Exercise

The older you get the more you find ways to avoid exercise, says the Association of Mature American Citizens. As one wag put it: the only exercise some people get is jumping to conclusions, running down their friends, side stepping responsibility, and pushing their luck. But the fact is, the older you get the more you need to exert yourself. You must overcome the inertia of aging and find ways of improving your heart rate and blood sugar levels by developing good exercise habits. Of course, it is important to check with your doctor before beginning any regimen that involves strenuous activities, says AMAC. Exercise is particular good for fending off Type 2 Diabetes and other chronic conditions. In fact, the World Health Organization, which says that a healthy diet, increased physical activity and avoiding tobacco use can prevent 80% of premature heart disease, 80% of type 2 diabetes cases and 40% of cancers.

Family business thrives in safe market

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

EL PASO COUNTY – A fourth generation family business, headquartered in El Paso since 1917 and today with subsidiaries in Mexico and Latin America, is making a name for itself in the security products business.

Under the supervision of David E. Saucedo, Sr. and his two sons, David and Maury, the Saucedo Company has grown to be a leader in the state when it comes to providing high-quality products and services. Saucedo Co. family members were presented recently with the Founders Award during the 2013 Texas Family Business of the Year awards banquet held at Baylor University’s Bill Daniel Student Center in Waco, Texas.

According to Bill Worthington, director of the Institute for Family Business, the Texas Family Business of the Year awards program recognizes outstanding firms whose families demonstrate a commitment to each other and to business continuity, and who are responsive to the needs of their employees, communities, and industries.

To expand its growing market, the local company recently introduced the INKAS Safe Manufacturing line of ultra-premium safes to the El Paso and Mexico market. INKAS Safe Manufacturing is a Canadian-owned company located in Toronto. INKAS builds ultra-premium, high-security, custom safes for retailers, government agencies, financial institutions, jewelry stores, pharmaceutical chains and personal treasury safes.

SECURE – David Saucedo displays the interior one the company’s luxury safes.

“We’re excited to partner up with The Saucedo Company in Texas to distribute and market our high-quality Canadian safes. The trustworthiness of their brand and the storied history of their family made our decision to partner a relatively easy one,” stated Christopher Kastelic, Sales Executive at INKAS Security Group.

The INKAS Security Group is a global leader in safe manufacturing and armored vehicle manufacturing, specializing in the production of armored sport-utility vehicles, luxury sedans and executive limousines, stated Mariana Terrazas, communications director for the Saucedo Company.

According to David E. Saucedo II, a fourth generation executive at the Saucedo Company, the company’s success is because they responded to their customers demand for the highest levels of security by offering the absolute best safes on the market.

Saucedo stated that by teaming up with the Canadian security group, it will allow them to offer the top of the line products and services. “Protecting the valuables of our customers in an INKAS ultra-premium safe provides them with a level of tranquility that money cannot buy,” he asserted.

Pottery potsherds topic of talk at museum

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

EL PASO COUNTY – Visitors, campers, hikers, who have trekked through any of the numerous outdoor tourist sites in the West Texas and Southeastern New Mexico desert lands and mountains, invariably find undecorated brown pieces of pottery, known as potsherds, strewn around the area.

Anthropologist Dr. David Hill will lead a discussion about these ubiquitous artifacts, referred to by local archaeologists as brownware, beginning at 2 p.m., Saturday, August 16, at the El Paso Museum of Archeology, 4301 Transmountain Road.

Hill, who works for APAC (a heritage management firm in Carlsbad, New Mexico), stated that since these potsherds lack decoration and are often weathered it makes it nearly impossible to establish their source or age; however, he added that by applying analytical techniques such as thin section petrography and instrumental neutron activation analysis it is possible to identify the areas where the brownwares were made.

Hill stated that a recent research study, that focuses on the mineralogical and chemical characterization of brownware pottery from sites in Southern New Mexico and West Texas, concluded that brownware ceramics were found to have been produced within two regions, the Sierra Blanca and Capitan Mountains, an area known as the Lincoln County Porphyry Belt,

COME AND LEARN – El Paso Museum of Archeology (located at 4301 Transmountain Road) will host a special presentation by Dr. David Hill, a renowned anthropologist who has studied archeological sites throughout the Southwest. The event, which is free and open to the public, is sponsored by the El Paso Archaeological Society.

and in the vicinity of El Paso.

During the discussion, Hill will share information about these areas where several distinct sources of pottery were identified. According to the anthropologist, brownware pottery was transported between prehistoric communities in the two mountain zones and to the desert lowlands, with ceramic vessels being transported one hundred miles or more from their points of origin.

Hill’s background in archaeology spans 35 years. He has conducted archaeological fieldwork at various sites including the old missions in the El Paso’s lower valley and at prehistoric, proto-historic, and Spanish colonial sites across the Southwest. He has worked on archeological sites in the southern Great Plains, southern Illinois, northern Virginia, and in Jiangxi, China. He has also analyzed ceramic collections from across the United States, from Ecuador, the Caribbean, and from the “Tekta Bernu”, a Classical Period shipwreck near Turkey.

Hill earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in anthropology from the University of, a Master of Arts degree from Wichita State University, and a doctoral degree at the University of Texas at Austin.

Veterans Post By Freddy Groves

New health-care bill

Before Congress raced off to vacation in August, senators voted 91-3 to pass the long-awaited, $17 billion veterans emergency health-care bill.

Here are a few tidbits from the bill:

- Veterans will receive a Choice Card for care, but don't get excited yet. To qualify for this card, a veteran must have served within the past five years, or already be signed up with Veterans Affairs health care. It will be more of an ID/insurance card that gives service information for eligibility. You likely won't be able to take the card to a private doctor unless the care has been approved by the VA.

- If a veteran is given a long wait time for appointments (over 30 days) or lives more than 40 miles from care, he or she will be eligible to get private sector care. That 40 miles is "straight line," aka geodesic distance.

- Veterans who were sexually assaulted will receive care.

- Twenty-seven new clinics will open.

- The VA will hire $5 billion worth of new health-care providers.

- Bonuses will be capped at $360 million per year.

- The VA secretary will be allowed to fire senior VA executives much more quickly.

When they look for incompetents to fire, I hope they aim their lasers at the VA medical center in Kentucky. A veteran collapsed at home and was transported there, where he was hooked up to life support. By the time his wife and family arrived at the hospital, staff told her that her husband was dead. They gave her a specific time of death. Distraught, she asked to see him one more time to say goodbye. What she found was a living, breathing husband with good heart rate and blood pressure who was responding to commands.

Freddy Groves regrets that he cannot personally answer reader questions, but will incorporate them into his column whenever possible. Send email to columnreply2@gmail.com. (c) 2014 King Features Synd., Inc.

Laure Searls

Searls is named Master Trustee

By Gustavo Reveles Acosta

Special to the Courier

CANUTILLO – Canutillo Independent School District Trustee Laure Searls has earned the designation of Master Trustee. She joins an elite group of school officials who are equipped with the tools and knowledge to be effective education leaders.

Searls earned the designation after completing the yearlong Leadership TASB program organized by the Texas Association of School Boards. Master Trustee is the highest designation recognized by the Texas Association of School Boards. “We are elated to have Mrs. Searls recognized in such a wonderful manner,” said CISD Board President Rachel Quintana. “She represents everything that is good about our District, and we are certain that her new skills will help us move CISD forward.”

Leadership TASB is an exclusive program that selects only a handful of candidates each year to participate in the intensive training. Only about 700 trustees in all of Texas have ever received the title of Master Trustee. Searls said she was happy to have participated in Leadership TASB, especially because she was able to host one of the training sessions in El Paso and Canutillo.

“We face some unique challenges along the Border, but we also are leading the way in education,” she said. “I was happy to share with my fellow trustees from throughout Texas, a glimpse of the good work that is happening in our schools here in CISD and the El Paso region.”

Back to school vaccinations

By Dusty Warden
Special to the Courier

EL PASO COUNTY – Back-to-school season is here. It’s time for parents to gather supplies and back packs. It’s also the perfect time to make sure your kids are up to date on their vaccines. To celebrate the importance of immunizations throughout life – and make sure children are protected with all the vaccines they need – Immunize El Paso is proudly participating in National Immunization Awareness Month.

Failure to comply with Texas vaccination requirements may result in a child being denied entry into school. Throughout the month of August, Immunize El Paso will be canvassing every corner of El Paso County well as expanding the operating hours of both their Eastside and Downtown clinics.

“Getting children all of the vaccines recommended by CDC’s immunization schedule is one of the most important things parents can do to protect their children’s health – and that of classmates and the community,” said Danny Acosta, Director for Immunize El Paso. “If you haven’t done so already, now is the time to check with us to find out what vaccines your child needs.”

All El Paso area schools require children to be current on vaccinations before enrolling to protect the health of all students. Today’s childhood vaccines protect against serious and potentially life-threatening diseases, including polio, measles, whooping cough and chickenpox. When children are not vaccinated, they are at increased risk and can spread diseases to others in their classrooms and community – including babies who are too young to be fully vaccinated, and people with weakened immune systems due to cancer and other health conditions.

Credit 101 for college freshman

To parents with a freshman entering college this fall: You’re probably expecting to shell out major bucks for tuition, room and board and a million other necessities over the next few years. But before you send your kid off, make sure you share one gift likely to steer him or her along the road to financial security – a sound understanding of how credit works.

You probably learned the hard way yourself that young adults encounter many unfamiliar expenses – and temptations – upon entering college or the workforce. So it’s important to help your kids avoid early financial missteps that could damage their credit for years to come.

The first step in managing personal finances is mastering the basic checking account and debit card. A few tips you can pass along:

Look for a bank or credit union that charges no monthly usage fee, requires no minimum balance and has conveniently located ATMs so you don’t rack up foreign ATM charges.

Enter all transactions in a check register or in a budgeting tool like Mint.com and review your account online at least weekly to verify when deposits, checks, purchases and automatic payments have cleared.

Avoid writing checks or making debit card transactions unless your current balance will cover them – such transactions often clear instantly.

A good way to build sound credit is to demonstrate responsible credit card use. But people under age 21 must have a parent or other responsible adult cosign credit card accounts unless they can prove sufficient income to repay the debt. So how can parents help their kids begin building a credit history if they can’t open their own account? A couple of alternatives:

- Make them an authorized user on one of your accounts. They’ll get their own card and you can usually restrict the amount they’re able to charge. Authorized users are not legally responsible to pay balances owed – that’s your responsibility, so tread carefully.

- You can add them as a joint account holder to a new or existing account – preferably, one with a small credit limit. Joint account holders are equally liable to pay off the account.
- Just remember, any account activity, good or bad, goes on both your credit reports, so careful account monitoring is critical.

If your kids haven’t yet demonstrated financial maturity they may not be ready for an unsecured credit card or loan. Other alternatives include:

- A secured credit card, where users can charge up to the amount deposited to open the account. Purchases are charged against the account’s revolving credit limit. As they pay off the balance the available credit rises, just like a regular credit card. After a period of on-time payments, ask the lender to convert it to an unsecured card, or to at least add an unsecured amount to the account.
- A prepaid debit card, where you load the card with money in advance and they use the card for purchases or ATM withdrawals. You monitor account activity online or by phone.
- With each, fees and restrictions may apply so shop around for the best terms.

If you need help educating your kids about personal financial management, a good resource is What’s My Score (www.whatsmyscore.org), a financial literacy program for young adults run by Visa Inc. It features a comprehensive workbook called Money 101: A Crash Course in Better Money Management, which can be downloaded for free.

Bottom line: Getting your kids off on the right foot, credit-wise, can make all the difference to their future financial health.

Kugler’s sophomore season holds promise for the Miners

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

This week marks the start of the “real” Sean Kugler era at UTEP.

Kugler, the second-year coach of the Miners, and his players are at Camp Alpine getting ready for the 2014 season.

Kugler had a rough go of it in his first year, but in reality, he had almost no chance of winning.

He was saddled with players from the Mike Price era, he had to bring in his own staff and he had to introduce a whole new philosophy to the team.

There aren’t many coaches who win anywhere with that much change in such little time.

But if there is a silver lining in last year’s 2-10 season – it’s the fact that it doesn’t carry over to 2014.

Everything is new, everyone is optimistic and everyone has a chance to win the Conference USA championship.

Well, not according to the media members covering the league, who picked the Miners to finish dead last in the conference’s West Division.

But realistically, can you blame them?

The Miners started the 2013 season on a bad note and finished it in even worse fashion.

UTEP lost five of its last six games. That’s not overly shocking in itself – but when you consider that all five losses were by 31 points or more – it paints a rather bleak picture.

But the best thing going for the 2014 version of the UTEP football team is its consistency.

There’s an old saying that goes like this, familiarity breeds contempt. But in the case of the Miners, “familiarity” is a very good thing.

The team has all their coaches back and that means that the philosophies haven’t changed. The players will do things the same way they did last season.

Hopefully better!

But the fact that nothing new has to be learned, that the players all know the system, is a tremendous advantage over what they went through a year ago.

Naturally, the biggest responsibility rests on the shoulders of quarterback Jameill Showers, who enjoyed watching most of the Miners games from two venues – from the sidelines and on his back.

Due to an undersized offensive line, Showers spent a lot of the time running for his life. Sometimes he wasn’t able to get away.

He played in only seven games a year ago. This season his chances of staying on the field and enjoying things on his feet are greatly enhanced by an offensive line that will average about 310 pounds.

So if anybody asks you where the beef is, you can point toward University Avenue.

The absolute best thing about the Miners will be the running game with the return of two excellent backs. Aaron Jones and Nathan Jeffery should help an offense that averaged only 21 points a game.

The Miners were used to averaging at least 35 points a game under Mike Price. If Jones and Jeffery have the kind of season that’s expected of them, it will open up things for the passing game.

Of course under Price, the Miners could score 35 points. Unfortunately they would also give up 45.

The biggest question of all is will the defense be able to stop anybody?

Last year’s defense was right where El Pasoans have come to expect it to be, near the very bottom of the national standings. UTEP’s defense ranked 107th out of 123 teams.

To make things even worse is the fact that the offense ranked 103rd.

If the Miners can learn how to tackle and keep a guy from turning an 11-yard completion into a 65-yard touchdown scamper, that would be a huge step in the right direction.

One of my favorite teams to watch is the Stanford Cardinal. They rely on the running game, throw enough to keep the defense honest and the first downs coming, and they play a very nasty brand of defense.

It looks to me like that is what Kugler is trying to build at UTEP.

He’s already changing what average lineman at UTEP looks like. But even more, he’s trying to instill an attitude of hard work, responsibility, unity and sacrifice.

They say that a big key to winning is mental.

If the players really buy into Kugler’s philosophy – they’ve turned a corner.

A sporting view By Mark Vasto

Sports history’s greatest hits

What were the top moments in sports history?

That question presented itself amid a round of coffee and doughnuts one morning. It had to be an iconic moment, something that was replayed in the highlight reel of your mind. In no particular order, the argument was made for the following:

1. Babe Ruth’s called shot

Footage of the moment, an at-bat against the Chicago Cubs during a World Series, actually exists.

Regardless of whether you believe he called the shot or not, the moment has become the de facto standard for mimicry in sports. Everyone who has ever swung a baseball bat has at one time or another, pointed to the stands.

2. The Miracle on Ice

This is self-explanatory. The story of the 1980 U.S. Men’s Hockey team and their gold medal-winning ways has everything you want in a story, even the foil, the Russians. It’s an underdog story, and it comes packaged with Al Michael’s timeless call: “Do you believe in miracles? YES!”

Also, it’s a cautionary tale: Herb Brooks, the men’s head coach, will forever be remembered as wearing that ridiculous bell-bottom, scotch-plaid suit during the game. Incidentally, the win over the Russians was not the gold-medal game; it was a semifinal, and Team USA won gold over Finland in the finals. (Brooks wore a classic blue suit in that game... figures.)

3. The Hail Mary and The Immaculate Reception

Today, football is considered the national pastime, supplanting baseball. This is directly attributable to the on-field battles between the Chuck Knoll’s Pittsburgh Steelers and the Tom Landry’s Dallas Cowboys. The exploits of Roger Staubach, Terry Bradshaw, Franco Harris and Tony Dorsett were not only riveting to watch, they inspired sports writers to coin phrases. Staubach’s profession of faith to a reporter after launching a last-minute, desperation pass to win was the precursor to Tim Tebow’s touchdown genuflect and is now a part of football cannon.

While “The Hail Mary” pass entered the lexicon and the playbooks in ways the unplanned Bradshaw to Harris via Fuqua “Immaculate Reception” never can, those who remember how every primetime television show featured “The Dallas Cowgirls” and their relevance, understand just how integral these two teams are to American culture as a whole.

4. Ali defeats Foreman

Ask anybody who the greatest fighter of all time was, and you’ll get various answers. Ask anybody who the greatest heavyweight-boxing champion of all time was, and you will get Muhammad Ali. Though he was at his peak in 1966, his fights with Cleveland Williams and Sonny Liston merely showcased his skills.

A decade later and after a hallmark Supreme Court case regarding the Vietnam War, clearly diminished in skills, Ali beat the guy who everyone thought was unbeatable in George Foreman. Unfortunately for Foreman, who made zillions off of his entrepreneurial skills (Foreman Grill, anyone?), he will always be remembered as the foil, the erstwhile “dope” in the hit me until you get so tired I knock you out “rope-a-dope” strategy that Ali employed.

Next week: More greatest moments.

Your good health

By Keith Roach, M.D.

DEAR DR. ROACH: For the past eight months, I have had a twitch in the inside of my right ear. I can hear it twitching, and I can feel it. It seems to get worse when I talk on the phone (it's my phone ear), but sometimes I wake up with it twitching. It feels like when your eye twitches, only it's inside my ear. I could liken the movement to a snapping of fingers. It's more a vibration than a crunch. I do hear a sound when it happens, similar to when you get water plugging up your ear. So it plugs/unplugs with each twitch. I have gone to my general practitioner for help. He referred me to an ear specialist. They did a hearing test, which I passed with flying colors. Other than that, they didn't have any solution to my problem. It is very bothersome and seems to be getting worse. I think it may be stress-related, but I don't know what to do to make it stop. Can you help me? – P.C.

This sounds like a spasm of one of the muscles that control the tension of the eardrum, the tensor tympani and stapedius muscles. These muscles protect our ears, to some extent, from loud noises. Just like you can have a spasm or twitch in your eye muscles – or indeed any muscle – these muscles cause a unique sound sensation in the ear when they repeatedly twitch with high frequency. The plugging/unplugging sensation is likely the Eustachian tube, which controls the pressure in the ear, opening and closing.

The bad news is that I don't know of anything to make it stop. The good news is that it won't affect your hearing. Very rarely, it can be a sign of a nerve or muscle disease, but it is likely a normal phenomenon that many people have but few notice and articulate it as well as you have.

DEAR DR. ROACH: My mother,

88 years old, recently switched her medicine for hypertension from timed release, which she has been taking for 10 years, to one that is not timed release, because the timed release was too expensive. I'm worried. Has she compromised her health by doing this? Her cardiologist gave her the go-ahead. – J.R.

In my opinion, timed-release versions for high blood pressure are preferable to non-timed-release because the level of the medication in the blood can go up and down to a greater degree with the regular-release formulation. However, it does depend on the medication, and her cardiologist knows more than I do about her particular situation.

DEAR DR. ROACH: Because of my knee replacement, I am recommended to have four amoxicillin 500-mg tablets before a dental procedure. I am concerned about taking 2,000 mg every time. Is it too much? – C.C.H.

Amoxicillin is a very safe medication, and a single dose of 2,000 mg is standard for people who require treatment to prevent infection. The major concern is allergy, so anyone with a documented history of reaction to penicillin-like drugs should get an alternate medication.

Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Readers may email questions to ToYourGoodHealth@med.cornell.edu. GO FIGURE! by Linda Thistle

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥ RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string’s word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.
