi Borden. Mackeben has served as a TEPSA district officer for seven years. He has been a Principal with Clint ISD since 2001. TEPSA, whose hallmark is educational leaders learning with and from each other, has served Texas PreK-8 school leaders since 1917. Member owned and member governed, TEPSA has more than 5,800 members who direct the activities of more than 2.5 million PreK-8 school children. Learn more at www.tepsa.org.

CANUTILLO – Dropouts from the Canutillo Independent School District got some surprise visitors at their front door on Saturday, September 15.

More than thirty CISD educators, along with local dignitaries like state Representative Dee Margo, Judge Brian Haggerty, Vinton Mayor Madeleine Praino and El Paso Community College President Dr. William Serrata participated in the Dropout Recovery Saturday event, which already has resulted in the re-enrollment of 11 students at Canutillo High School.

The event, in which participants personally knock on the front doors of selected dropouts to encourage them to re-enroll in school and earn a high-school diploma, is now in its third year in Canutillo.

"We are extremely pleased with the results that we have seen because of this dropout recovery event," said Canutillo Superintendent Dr. Damon Murphy. "It is vital that we do everything we can to try and get every single one of our students through high school. This

EL PASO COUNTY – The El Paso Museum of History in collaboration with the Tom Lea Institute will host the Tom Lea Month Lecture Series: Benito Juárez at the Pass of the North (1865-1866), at 5:30 p.m., Thursday, October 4, at the museum (510 N. Santa Fe). The presentation is free and open to the public.

The public is invited to join the museum and the institute for an October celebration of El Paso's most famous artist and writer, Tom Lea. Throughout the month there will be a series of lectures and openings.

The Thursday event, which is the first of the series, will feature Nick Hauser, who will present an illustrated talk on Benito Juárez at the Pass of the North (1865-1866).

According to Houser, Tom Lea reserved the pleasure of portraiture for himself, choosing his own subjects to sit for him. He made an exception to paint a portrait of Benito Juárez for Blair House in Washington, D.C., commissioned by the Pan American Round Table of El Paso.

Juárez – a Zapotec Indian – was elected president of Mexico in 1858, fleeing north when Napoleon II invaded Mexico and – on August 14, 1865 – arriving at Paso del Norte, which was Mexico's capital for 10 months.

Houser will share the story of Mexico's greatest president, for whom Ciudad Juárez was named in 1888. This history will be commemorated with the casting of Benito Juárez, the fourth of the 12 Travelers monuments by Houser's brother and nephew, sculptor John Sherrill Houser and Ethan Taliesin Houser.

Nick Houser has degrees in anthropology (M.A.), history (B.A.) and public health (M.P.H.). As historian/archivist for Ysleta del Sur Pueblo, he has conducted historical research for the Tigua Indians and on the history of the El Paso region. He has created exhibits for museums and cultural centers, including the Tigua Indian Cultural Center, El Paso Mission Trail Association, the Los Portales Visitor Center in San Elizario, and XII Travelers Memorial of the Southwest.

Nick Houser has published books and

Rosemary herb possesses health benefits

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

The rosemary herb is one of the most health-benefitting plants that flourish in the Southwest; it likes this region's dry, alkaline soil and sunny conditions. But, it is also one of the most taken-for-granted plants in our yards.

Long before scientists were able to identify how rosemary works to improve health, civilizations of old were using the herb as an antiseptic to kill harmful germs and as a mechanism by which to improve blood flow to the brain, which aids in boosting memory.

Even Biblical accounts of this precious herb refer to it as a cleansing agent of choice for purifying the body. And, since ancient Greek times, rosemary has been considered a symbol of friendship, commitment, loyalty, and remembrance, as it was often used in both weddings and funerals. In fact, Greek brides wore rosemary wreaths as a symbol of their love and fidelity, believing that this beautiful herb was a gift from the goddess of love and beauty, Aphrodite.

Today, the rosemary herb is used medicinally to relieve and even cure chronic health conditions like gout and rheumatoid arthritis, according to medical reports. Its soothing, nourishing, and healing properties have shown to also have the ability to improve memory and protect the body against cancer, among other benefits.

Among the main properties of rosemary are analgesic, antiseptic, antidepressant, anti-inflammatory, expectorant, antiviral, aphrodisiac, and disinfectant. Its active elements have choleric, antiseptic, diuretic and tonic aspects at a nervous level, stimulating bile secretion and eliminating it in the intestines, destroying microorganisms,

GI Bill rates up

The rates for education benefits went up as of Oct. 1, as they do every year. This includes Montgomery GI Bill Active Duty, Montgomery GI Bill Selected Reserve and the Reserve Educational Assistance Program, as well as the Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance Program.

For example, the rate for Montgomery active-duty full-time institutional training (after an enlistment of at least three years) has gone from $1,473 to $1,564 per month. The rate after an enlistment of less than three years goes from $1,196 to $1,270.

If you want to further your education but don't know which avenue to pursue (full time, part time, campus living, on-the-job training or other options), go online to www.gibill.va.gov, click Resources, Benefit Resources and then Benefit Comparison Tools. It says right on the top of the page that for some veterans, the Post-9/11 GI Bill is a better deal than the Montgomery bill or any of the others. (Read the fine print: If you served for less than the full 36 months, you'll receive a percentage of the benefits.) Look at the comparison chart and weigh the benefits of each option: how the payments are made, the duration of the payments (how long your benefits are good), requirements of your service and the maximum number of months of benefits.

Then look at the Comparison of Monetary Benefits for specifics on what and who gets paid, you or the school.

To start assembling information, click Resources and then Student handouts, brochures and regulations. You'll find pamphlets and fact sheets that cover dozens of areas.

If you don't have a computer and can't use one at a library, call the VA at 1-800-827-1000 for general information about education benefits. Or call the number for the GI Bill at 1-888-442-4551.

How to stem the tide of junk mail

By Jason Alderman
Special to the Courier

Here's more than you ever wanted to know about junk mail: Each year, direct mail creates 10 billion pounds of solid waste in the U.S. and costs local communities more than $1 billion in collection and disposal expenses – not to mention putting you at greater risk for identity theft if you don't shred personalized mailings before tossing.

So how can you stop the flood of junk mail you receive? You could try moving or changing your name, but as you've probably noticed, a lot of what's delivered to your mailbox is addressed to "Occupant." In fact, the U.S. Postal Service relies heavily on such deliveries, which now outnumber first-class postage mailings.

Here are a few more practical suggestions for stemming the tide:

A good way to significantly reduce the number of offers you get for new credit accounts and insurance is to register with www.OptOutPrescreen.com, a secure website created by the leading credit bureaus (Equifax, Experian, Innovis and TransUnion).

By completing a simple online form, you can request to be removed from marketing lists the bureaus supply to lenders and insurance companies for use in firm (preapproved) credit or insurance offers. The electronic opt-out is valid for five years. If you want to opt out permanently, you must mail the form to the address provided. You can also opt back into such mailings electronically through the website. And, if you prefer, you may opt in or out by phone at (888) 567-8688.

Another good method to curb the amount of direct mail you receive is to register with www.DMAchoice.org, a program run by the Direct Marketing Association, the leading trade organization for businesses and non-profits that send direct mail. When you register, your name is put in a "delete" file that is sent to DMA's 3,600-plus members to check against their mailing lists.

It's important to note that not all marketers belong to DMA, so registering won't stop all such mailings. Also, it won't stop mailings from companies you already do business with or to which you've made a donation in the past. To get off their lists you'll have to contact them directly.

You can also register with DMAchoice.org to stop mail from being sent to a deceased individual or if you want to manage mail being sent to a dependent in your care. And, they have an email preference service where you can opt out of receiving unsolicited commercial emails from DMA members for six years.

A third opt-out option to explore is www.CatalogChoice.org, a free service that helps you submit opt-out requests for catalogs, coupons, credit card offers, phonebooks, circulars and more. Catalog Choice also offers several paid where they do more of the legwork to get you off third-party mailing databases.

One last suggestion: If you've got elderly parents, you might want to screen their mail for an overabundance of direct mail – especially catalogs and solicitations for money. If they're on a fixed income and susceptible to strong sales pitches, the combination can be devastating to their bank account. You can help them register with the organizations mentioned above.

No matter how diligent your efforts to get yourself off unwanted mailing lists, you're probably still going to get some junk mail. But it's good to know there are ways to significantly scale back the amount.

increasing the quantity of eliminated urine, improving the blood flow and refreshing and energizing the mind.

Apart from this, scientific researches indicate that rosemary is an ideal memory stimulant for both adults and students. Rosemary also has calming effects by working against fatigue, sadness, anxiety, calming muscle soreness, digestive pains and also, indigestion caused by stress.

In aromatherapy, it is appreciated for bringing youth, protection, love, optimism, vitality health and a restful sleep.

Rosemary can be consumed under the forms of tea, tincture, capsules or ethereal oils. Rosemary consumption improves digestion, fights against obesity, liver diseases, gastritis, cholesterolemia, bronchic asthma, edemas, and adjusts fast heart beats caused especially by irritability, coffee or tobacco excess.

Furthermore, because of its antiseptic and tonic properties, rosemary is extremely beneficial in cases of fainting, influenza, hangovers, asthma, bronchitis, cramps, constipation, cystitis, headaches, polypus, colds, cough, sinusitis or muscular pains. The plant also has a good influence on the blood circulation and blood pressure.

So, Southwesterners should make an effort to grow rosemary in the back yard garden, if not in a pot on the kitchen window, and take advantage of this bountiful miracle plant.

Always seek a doctor's opinion before making any change in your medical or health regime.

effort goes a long way in getting closer to that goal.”

Teachers, principals, administrators and Canutillo school board members visited a total of 21 students on Saturday. Instructors from El Paso Community College's Northwest Campus and representatives from ArcelorMittal also participated.

The students visited were given options to facilitate their high-school graduation, including rapid credit recovery and zero-period tutoring to help those who only need to pass the TAKS Exit exams.

The remaining students have until September 28 to re-enroll and not be counted as dropouts for the 2012-13 academic year.

Canutillo ISD has established goals to reduce dropout rates and increase college attendance among its graduates. In 2011 and 2012, all Canutillo High School graduates took a college entrance exam and applied for admission to a higher-learning institution.

tours of the school and facilities.

Gabriela Gomez, a sophomore tennis player said, "It is big and pretty, and there are more tennis courts, now we can host tournaments!"

New athletic facilities includes a stadium with a turf field surrounded by a track, a competition gym, a practice gym, tennis courts, baseball and softball fields, weight room, and training facilities.

Impressed with the facility, Clint football team member Raymond Alvarez said, "The athletic facilities are really nice and they are all in one place."

The gymnasiums and commons area were designed with multiple purposes in mind such as parent trainings and staff development for employees. The low maintenance and energy efficient building includes special features such as resilient flooring and use of natural daylight. High efficiency light fixtures and water efficient restroom fixtures are also installed in the new building.

Construction of the 223,000 square foot school was completed early this summer. Funded through the 2006 bond program, with about 73% of the cost to construct the new school being paid by a state grant, the cost to taxpayers for the $45.5 million project is only $11 million.

The grand opening of the school located on the corner of Alameda and Denton took place on August 24, 2012 with a ribbon cutting ceremony and guided tours given by students.

Clint ISD in partnership with El Paso Community College, The Greater Texas Foundation, the Meadows Foundation and Educate Texas, opened the doors to the Clint Early College Academy in August and also launched the District's "College for All" initiative. The Greater Texas Foundation and the Meadows Foundation provided the funding to establish the new school.

The Clint Early College Academy will give students the unique opportunity to attend both high school and college in a special campus environment that will challenge students to excel in their academic and personal endeavors. The students will have the opportunity to earn a high school diploma as well as a two-year Associate's Degree upon graduation.

The goal of the "College for All" initiative is to give all Clint ISD high school students the opportunity to graduate high school with at least 12-15 hours of college credit. The Clint Early College Academy will be a model campus for the rest of the district. Teaching practices which promote a rigorous curriculum and higher learning will be shared and used in the District's three high schools. Also, teachers will undertake many professional development opportunities to understand how to create a college ready environment and utilize teaching strategies which promote college readiness.

The first cohort of 115 students was selected from among nearly 160 applicants from across the District. The students submitted applications and were interviewed by a committee before being invited to attend the new school.

The students attended a two-week orientation during the summer to get acquainted with their teachers and classmates. Student Council elections were held during this time along with team projects and team building activities.

Triple-A team, stadium, part of a much larger picture

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

I don't think there's a single El Pasoan that doesn't know that Mayor John Cook decided not to veto the city council's 4-3 vote to approve the downtown stadium, which will house triple-A baseball in 2014.

In my 50 years in the Sun City, this was by far the most important decision El Paso had faced since deciding not to go with a Six Flags or a Sea World a few decades ago.

Those two, eventually found themselves in San Antonio, who said "yes." The rest is vacation destination history.

I've seen El Paso drop the ball so many times in the past that I never thought a day like this would come.

And as always, people came out of the woodwork to stop any progress for El Paso. It doesn't matter what it is, whenever a proposal is made to spend a little more money to improve the city, a vocal group will convince the city leaders that it isn't needed.

This has happened over and over through the years and just like abstinence (which has a 100-percent rate of success), the act of "not trying," guarantees that nothing will happen.

And El Paso has always been the city that other cities around the region point to, and snicker at.

The saddest thing of all is that many El Pasoans are keenly aware of it and are seemingly okay with it.

The least any city can do is try to elevate itself from 98-pound weakling status.

At some point a city has to stand up, brush the remnants of failure aside, and say to itself, "everything changes now."

And that's exactly what El Paso is doing as we speak.

To put it simply, El Paso is going through a renaissance.

Look around you. Whether it's the explosion in the medical community, the eastside spaghetti bowl, the huge expansion of Fort Bliss, the new large EPCC campus being built at Fort Bliss, the new Imax theater at Bassett Center, the two new movie theater complexes in the far east and the new mall where Farah once stood.

Now add a new state-of-the-art minor league baseball stadium and a $180-million multi-purpose arena to house shows and concerts that regularly pass El Paso by.

What many citizens who were against the downtown stadium have failed to realize is that all this is not just about a baseball stadium.

It's much bigger than that.

There is property all around downtown that is being bought up in anticipation of the crowds that will be making their way to the games and other activities.

This property, that I won't go near at night for fear of my life, will be transformed to well-lit outdoor restaurants and cafes and national store chains and boutique-style shops.

Think of the downtown areas in San Antonio and San Diego and Phoenix and Oklahoma City. All cities that were equal in size and stature to El Paso back in the early 1970s.

It's just taken El Paso a little longer to take its blinders off.

I was speaking to an old friend recently who is in charge of recruiting doctors to El Paso for a local hospital.

He told me his job is extremely difficult because young doctors look at El Paso and eventually say "no thank you."

The biggest problem he said was that they were taking their young families elsewhere because they stated there was nothing to do here and there was very little opportunity.

That should be an embarrassing punch in the gut to anyone who loves El Paso.

But maybe now, because of this renaissance, things will start to change.

Mayor Cook's decision was a no-brainer. He didn't have a choice. He knew that, unbelievably, El Paso's stature would have fallen even further if it decided to back out of this deal at the last minute.

Those against El Paso progress shouldn't worry. They should be hopeful.

Those days of "nothing to do in El Paso," are about to end.

If you're worried about higher property taxes just know that the property taxes generated by all the eventual downtown activity will keep the city from going after your residential taxes to make up the difference.

I know the saying is a bit of a cliché, but El Paso, "this is the first day of the rest of your life."

A sporting view By Mark Vasto

Manning up

Watching the Broncos take on the Falcons the other night reminded me of the first time I stood face to face with Peyton Manning.

It was his rookie season out of Tennessee, and it was my rookie year as a beat reporter for the Atlanta Falcons. I didn't like spending the games in the press box at the Georgia Dome – a poorly lighted, decorated shed in a town that didn't need a dome with a field of painted-over concrete famous for ending careers.

Nobody would have guessed that the 1998 Falcons were going to the Super Bowl that year, and I cannot stress this to you enough. There was a considerable lack of faith in head coach Dan Reeves and the sketchy track record of Chris Chandler, the team's quarterback.

Chandler wasn't really considered to be a very tough guy. He typically missed a few games every season due to injuries, and he ran a lot, which made sense on both accounts because he was constantly being chased out of the pocket during his football journeys. Chandler was 33, and he had done a tour of the NFL's bottom rung for the past decade. Drafted by Indianapolis, sent to Tampa, shuffled to Phoenix in a mid-season trade, passed to the Rams for a season, then a deuce in Houston before touching down in Atlanta. With the exception of his rookie year, he hadn't put together a winning season for any of those teams.

Reeves remains infamous for losing three Super Bowls in a row during his time at Denver. One of the last guys to wear a suit on the sidelines, his play calling was dreadfully conservative. And the Falcons roster looked like a list of rejects and also-rans. The backup quarterback was 44-year-old Steve Deberg, a guy who had been out of the league for five years.

Each week the "Falconies" (as the newsroom called them, for whatever reason) kept improving, and my photography got better, too. I seemed to have a knack for snagging really emotional candid shots from behind the bench.

And then one week, there was Manning, on his way to a 3-13 season, getting hounded by the Falcons en route to a 28-21 loss, on the phone with the folks upstairs, looking distressed until SNAP! Full on Minolta with red-eye reduction flash in your face! He squinted, put the phone to the side and looked up at me –? one rookie to another – and uttered these five words of advice I'll never forget:

"Dude... you can't do that."

I recognized that same look on his face during this season's game. The Falcons are looking like a Super Bowl team again, and Manning is on the phone looking distressed again. Three interceptions on your first three drives, Peyton?

Dude... you can't do that.

Your good health By Paul G. Donahue, M.D.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Will you please provide information on essential tremor? Thanks. – D.C.

When people unfamiliar with essential tremor see a person with it, they immediately assume that the person is quite nervous. The shaky hands are a giveaway. It's not "nerves" that are causing the shakiness; it's essential tremor. A glitch in one of the brain's movement-control centers has occurred. Katharine Hepburn suffered from essential tremor. Not only did her hands shake, but so did her head and her voice.

Essential tremor is a common condition. Its other name is familial tremor, indicating that it runs in families. Most affected people can find other relatives who have it.

Trembling hands make it near impossible to bring a spoonful of soup to the mouth. Handwriting often degenerates into a scrawl. Buttoning a shirt or coat becomes a herculean task.

Alcohol abolishes the tremor for a short time. Alcohol can't be used as a treatment. Other medicines, like propranolol (Inderal) and primidone (Mysoline), offer effective control. For seriously disabling tremors, deep-brain stimulation can put an end to them.

People can help control shaking hands by holding their elbows firmly against the body when using their hands for a fine task.

Everyone with essential tremor needs to make the acquaintance of the International Essential Tremor Foundation at 888-387-3667 (toll-free) or online at www.essentialtremor.org. The foundation is a reliable source of information and can keep you up to date on new treatments.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Many years ago, we moved to a small community next to the ocean. We have eaten large quantities of fish ever since. I have developed a parasite called pinworms, which I believe came from partly uncooked fish. I used to see them when they exited from my colon (backside). They are fewer now that I take Oregano Leaf Oil. Can they cause other ailments or infiltrate other organs? How does one get rid of them once and for all? – J.D.

Pinworms are an extremely common infection, especially in children. During the night, the female pinworm crawls out of the rectum to lay eggs on the nearby skin. She is tiny, 0.4 inches (1 cm) long. You must have good eyes to see these worms. A magnifying glass is a big help. Pinworms rarely make their way to other organs. Some speculate that they might be a cause of appendicitis.

Eggs on the skin cause intense itching. Your doctor is best equipped to make the diagnosis. Doctors have the instruments to clearly see the worm or its eggs. Mebendazole (Vermox), albendazole (Albenza) and pyrantel pamoate (Pin-X) have a good track record of getting rid of pinworms. They are not found in fish.

Undercooked freshwater fish can harbor the fish tapeworm, which grows to a length of 39 feet. It produces few, if any, symptoms. Prolonged infection with it can lead to vitamin B-12 deficiency. For diagnosis, a stool specimen should be sent to a lab experienced in identifying the eggs and the worm segments. Praziquantel (Biltricide) is the treatment.

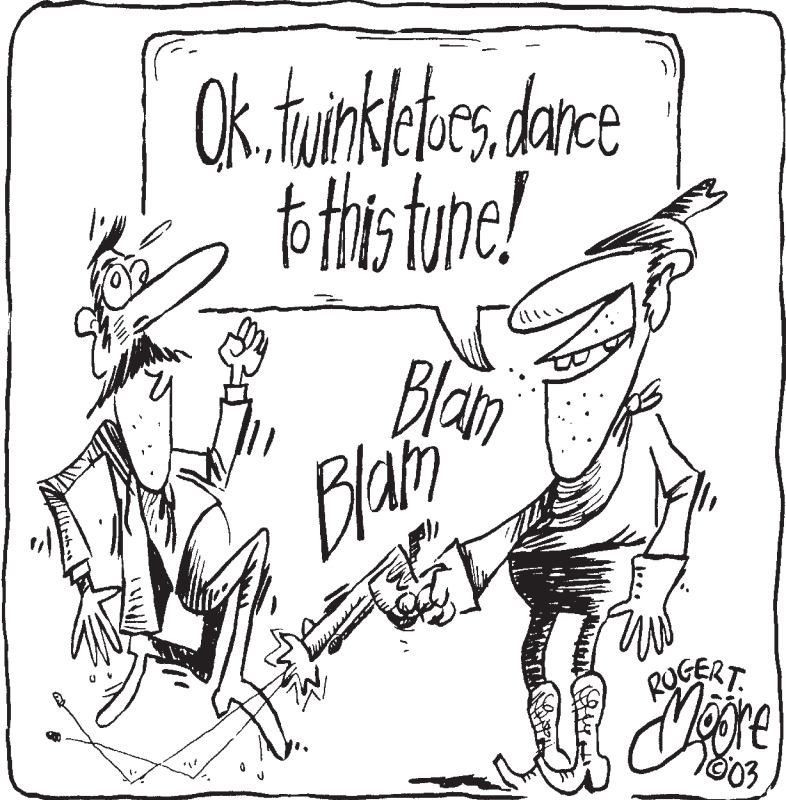

Dr. Donahue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. (c) 2012 North America Synd., Inc. All Rights Reserved.

Social Security Q&A By Ray Vigil

Q: I get Social Security because of a disability. How often will my case be reviewed to determine if I'm still eligible?

A: How often we review your medical condition depends on how severe it is and the likelihood it will improve. Your award notice tells you when you can expect your first review using the following terminology:

- Medical improvement expected—If your condition is expected to improve within a specific time, your first review will be six to 18 months after you started getting disability benefits.
- Medical improvement possible—If improvement in your medical condition is possible, your case will be reviewed about every three years.
- Medical improvement not expected—If your medical condition is unlikely to improve, your case will be reviewed about once every five to seven years.

(SSDI) and Supplemental Security Income (SSI). SSDI benefits are based on prior work under Social Security, and are financed with Social Security taxes paid by workers, employers, and self-employed persons. To be eligible for an SSDI benefit, the worker must earn sufficient credits based on taxable work to be "insured" for Social Security purposes. SSI payments are made on the basis of financial need and are financed through general tax revenues. Adults or children who are disabled or blind, and have limited income and resources, may be eligible for SSI disability. The monthly payment varies up to the maximum federal benefit rate, which may be supplemented by the state or decreased by income. Learn more by reading our publications, Supplemental Security Income, at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/11000.html, and Disability Benefits, at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10029.html.

Q: What is the difference between Social Security disability and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) disability?

A: Social Security administers two major programs that provide benefits based on disability: Social Security Disability Insurance Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string's word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.

STRANGE BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• It was Canadian American educator Laurence J. Peter who made the following sage observation: "You can always tell a real friend: When you've made a fool of yourself, he doesn't feel you've done a permanent job."

• In Murfreesboro, Tenn., it is illegal to keep indoor furniture outdoors.

• Mike Edwards, one of the founding members of the British band Electric Light Orchestra, met with an untimely death decades after he left the group. In 2010, as Edwards was driving in the rural southwest of England, a farmer lost control of a 1,300-pound bale of hay. This wheel-shaped bale rolled down a hill and over a hedge, and just happened to smash into the van that Edwards was driving.

• The humble honeybee is the official insect of 17 states.

• Those who study such things say that there is a 1 million to 1 chance that, within the next century, an asteroid will crash into the Earth and destroy most life on the planet.

• In 2008 a company called Defense Devices, based in Jackson, Tenn., introduced a new item: a stun gun disguised as a tube of lipstick. The same company offers a ring that will shoot pepper spray.

• You might be surprised to learn that the giant bullfrogs of South Africa have sometimes been known to attack lions.

• Rhode Island may be the smallest state, but it has the longest name: It's officially known as the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantation.

• The tuatara is a lizard that can be found in New Zealand. Its claim to fame? It has a third eye, on the top of its head.
