DUCK and COVER

START NOW – Saving for retirement needs to to start early.

Don't put saving for your retirement on the back burner

the importance of saving for retirement but unfortunately, not everyone's concerns translate to action.

While 93 percent of working Americans know they should be contributing to their retirement, only 72 percent are actually doing so, according to the results of Capital One ShareBuilder's Financial Freedom Survey (accessible at http://tinyurl.com/n9zvksh). The same study found that while nearly threefifths of respondents plan to retire by age 65, almost the same amount of people fear they'll never save enough for retirement.

"Unfortunately, saving for the future is often put on the back-burner for what may seem like more pressing financial priorities, such as paying for children's college education," says Dan Greenshields, president of Capital One ShareBuilder, Inc. "Today more than ever before, individuals are responsible for ensuring their own financial security during retirement."

The earlier you begin to plan and save for your post-working years, the better, Greenshields stresses. Here are some top things to consider:

· How much will you need to finance your retirement? Do you plan to move, travel or take up new hobbies? Also take in to account potential unexpected and rising costs, like healthcare.

• You can estimate your retirement needs by identifying potential expenses, as well as by calculating the amount you might receive from each potential source of retirement income, such as Social Security, pensions, personal investments and employment earnings.

• Don't be surprised if what you need to rewarding, perhaps even enjoyable.

(StatePoint) Most Americans understand retire is a large sum - since this money may need to support you for 20 or 30 years (or more). Fortunately, there are ways to help maximize your retirement savings over time.

· Investing early for retirement and contributing as much as possible to taxadvantaged employer-sponsored retirement plans and IRAs are two ways to help build vour retirement dollars.

• Automatically transfer a regular contribution from your paycheck to your retirement account.

• In some cases, it may be appropriate to consider rolling over or transferring funds to an account without minimums. However, there may be some cases where leaving the funds may be the right decision. If you opt to rollover funds, Capital One ShareBuilder, an online investing platform, offers flexibility by allowing customers to trade stocks, exchangetraded funds, mutual funds, and options. More information about whether or not you should rollover funds can be found at www. ShareBuilder.com.

• Understand your time horizon, risk tolerance and goals. Generally speaking, your risk tolerances will change over time.

• Make planning a family affair by scheduling times to discuss your financial future with your partner or family members over dinner, on a picnic or as part of a weekend getaway.

· Consider working with a qualified financial professional to help ensure your retirement plan is on target.

It is never too early or too late to get started - and while it may seem daunting, there are quality tools and resources that might help you along the way. Sometimes it can be

Refinancing still available

(StatePoint) If you're a homeowner, you probably know that refinancing could mean lower monthly payments, lower interest rates and a shorter-term loan. However, if your mortgage is underwater, a refinance is hard to come by and you may have been turned down in the past. But don't despair just yet.

A government initiative, introduced by the Federal Housing Finance Agency, is making it easier to refinance. The Home Affordable Refinance Program (HARP) is enabling homeowners who owe almost as much or more than the current value of their homes to take advantage of the long-term benefits of refinancing.

With recent program modifications and interest rates still at historically low levels, it is now easier to refinance with HARP, and those who have been turned down in the past may now be eligible.

Freddie Mac, and you have little or negative equity in your home, you may be eligible for HARP. To find out more information, visit www.harp.gov.

Before resigning yourself to high interest rates, take a look at available options.

The eatery's policy prohibiting women from wearing pants to dine didn't change until 1969. That was the year when "Laugh-In" actress Judy Carne entered wearing what has been described as a "tunic-topped pants suit." When she was told she wouldn't be allowed to dine, she took off her pants and left them in the coat-check room. The tunic by itself just barely qualified as a micromini, but it was enough. ## San Elizario Independent District SPECIAL EDUCATION/CHILD FIND

The San Elizario Independent School District provides services for children who are eligible for special education. Eligible special education students will be afforded a free, appropriate public education beginning on their third birthday and continuing through their 21st year. Children who are identified as auditorially impaired, visually impaired or deaf-blind may be served from birth through 21 years of age. The San Elizario Independent School District provides special education and related services to students residing within the District boundaries. A student with a disability must meet eligibility guidelines in one or more areas including physical disability, intellectual disability, emotional disturbance, learning disability, autism, speech impairment, traumatic brain injury, visual or auditory impairment. This impairment must significantly affect the student's ability to progress adequately without support services.

If a child is experiencing learning difficulties, the parent may contact the person listed below to learn about the district's overall general education referral or screening system for support services. This system links students to a variety of support options including referral for special education evaluation. Students having difficulty in the regular classroom should be considered for tutorial, compensatory, and other support services that are available to all students. At any time, a parent is entitled to request an evaluation for special education services. Within a reasonable amount of time, the district must decide if the evaluation is needed. If the evaluation is needed, the parent will be notified and asked to provide consent for the evaluation. The district must complete the evaluation and the report within 45 school days of the date the district received the written consent. The district must give a copy of the report to the parent. If the District determines that the evaluation is not needed, the district will provide the parent with a written notice that explains why the child will not be evaluated. This written notice will include a statement that informs the parent of their rights if they disagree with the district. Additionally, the notice must inform the parent how to obtain a copy of the Notice of Procedural Safeguards-Rights of Parents of Students with Disabilities.

The 'King' goes back to Cleveland, arena sells out

By Steve Escajeda Special to the Courier

The American sports enthusiast is a funny creature, chocked full of a wide range of emotions.

Those emotions can run from adulation to indifference to euphoria to ambivalence to jealousy to pettiness to scorn to dismay to downright hatred.

All of which have entered the psyche of the Cleveland Cavaliers fan at one time or another over the last decade.

last week that he was leaving the Miami Heat and was returning home to Cleveland.

There was some shock at the announcement. It wasn't totally out of the question that he would return, but it still rocked the sports world once it was made official.

What was extremely shocking to me was the way the Cleveland fans, who were calling for the king's head when he left, went nuts with joy when they heard he was coming back.

about the financial ramifications "the return" would bring to the already generous size of his wallet.

Don't believe me. Cleveland fans went out and bought the remainder of the allotted 12,000 season tickets for 2014-15 season less than eight hours after Bron Bron made his decision.

Naturally, I figured that the Cavs would also make a killing selling LeBron's newest Cleveland Cavalier jersey, but people were already wearing them on the day of the news.

I don't have a clue where all those #23 The king himself, LeBron James, announced Cleveland Cavs jerseys came from. I could have sworn they were all burned by angry fans four years ago.

> The one thing the move will do this year is the same thing the move did four years ago, it will make the NBA season more interesting.

> Let's face it; the whole Miami Heat-thing was growing old – just like Dwyane Wade's legs.

Fans around the nation have a new team to cheer or hiss at next season. It remains to be Even Cavaliers owner Dan Gilbert did a seen how neatly the pieces will fit together but complete 180 to worship at the feet of James. it'll be fun to keep track - especially the first

any of that and the fan in me is already in "anticipation" mode.

Anyway, the American sports fan is as fickle as they come. They'll turn on a guy who disses their town and quickly forgive a guy for beating his wife.

They'll chastise a guy for missing the gamewinning shot and look the other way when a guy is arrested for drugs, guns or worse.

The bottom line is winning.

If a player can help the team win, all is forgiven and forgotten - forever. At least until he takes a selfie with Justin Beiber.

Over the last four years it seemed like Cleveland fans practically ranked LeBron just below Hitler, Bin Laden and the Devil, on their personal popularity meter.

in recent years, but there's no doubt that James was still public enemy #1 as of a month ago.

But the chance of winning trumps everything. Magically, perception erases reality.

The one negative for Cleveland fans is that leave in the first place.

Of course I think he was actually more excited time LeBron goes against his former Heat they will now be seen as ordinary. They've been walking around with a sort of victim-See what I mean, we're months away from status mentality and the rest of the country could empathize.

> Not anymore, they are now considered to be one of the frontrunners for the Eastern Conference title next year.

> This means they are no longer the lovable losers, the Chicago Cubs of the NBA. I'm not sure the city of Cleveland loves this role. It surely isn't used to it.

> There's no doubt that the city got an infusion of hope last week. Hope is something that keeps fans, and non-fans, striving toward a particular goal, a purpose.

> LeBron's decision was a win-win for Cleveland and the NBA. And over the last four years it was a win-win (like in two NBA titles) for Miami.

The question is how long will this roller-Okay, maybe he inched ahead of the Devil coaster-ride of emotions remain on the upswing for Cleveland fans?

> Though James only signed a two-year contract, he's expected to finish his career there.

But then again, nobody ever thought he'd League Baseball and its fans commemorated the 75th anniversary of Lou Gehrig's farewell to baseball speech. Though written off the a cathedral to the game - the cuff by Gehrig, a player whose humility was as legendary as his sentiments, as if to add a ghostly mighty swing, the immortal speech emphasis foreshadowing his own is generally regarded as one of the imminent death.

On the Fourth of July, Major great speeches in American history. Delivered over the public address system of the cavernous old Yankee Stadium – then already considered speech famously echoes Gehrig's luckiest man... (the luckiest man)... on the face of the Earth (on the face of the Earth)."

Gehrig's speech, delivered at the end of his playing career, two years before his death due to a stillincurable disease, reminds us of a higher purpose and a state of grace. But while Americans are adept at soaring turns of phrase, it never takes long before someone drags the discourse down into the gutter.

Instead of reading tributes about Gehrig, the buzz on the Internet surrounds a $10 million lawsuit filed the day previous by a fan caught napping in his box seats on camera during a Yankees-Red Sox game. The complaint reads that he was made fun of by announcers, causing him great mental distress, and the subsequent posting of the video online invited more slurs

"Today (today)... I consider regarding his physical appearance. myself (I consider myself)... the Apparently he feels his good name was disparaged, and he needs to seek redress. He has to keep up his reputation at work, after all.

Whether or not the annoyingly distracting and absurd $10 million case has any merit, it occurs to me that Gehrig's replacement at first base, a ballplayer named "Babe" Dahlgren, never made more than $50,000 in his entire career. A closer look reveals that after he replaced Gehrig, he was traded eight times over the next 12 years. Certainly, he had larger-thanlife shoes to fill for the Yankees, shoes that only became larger after Gehrig's death.

But Dahlgren's case is notable in that he was the first baseball player ever tested for drugs. Dahlgren had sought more money during his career, and baseball executives like Branch Rickey and Joe McCarthy unfairly maligned him, saying he was not only a mediocre talent, but a marijuana smoker, as well. That story is better told in his grandson Matt's book, "Rumor Has It," in which he sheds light on the unfounded, unproven claims that his grandfather spent a life agonizing over.

Who knows what curious cases tomorrow will bring? As for me, watching the game with my family on the Fourth of July, stoking up all of these stories just because we decided to watch a bunch of guys throw a ball around, I'm reminded that things aren't so bad... or, at least, they could be worse. Who says there's no joy in Mudville? Gehrig's American story reminds us all just how lucky we really are after all.

Your good health By Keith Roach, M.D.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I have had high blood pressure at times, and my doctor said I have white coat syndrome. I am on metoprolol and ramipril. My blood pressure spikes at times. Recently I didn't feel right. My blood pressure was reading 200/120, more or less, over 12 hours. I went to my doctor, who gave me something that would bring it down and told me to double up on metoprolol. I took readings at home, and for the next three days it was better but still on the high side. The average over 12 hours was 145/90. I went to a specialist and took along my readings. He didn't seem alarmed that I had several spikes of 190/105. He told me it's normal to have high blood pressure readings, everyone has them. I can understand occasional spikes, but mine goes up and stays up for hours. -G.

Let's first define white-coat hypertension. It's a condition than blood pressure at home. Consistent regular readings at home are a better marker of overall blood pressure. At first glance, that doesn't seem to be what you have. You have high blood pressure consistently, at least recently.

Even people with whose blood pressure generally is wellcontrolled - either naturally or because they take medication - will have some readings that are higher than others. However, Dr. Roach regrets that he is readings of 195/105 are too average of 145/90 is too high.

Q: It's hard for me to get around because of my disability. Can I apply for disability benefits from home?

A: Yes - in fact, the best way to apply for disability benefits is online. Our online disability application is convenient and secure. You can apply for benefits over the Internet at www.socialsecurity. gov/applyfordisability. If you do not have access to the Internet, you can call us at 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778) to schedule an appointment to visit your local Social Security office to apply. However you decide to apply, begin by looking at our Disability Starter Kit at www.socialsecurity. gov/applyfordisability. It will help you prepare for your application or interview.
