Free flu vaccinations

Immunize El Paso and the Caring for Children Foundation, which operates the Care Van Program, announced today that the two programs have extended their partnership to provide un/under-insured children flu vaccinations at no out-of-pocket expense to the child's family. The group will visit over 100 area schools, community centers and outreach partners throughout the area. In addition to children's flu vaccinations, IZEP also offers flu vaccines to adults. To help offset the cost of vaccination for adults, Medicare, Medicaid and many major insurance plans are accepted. With the start of school and fall beginning to set in, now is a great time to start thinking about protecting yourself against the flu. Community-wide benefits of a comprehensive flu vaccination program can only be seen if a majority of the community gets vaccinated. Outreach clinics have been set up from Anthony to Tornillo making immunization accessible to absolutely anyone who wants to stay healthy. Each of Immunize El Paso's clinics will be open to allow for children and adults ($25) to access the free and/or low cost flu vaccines. The El Paso Mission Trail is a 9-mile historic corridor that connects two of the oldest continuously operated missions in the United States – the Ysleta Mission and the Socorro Mission (shown above) – and a historic presidio chapel, the San Elizario Presidio Chapel.

Campaign to improve Mission Trail is underway

MISSION VALLEY – The Institute for Policy and Economic Development at UTEP has been tasked with creating a plan to improve the looks of the Mission Trail Historical Corridor in the Lower Valley.

The initiative, which was initiated by City of El Paso Council members, also has the support of El Paso County Commissioners Court; and efforts are underway to bring more of the area's key stakeholders to support the initiative to improve the Mission Trail.

The historical corridor features the Ysleta Mission, the Socorro Mission and the San Elizario Chapel along Socorro Road. The nine-mile corridor begins in Ysleta and ends in San Elizario.

City and county officials have talked to the El Paso Catholic Diocese, El Paso Community Foundation and the El Paso Convention and Visitors Bureau, but they would like other entities and organization to become involved in the project including the Mission Trail Association, the City of Socorro, the Texas Department of Transportation, Ysleta del Sur Pueblo representatives and the Metropolitan Planning Organization.

The city of Socorro, the city of El Paso, El Paso County, TxDOT, Ysleta del Sur Pueblo and El Paso Catholic Diocese each have some type of jurisdiction over the Mission Trail.

Steve Ortega, city representative for the Lower Valley, said that the idea to improve the Mission Trail re-surfaced after Tania Chozet, county commissioner for the Lower Valley, spoke at one of his recent community meetings about the need to promote the trail.

Since taking office in 2011, Chozet has been advocating for a consolidated, sustained effort to improve the look of the area to make it more welcoming to the tourists. According to Chozet, several plans have been produced over the years, but none have been implemented. She stated that she would like to consolidate those plans and take the best ideas and start implementing them.

Both Ortega and Chozet assert that they would like the Institute for Policy and Economic Development to look at all the studies that already exist and come up with one solid idea on how to improve the corridor. To help fund the study, Ortega noted that the city

San Eli HS cadets provide service to community

By Cynthia P. Marentes

The San Elizario High School Navy Junior ROTC cadets regularly volunteer for community service projects not only as part of their academic program but also for their own personal development. On a recent Saturday in September for example, a total of 17 NJROTC cadets led by their Naval Science Instructors LCDR James W. Snarr and Chief Manuel P Jaquez volunteered to spruce up the home of an elderly, homebound Horizon City resident. From 8 a.m. to the early afternoon, the students worked effectively together to complete the task of painting the trim and exterior of the entire house. These students will be quick to tell you however that the rewards they received from knowing they made a positive impact in someone else's life far outweighed the satisfaction of just fulfilling a class requirement.

Since the cadets only have a limited amount of time to finish the service project, they also have to practice their management skills in order to meet their goal, according to Chief Jaquez.

"The pride it gives them in accomplishing something they started in the morning and getting it done really helps their leadership abilities and teamwork," Jaquez added.

The San Elizario High School NJROTC each year performs about eight community service projects like this one in partnership with local agencies and organizations. For the house painting project the cadets worked with Project Bravo, which provided the paint, brushes, rollers and identified the home that was most in need of assistance. The San Elizario NJROTC also brings additional equipment since they have many student volunteers who roll up their sleeves to actively participate in the work.

Chief Jaquez stated that all the cadets have a great time volunteering because they understand they are doing a good thing for someone else.

Young man with Clint roots puts his talents to use

CLINT AND STRATFORD, TX – Preston Burr, 16, is a rising young star on the Texas rodeo circuit these days.

Preston, from Stratford, TX, is the grandson of a “soooooooooo prooooooooooud” Sandy Burr who retired two years ago as secretary to the superintendent of the Clint Independent School District.

When Sandy isn’t “piddlin” around in the yard of her Clint home, she is bragging about the accomplishments of her first grandchild in the rodeo arena. She would much rather talk about him than about what she is doing in retirement.

At the drop of a horseshoe, she will unabashedly and at some length brag about Preston, and there is much about which to brag. And from the honors and awards he has earned in bareback bronc riding and team roping, he will most likely soon need a room the size of a rodeo arena to house them all.

This is only Preston’s second season, his sophomore season, of serious rodeo competition. And this past season was, similarly, his sophomore year at Stratford High School located in the upper Texas Panhandle near the Oklahoma line.

- His honors include:
- 2012 Tri-State Year End Bareback Champion;
 - 2012 Region 1 Bareback Champion;
 - Qualified for Texas High School Rodeo Association finals 2012 in team roping and bareback riding;
 - Finished as the No. 4 Bareback Rider in Texas and advanced to the National High School Rodeo Finals July 14-21 in Rock Springs, WY;
 - Preston finished 13th in the nation at the national finals;

year of bronc riding with impressive performances at two rodeos the weekend of August 18. He finished first in a rodeo at Gruver with an 80-point ride. He finished second in the rodeo at Dumas; and

The sum of his achievements thus far might well be seen in his recent selection to the 2012/2013 Region I Texas High School Rodeo Cinch Team. It is like being named to an all-star team, says Ed Burr, Preston’s father. Top performers in the various rodeo events are named to the team. Cinch is a major Western clothing manufacturer and a national rodeo sponsor.

“I am so proud of Preston’s ride this weekend,” Grandmother Sandy said in an e-mail.

“I’ve had a fun time, a good time,” a very polite Preston says in a telephone interview. He is unfailingly praises others – mentors and team-roping friends who are playing important parts in his young life.

This characteristic of shifting praise to others is mentioned in a feature article on Preston in the current issue of Play Rodeo magazine.

“He’s sure to mention his family and the support he’s received from his dad and mom, Ed and Christy Burr,” according to the magazine article. “Preston is thankful for all the time and money they’ve contributed to the pursuit of his rodeo dreams. To his sister, Laynee, and little brother, Zane, he says thanks for watching.

“To his friends, he says he’ll see you at the next rodeo.”

Preston speaks passionately about what draws him to that “next rodeo.”

That passion for Preston began, he recalls, when he was four or five years of age when he would ride sheep and calves. That passion grew and he began bareback riding two years ago.

I just love it; it’s a challenge. There’s no other way to explain it. It’s awesome. It is an adrenalin rush.” A part of achieving that rush, he adds, is when you slip your hand in the riggin, position yourself properly and feel that bronc underneath you, a wild horse whose sole purpose will soon be to buck you off and send you flying into the air.

And then comes the moment of truth.

“When it (the ride) goes right, it flows – flows like a river.”

He takes it a (dance) step further. “It goes smooth – like dancing.

It’s like dancing with a girl,” he explains. “When it’s going good, it is fine. When it’s not going good, it’s bad.”

Preston also compares that “adrenalin rush” to the thrill of racing on a motorcycle.

Preston offers a cautionary note to those who look to competing in rodeos without making a commitment. “You can’t be a wannabe because it’s dangerous,” he says bluntly.

Preston says he is trying to play the guitar, with emphasis on the word trying.

In addition to bronc riding, the young Preston is a member of the Future Farmers of America, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and with his parents, members of First Baptist Church.

For all that he has accomplished in his life so far, he thanks God and says he has been blessed.

"SAY, YOU MIGHT BE RIGHT FOR OUR EXECUTIVE TRAINING PROGRAM."

Veterans Post By Freddy Groves

Claims backlogs, VRAP and PTSD

The Veterans Benefits Administration processed more than 1 million claims in fiscal year 2012, per a news release on the Department of Veterans Affairs site. This is the third year in a row it has reached that goal.

During one recent month, the VBA processed 107,462 claims with 86 percent accuracy, beating a record it set in 2010. The ultimate goal is to eliminate the claims backlog by 2015, and with 98 percent accuracy. It's being helped by the new paperless system, which all 56 regional offices will have by the end of 2013.

In another press release, applications have been approved for all 45,000 openings in the Veterans Retraining Assistance Program (VRAP) for 2012, with benefits to start Oct. 1. That means a lot of veterans are going to have an opportunity to get job training and education. Nearly 60,000 applications were received, so some missed out on that group. Another group, however, this time 54,000 veterans, will have another shot at the program, which runs through March 2014. Veterans must attend school full time, up to 12 months, in a program leading to an approved degree or certificate. For more information, go online to www.benefits.va.gov/vow/index.htm.

On another note, the VA and Department of Defense are set to fund a Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder and mild Traumatic Brain Injury study to the tune of $100 million. They're going to concentrate on prevention, diagnosis, intervention and improved treatment options, with early diagnosis and treatment being key. That $100 million is just part of the year's $1.9 billion for more than 2,300 projects.

If you want to read its press releases to keep track of what the VA is doing, take a look at www.va.gov/opa/pressrel every few days. While all are (of course) written from the VA point of view, there's some good information there.

recently passed a resolution to spend $30,000 to identify areas in which each jurisdiction can participate in improving the Mission Trail.

The two mission churches of Ysleta (built in 1680) and Socorro (1691) and the presidio chapel of San Elizario (1789), located along the El Paso Mission Trail, stand as enduring symbols of the long and rich history of their respective communities, as well as the nations of Spain, Mexico and the United States. All three are privately owned by the Catholic Diocese and are actively supported by their local parishes. These landmarks and their environs are listed in the National Register Historic Places.

The Mission Trail represents a segment of El Camino Real de Tierra Adentro (Royal Road of the Interior), the historic trail that extended from Mexico City to Santa Fe, and linked the missions, agricultural communities, haciendas (landed estates) and presidios (military forts) to distant trade and supply routes. It is the oldest and once the longest road in North America, and was designated as a National Historic Trail in 2000.

The Institute for Policy and Economic Development’s report is expected to be completed next year.

YSLETA MISSION – It was originally founded in 1613 at Isleta Pueblo, in New Mexico, and dedicated in 1621 as San Antonio De Isleta. During the Pueblo Revolt in 1680 many fled south to El Paso del Norte. The mission carries the name of thier pueblo and thier patron saint.

SOCORRO MISSION – The original Franciscan mission, Nuestra Señora de la Concepción del Socorro, was founded in 1682 by the Franciscan order, to serve displaced American Indians (the Piro, Tano and Jemez) from New Mexico, who fled during the Pueblo Revolt. The present Socorro Mission was constructed around 1840 to replace an earlier 18th-century mission destroyed in 1829 by flooding of the Rio Grande and has now been restoerd. The mission, constructed of adobe surfaced with stucco, is particularly notable for its interior. The finely painted and decorated beams, or vigas, are from the 18th-century mission and were reused when the present church was constructed. The mission is located at 328 S. Nevarez Rd. It is open to the public Monday-Friday, 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Revised TRZ Corridors

The old ABA back in the spotlight after 36 years

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

When I was growing up I followed as many sports as I could.

I watched the National Football League, the National Basketball Association and Major League Baseball.

I also kept up with golf and car racing and horse racing and boxing and swimming and tennis and even a little soccer.

One of my favorite teams back then was the San Antonio Spurs. I would listen to them at night on my transistor radio because back then, very few games were televised.

One thing different about the San Antonio Spurs of then and the San Antonio Spurs of today that back then, they played in the American Basketball Association... the ABA.

When most people think of the ABA they think of the red, white and blue basketball, the flashy multi-colored uniforms and huge afros.

I absolutely loved it.

But to be honest, I really haven't given the old league much thought until I heard that it is making a comeback.

Well, not on the basketball court, but rather in the judicial court.

When the league folded back in 1976, four teams survived and merged with the NBA.

The lucky four were the Spurs, the Denver Nuggets, the (then) New York Nets and the Indiana Pacers.

They were lucky because they were able to reap the benefits of a league that has grown by leaps and bounds over the last three decades.

But in a way they are also a bit unlucky because over the years they've had to comply with an agreement they made a long time ago.

You see, one of the old ABA teams that weren't going to be joining the NBA was the St. Louis Spirits.

In a way of helping the merger, the Spirits' owners Ozzie and Dan Silna agreed to fold their franchise in exchange for a portion of the TV revenue generated by the four lucky ABA teams going to the NBA, starting in 1980.

And how long must these four teams pay the Silnas? They've got to cough up the money for as long as the NBA exists.

It is rumored that the brothers have made approximately $240 million so far.

There's no question that's a bunch of money for doing nothing. But apparently, it's not enough.

And that's why the whole 36-year situation is making its way back into the courts. No red, white and blue basketballs in this court though, just bailiffs, gavels and witness chairs.

Those wacky brothers are now claiming that the league isn't playing fair. They claim that the league is withholding their share of the revenue from international broadcasts and cable packages.

What makes things a little more complicated is that the judge who provided over the original agreement, died last year.

So a new judge has said she is willing to look into the matter. I sure can't even imagine why anyone would want to take this case on.

The attorneys representing the NBA teams say it is very clear in the original agreement that the brothers are only supposed to get money from national broadcasts by tradition TV networks.

But attorneys representing the brothers say the contract agreed to "all broadcasts." Which they claim includes modern TV coverage like NBA League Pass, which allows viewers to watch out-of-town games.

Now don't get me wrong, I'm all for Americans achieving great heights and getting compensated handsomely for it.

I'm not one of those guys who is envious of rich people simply because I don't have as much money to spend as they do.

But I don't have a lot of tolerance for these two brothers, who you just know are constantly looking for loopholes in the agreement that might get them even more free money than they're entitled to.

The judge is trying to keep this escapade out of court and she's asked the two sides to try and get together and figure this out.

But it's too late, the lawyers are already circling the waters and they smell the sweet smell of bloody money.

Would it be a surprise if one brother sued the other for his half of the lute some day?

A sporting view By Mark Vasto

@sportingview

Ah, yes... Twitter... the proverbial "game changer." The website that lets anybody and everybody broadcast their sudden mental nugget in 140 characters or less to as many people as they can get to prove they care about what they have to say.

Personally, I've never been impressed by the supposed concept, but I'm impressed by the company itself. They've done a masterful job of seizing the day, marketing themselves and, along with Facebook, they have most of the civilized world's mind share (or at least their attention) in that sector.

But if you break it down to the primordial ooze level, it's basically nothing more than a bunch of people shouting. It's a lot of noise and fanfare. Sports fans should readily recognize that as the overall soundtrack they hear at a typical stadium or arena.

It's the Internet version of the guy who had too many beers, stands up, cones his hands to his mouth and yells "YOU SUCK!" to the wide receiver out of Michigan making $5 million a year because he dropped a ball. In a stadium, maybe 30 people hear his rant. If he's able to meet his goal of catching the ear of the wide receiver that just failed to meet his goal of catching a ball? Maybe then he's got 31 listeners.

Maybe one of the 31 people in earshot is impressed, influenced or drunkenly mistaken enough to repeat what he just heard. On Twitter, that phenomenon happens all the time in a form of a "retweet." So at the genetic level it's not anything new, folks – it's just humans being human. A good tweet is akin to flaunting our opposing thumbs and linguistic abilities to an ape – an ape with a poor Internet connection sitting in the section above you and to the right. By default, all you can hope for is for them to ape what you had to say and/or buy you a banana. (And yes... that's why they call it "ape.")

Twitter can, however, bring the average fan closer to the player in ways never before accessible. Maybe you're online when you get the chance to spar with one of your favorite players, like I did the other night from my personal twitter account with noted game-show host Chuck Woolery. After Bob Barker, Monty Hall, Richard Dawson and Alex Trebeck, Woolery is one of the top 10 game-show hosts in history.

He's a real player. Here's how our game went down:

@chuckwoolery: "I'm amazed with the stark difference between right and left. One group asking for prayer for someone the other side is slinging insults."

My reply: "Right, Chuck. You keep praying and pretending that posts like this aren't veiled attempts at insults."

Chuck: "You have not seen me call names or use toilet humor to tear someone down."

Retort: "No... but I've seen you play plenty of games."

That was enough fun for me to want to get into the game. Shoot me a message or shoot me down, but please do follow this column on Twitter and keep advancing the discussion. Follow me and I'll follow you... @sportingview. I'm game.

Your good healthBy Paul G. Donahue, M.D.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have a problem with my feet swelling. They get so big that they hurt when I walk. My doctor is puzzled. He thinks maybe it's due to my heart pills, but he can't change them – my heart doctor has to. I have had two heart attacks, bypass surgery and a defibrillator put in my chest. When I'm in bed, the swelling goes down to almost normal. When I am up, it returns, even if I am sitting. I'd appreciate any suggestions. – E.L.

that make the heart pump with more force. There are other causes of edema, but this is the one that seems to fit you best. The booklet on edema explains its causes and treatments. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue – No. 106W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

I believe I'm safe in saying your problem is chronic congestive heart failure. Your heart is pumping so weakly that blood circulates sluggishly. When you're up or when you're sitting, gravity pulls fluid out of your leg's vessels, and it is the cause of your swelling. In the horizontal position in bed, gravity doesn't have this effect, and the fluid stays in blood vessels. The swelling is called edema (e-DEE-muh).

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Several bouts of stomach pain brought me to the doctor. The pain is located in my upper right side. The doctor was certain I was having gallbladder attacks due to stones. She sent me for an ultrasound test of my gallbladder. I don't have stones. I have something called a liver hemangioma. My doctor says I don't need any treatment. I never heard of this and wonder what your thoughts are. – P.K.

During the day, take frequent breaks to lie down with your legs propped up higher than your heart. When you sit, rest your legs on the seat of a chair put in front of you. Walk as much as you can during the day. The contracting leg muscles push fluid back into circulation.

A hemangioma is a small, ball-shaped mass of blood vessels. If 100 people had a liver scan, seven would be found to have a hemangioma. Women develop them more often than men do. They do not become cancers. They're rarely a source of constant pain, unless they grow quite large and press on adjacent tissue. They don't cause attacks of pain. Have you found out what causes your pain?

Limit the salt you eat; salt makes the body retain fluid. Read food labels. Most of our salt intake comes from the foods we eat, not from adding salt at the table or in cooking. But don't do either. Your total daily salt intake should be less than 5,700 mg, preferably 3,800 mg. If salt is on the label as "sodium," your total daily intake should be 2,300 mg or less. A better goal is 1,500 mg.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. (c) 2011 North America Synd., Inc. All Rights Reserved.

Moore Texas by Roger Moore Oct. 15, 1976:
The first ever VP debate was held in Houston between Mondale and Dole (Keep in mind that Texa VP under FDR John Nance Garner said that “ the Vice Presidency wasn’t worth a bucket of warm BEEP”). How could the debate be memorable ?

GO FIGURE! by Linda Thistle

Social Security Q&A By Ray Vigil

Q: I’m retired and the only income I have is from an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). Are my IRA withdrawals considered “earnings”? Could they reduce my monthly Social Security benefits?

A: No. We count only the wages you earn from a job or your net profit if you’re self-employed. Non-work income such as annuities, investment income, interest, capital gains, and other government benefits are not counted and will not affect your Social Security benefits. Most pensions will not affect your benefits either. However, your benefit may be affected by a government pension from work on which you did not pay Social Security tax. For more information, visit our website at www.socialsecurity.gov or call us toll-free at 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778).

Q: I was turned down for Supplemental Security Income (SSI); can I appeal the decision?

A: If you disagree with a decision made on your claim, you can appeal it. The steps you can take are explained in Your Right To Question A Decision Made On Your Supplemental Security Income (SSI) Claim, available online at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/11008.

html. Also, you have the right to have a representative, such as an attorney, help you. More information is in Your Right To Representation, at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10075.html. Read these and other publications online at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs.

Q: Can I get both Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and Social Security benefits based on my disability?

A: Many people eligible for Social Security disability benefits also may be eligible for SSI. The disability decision for one program is the same for the other, but you must meet additional resource and income limits to qualify for SSI benefits. Learn all about SSI and whether or not you may qualify by reading the publication, You May Be Able To Get Supplemental Security Income (SSI) at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/11069.html.

For more information on any of the questions listed above, visit our website at www.socialsecurity.gov or call us at 1-800-772-1213. If you have any questions that you would like to have answered, please mail them to the Social Security Office, 1111 Gateway West, Attn: Ray Vigil, El Paso, Texas 79935.

CryptoQuip

This is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string’s word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.

STRANGE BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• It was 20th-century Canadian-American economist John Kenneth Galbraith who made the following sage observation: “Faced with the choice between changing one’s mind and proving that there is no need to do so, almost everyone gets busy on the proof.”

• The original jack-o’-lanterns were turnips, not pumpkins. The custom began in Ireland, where residents hollowed out and carved faces into large turnips for the Celtic harvest festival of Samhain. The turnips, placed on windowsills, were believed to ward off evil spirits. In Scotland, young men would dress in white and blacken their faces in an imitation of the dead.

• Peter the Great was known during his reign in the late 17th and early 18th centuries as “Emperor and Autocrat of All the Russias.” In order to raise money, he taxed just about anything he could think of, including births, burials, chimneys and even beards.

• By law, if you are planning to build in Washington, D.C., the edifice must be no taller than the Capitol building.

• You probably know that physicist Albert Einstein was awarded the Nobel Prize. You might not realize, however, that the prize was for his work on the photoelectric effect of light, not for his more famous theory of relativity.

• If you are like the average American woman, you will spend a grand total of 60 days of your life in the practice of removing body hair.

• In 2010, the record for the world’s largest pumpkin was broken. The Atlantic giant pumpkin, grown by Chris Stevens of New Richmond, Wisc., weighed in at the Stillwater Harvest Fest at a whopping 1,810.5 pounds.

Thought for the Day: “You must learn from the mistakes of others. You can’t possibly live long enough to make them all yourself.”
