College prep at EPCC

The McDonald's College Education Fair will be held from 9:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 15, 2016 at the El Paso Community College (EPCC) Administrative Services Center (ASC), 9050 Viscount Blvd. Many area colleges will attend the Fair. Students can learn how to apply for college and financial aid. They will also have the opportunity to meet with Admissions Officers and Counselors from the schools attending. Students should see their High School Counselor or call (915) 831-3373 to register or for more details. Registration deadline is October 12, 2016. All High School students and their parents are welcome. "We know that information can sometimes be limited as well as complex to parents and extended family members. This event is an excellent opportunity to gather important information about the college-going process from experts in the field," said Dr. Marisa Pierce, EPCC Executive Director of Outreach and Transition Services. "We will be showcasing key information on going to college, financing college, and career planning options. Whether you are planning to attend our local institutions or attending out of state, we are happy to provide prospective students and their families with the guidance they need."

Four Canutillo ISD board seats on ballot

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

CANUTILLO – Among the various local races in the upcoming general election will be the Canutillo Independent School District (CISD) board of trustees election. Four of the seven at-large positions are to be filled this November from a field of ten candidates.

Offices up for election include those currently held by Adrian Medina, 43, a research/ technology development director; Rachel Quintana, 59, a school secretary; and Armando Rodriguez, 33, a business development specialist. The fourth post is held by Leticia Gonzalez. She decided not to seek re-election. Medina, Quintana, and Rodriguez will try to hold on to their seats on the board.

The three remaining CISD board members, who were elected in 2014, are Laure Searls, Mary Iglesias, and Stephanie Fietze. CISD board members serve four-year terms.

Key roles that school board members play are: to ensure creation of a vision and goals for the district and evaluate district success; to adopt policies that address district actions; to hire a superintendent to serve as the chief executive officer of the district and evaluate the superintendent's success; to approve an annual budget consistent with the district vision; and to communicate the district's vision and success to the community.

Challenging the incumbents will be seven candidates who filed for a place on the ballot. They include Annette R.

Brigham, 63, a retired educator; Dionisio Dorado, 70, a private investigator; Blanca Trout, 54, a housewife; Camilo A. Ayub, 32, a field supervisor for the Department of Commerce; James R. Tidwell, 36, a business owner; Alfonso L. Flores, 44, a director; and Lynn A. McPhatter, 46, who is self-employed.

Early voting is scheduled to begin Monday, October 24 and continue through Friday, November 4. Voters may cast their ballot at any of the following CISD early voting sites: the CISD Administration Facility, 7965 Artcraft Road; El Paso Community College (EPCC) Northwest Campus, 6701 South Desert Boulevard; and El Paso County Northwest Annex, 435 E. Vinton Road.

On Election Day (Tuesday, November 8), voters must vote in the precinct where they are registered to vote. CISD polling sites for election day, which will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., will be: for Precinct 2 – Reyes Elementary School, 7440 Northern Pass Drive, and El Paso County Northwest Annex, 435 E. Vinton Road; for Precinct 3 – Canutillo Middle School, 7311 Bosque Road; for Precinct 4 – Canutillo Elementary School, 651 Canutillo Avenue; and for Precinct 5 – Firestation #2, 111 E. Borderland Road.

CISD voters will be able to cast their vote for four of the ten candidates on the ballot. The top four vote-getters will be declared the winners of this election.

San Eli schools get TEA recognition

By Hector Gonzalez
Special to the Courier

SAN ELIZARIO – The San Elizario Independent School District (SEISD) is off to a great start, meriting a record number of Distinction Designations by the TEA. For the first time, every campus received at least one distinction this year. Several of the designations (*) were firsts for the District.

SEISD and its campuses have always met state standards under the current state accountability system. However, this past year the district rose to new levels with respect to the number and type of distinction designations that were received.

"Some of these distinctions, such as Top 25% Closing Performance Gaps and Postsecondary Readiness, were awarded to campuses in our district for the first time," said Dr. Adam Starke, Research & Evaluation

Study finds Alzheimer's disease manifests differently in Hispanics

By Nadia Whitehead
Special to the Courier

Depression and other neuropsychiatric problems appear more frequently in the Hispanic population.

Certain symptoms associated with the development of Alzheimer's disease, including agitation and depression, affect Hispanics more frequently and severely than other ethnicities. The findings, published in the Journal of Neuropsychiatry and Clinical Neuroscience (JNCN), suggest that Alzheimer's disease manifests itself differently in Hispanic populations.

"Our study shows that the severity and proportion of neuropsychiatric symptoms is significantly higher in a Hispanic group compared to non-Hispanic whites," says lead researcher Ricardo Salazar, M.D., a geriatric psychiatrist at Texas Tech University Health Sciences

Graduated and on your own: Now what?

Fall is here and school is back in session but for many graduates, it's out for good. If you're a recent high school or college graduate, this might be the first time you're on your own. Living away from home and paying for your own housing, food and other necessities can be a tough adjustment. But being on your own for the first time is a new and exciting experience and it offers a perfect opportunity to set yourself up for success.

Make sure you have the right bank account for you. A lot may have changed since you opened your account, so consider changing your account to find the best one for your needs. If you are still sharing a bank account with your parents, consider opening your own. Opening an account can be simple and it's possible to do so online or over the phone – but you'll need a minimum deposit amount and documentation like your Social Security Number. For helpful tips, see the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's (CFPB) guide on opening a checking account.

Live within your means. As you begin your career it's essential to have reliable income and use it responsibly. A good budgeting guideline to start with is the 50/20/30 rule. Allot 50 percent of your income to necessary costs like housing, 20 percent to financial goals like repaying student loans and 30 percent to spending money. Remember that this is a rule of thumb and you can adjust it to fit your needs. Never spend more than you have, and always pay your bills on time.

Figure out taxes. The most important thing to know about taxes is that you must pay them on time or request a six month extension. If you've missed the deadline, don't ignore the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) – follow their guidelines for repayment. There are multiple ways to pay your taxes and you can download the IRS2Go mobile app to make payments. Check with your parents before filing: if they claim you as a dependent, you won't be able to claim tax exemptions. Finally, check if you qualify for special exemptions like a student loan deduction.

Take charge of your student loans. First, confirm your loan status at the official Federal Student Aid website where you can also explore your payment options and estimate how long it will take to repay your loans. Always make the minimum payments on time, and if you're having trouble paying off your loans, don't ignore them. Contact your lender, explain your situation and pay as much as you can immediately while prioritizing paying off the rest.

Check up on your healthcare. Under the Affordable Care Act, you can stay on your parents' plan until you're 26. If you aren't currently on your parents' plan or wish to leave their plan, you have several options to explore. Under federal law, if you're not covered by health insurance you must pay a fee on your next federal tax return. You can explore the different levels of coverage available and estimate how much a plan will cost you at Healthcare.gov, the federal healthcare website.

Get ready for retirement – yes, really. The younger you start saving, the more valuable your savings are. According to this Bankrate example, starting your savings at age 25 at $2,000 a year will yield a retirement account of $560,000 (assuming your earnings grow at 8 percent every year). But starting 10 years later at age 35 will yield just $245,000 at retirement – less than half the money you'd have if you started saving ten years earlier. The earlier you start saving, the more money you'll end up with – and if you take advantage of an employer-matched 401(k) fund, you can put away extra money for free.

Charge up your credit score. Building up credit as a young adult is important for big purchases down the road. Buying a house or purchasing a car are often significantly harder without a good credit score. It's smart to start building good credit while your expenses are relatively small. For more information, the CFPB has a database of frequently asked questions with everything you need to know about credit cards and credit scores.

Bottom line: Though the transition from student to independent adult may feel overwhelming, you can take this opportunity to get your finances organized and prepare for working life. Building a strong financial foundation early on will help you worry less about your money and allow you to fully enjoy other new aspects of your life after college.

This article is intended to provide general information and should not be considered legal, tax or financial advice. It's always a good idea to consult a tax or financial advisor for specific information on how certain laws apply to your situation and about your individual financial situation.

Veterans Post

By Freddy Groves

Tuition payment errors add up to big bucks

Hundreds of millions of dollars spent on Post-9/11 G.I. Bill payments is being lost due to mishandling and errors, according to the Department of Veterans Affairs Office of the Inspector General. The VAOIG recently evaluated the Veterans Benefits Administration to see if payments were being made correctly.

In one year alone, the VBA was responsible for $5.2 billion in tuition and fee payments for 796,000 students. The VAOIG picked 225 students at 50 schools, totaling $1.7 million in payments, to double-check.

One problem it found is that the VBA must rely on enrollment information provided by the schools, which sometimes submitted incorrect information. Is it a regular college or a community college? Tuition varies. How many times does the school let a student attempt to pass a class? One small item (until you add it all up) is the cost of books. VBA can't tell whether it's paying for supported or unsupported services, supplies and books, and generally it just pays the bill without asking.

VAOIG's suggestions were to reach out to the schools to ask for complete certifications, revise the handbook used by those who cut the checks and develop a way to check for satisfactory completion of classes (or at least remaining academically eligible), enrollment status, duplicate information on students and repeated classes.

The bottom line: Of the $5.2 billion in tuition and fee payments for one year, the VAOIG calculated that $247 million was lost in improper payments, and more than $205 million was lost in missed recoupments (getting the money back in case of overpayment). Doing the math, the VAOIG concluded that, if things don't change, the VBA could lose $1.2 billion in improper payments and $1 billion in missed recoupments over the next five years. That's a lot of money that could be sending others to school.

Strange But True

By Samantha Weaver

- It was 20th-century American journalist and author Sydney J. Harris who made the following sage observation: “Men make counterfeit money; in many more cases, money makes counterfeit men.”
- The Hawaiian Islands didn’t have mosquitoes until the 1820s, when a ship evidently brought the pests along with the people.
- Those who study such things claim that, generally speaking, the more money a man makes, the less alcohol he drinks. With women, though, the opposite holds true: The more money she makes, the more alcohol she drinks.
- The name of the nation of India is derived from the name of the river Indus. It’s interesting to note, however, that the Indus doesn’t actually flow through any part of modern-day India; it’s in Pakistan and the disputed region of Kashmir.
- The snapping turtle is the only modern reptile that can breathe underwater, and then only if it stays put on the bottom. If it starts to swim, it has to surface to breathe.
- A researcher named Joel Achenbach says that the red in the occurrence of red eye in some photographs is actually blood. The color comes from the flash reflecting off the blood vessels in the back of the eyeball.
- You might be surprised to learn that of the 6 million parts that make up a Boeing 747, half of them are categorized as fasteners.

with Alzheimer’s disease. Cognitive signs of the disease include memory loss and problems with orientation and physical functioning. Behavioral, or neuropsychiatric symptoms, include depression, elation, anxiety, hallucinations, delusions and apathy. These neuropsychiatric symptoms have been associated with higher rates of institutionalization and more rapid progression of the disease.

Curious to understand how neuropsychiatric symptoms manifest in Hispanics with dementia, Salazar and his team gathered data on more than 2,100 individuals in the Texas Alzheimer’s Research and Care Consortium (TARCC) database. Patients profiled in the database are predominantly non-Hispanic whites and Mexican-Americans who have been diagnosed with Alzheimer’s disease or mild cognitive impairment (MCI), or are otherwise healthy subjects. The team specifically focused on each individual’s Neuropsychiatric Inventory Questionnaire (NPI-Q), an exam used to assess the extent of 12 neuropsychiatric symptoms.

A review of the data showed that during MCI – the intermediate state between healthy cognition and Alzheimer’s disease – all ethnicities were affected equally by neuropsychiatric symptoms. But once the condition had progressed to full-on Alzheimer’s disease, the severity of neuropsychiatric symptoms in Hispanics increased significantly.

Salazar believes these divergent symptoms may reflect a different disease process in Hispanics.

“When patients have neuropsychiatric symptoms, that signifies deterioration of different areas of the brain,” he explains. “I believe functional imaging studies of the brain may show differences in the locations of amyloid or plaque collection in the brains of Hispanics with Alzheimer’s disease.”

The JNCN study also showed that depression and anxiety were more frequent in healthy Hispanics age 50 years and older than in healthy, non-Hispanic whites of the same age. This corroborates past studies suggesting that depression may be one of the first signs of Alzheimer’s disease.

“Hispanics tend to get Alzheimer’s disease at an earlier age than other [ethnic groups], and our study shows that these neuropsychiatric symptoms of depression and anxiety manifest earlier in them, too,” Salazar says. “This suggests that depression and anxiety in older Hispanics could be an early warning for Alzheimer’s disease – and that treatment of these symptoms could even delay the disease.”

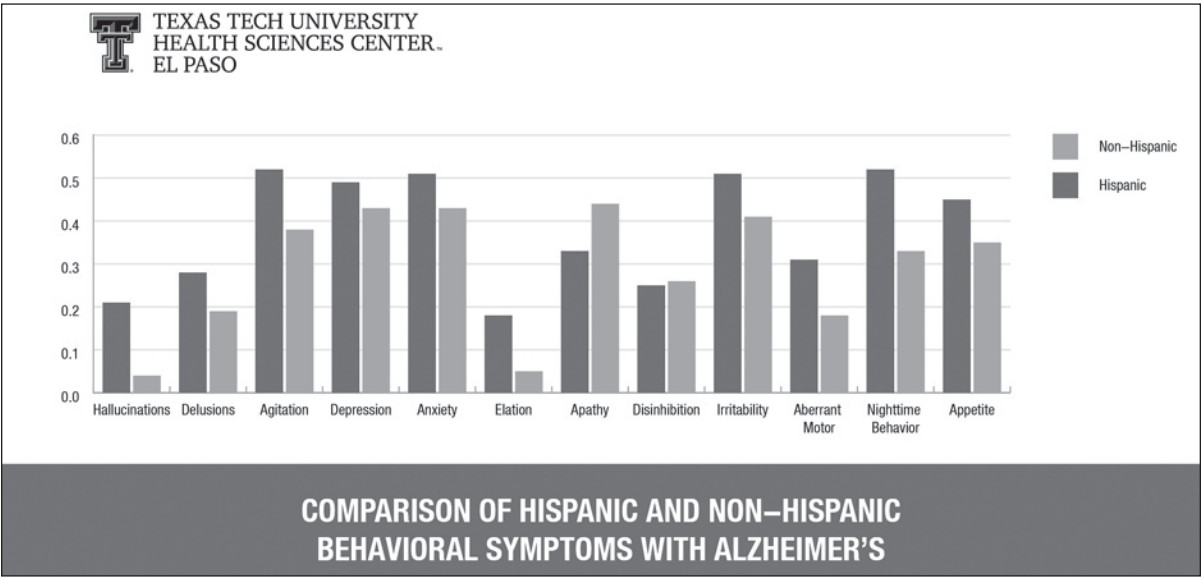

As a geriatric psychiatrist in an overwhelmingly Hispanic region, Salazar has witnessed this phenomenon firsthand.

“I am a strong believer that if you use antidepressants to treat MCI that appears with symptoms of depression, you can slow the progression of Alzheimer’s,” he says. “Maybe even avoid full-on progression to the disease.”

Salazar implores physicians to be aware that depression can mask dementia, particularly in the Hispanic population.

Salazar admits the study has limitations. Ethnicity was self-reported by individuals, and there were also fewer Hispanic participants with Alzheimer’s disease than white participants with the disease.

While additional research is clearly needed, Salazar’s study could be a window to how to better treat – and even prevent – Alzheimer’s disease in this rapidly growing demographic.

A Heisman for McCaffrey won’t touch his off-field contributions

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

Though last season’s Heisman Trophy went to Alabama running back Derrick Henry, there are more than a few people who thought it should have gone to Stanford’s Christian McCaffrey.

McCaffrey finished second in the balloting and is in a battle with Louisville quarterback Lamar Jackson for college football’s top individual-honor this year.

McCaffrey is a running back, just like Henry, but unlike most running backs he does so much more.

The Stanford junior is a triple threat. He runs, he catches passes, he returns kickoffs for big yardage and he’s even thrown a touchdown pass.

He set a new NCAA record (set by Barry Sanders) for total yards in a season as a sophomore.

On the field, McCaffrey does things that most runners just can’t do.

But off the field, more importantly, McCaffrey does things that most people just won’t do.

McCaffrey may be the big man on campus and is seen as a soon-to-be NFL star with big bucks in his future; but for years, to many people with down syndrome, he’s simply known as Chris.

Six years ago, he and his father started the Global Down Syndrome Foundation’s Dare to Cheer and Dare to Play Camp in Ranch, Colorado.

It is held annually at his former high school, Valor Christian.

Some of the camp goers have been participating in the event since it was started and anxiously look forward to it every year.

In a recent interview with the Denver Post, McCaffrey expressed his thoughts on what the experience does for him.

“It’s such an amazing event and it just kind of puts life into perspective. It really just makes you take a look at life and makes you appreciate what you have.”

In an era where almost all the news concerning players and their off-the-field activities involve a warrant or an arrest, it is refreshing to hear about the actions of a player who doubles as a positive role model.

During his most recent camp back in June, McCaffrey took the time to pose for photos with camp participants and actively cheered every time someone ran the football into the end zone.

McCaffrey ran up and down the field with the camp players and laughed when children did their best Cam Newton dabbing impersonation to celebrate a touchdown.

Ever since his freshman year in high school, McCaffrey has been volunteering with his father, Ed McCaffrey, who was a wide receiver with the Denver Broncos.

The younger McCaffrey hasn’t looked for any publicity for his charitable actions; it’s just come as his national status has elevated.

But still, as important it is to him to score a touchdown and help his team win, he worries about the average fans’ perception of the average college athlete.

“I think there’s a lot of misconceptions about some football players nowadays and athletes in general. I think stuff like this is a great opportunity to look back at the platform you have and use it as a positive thing.”

There’s no doubt that many college athletes have gone out of their way to give the vast majority of young adults a bad name. But then again, that’s the nature of sports coverage.

Just like the major news organizations, who all have the motto, “if it bleeds, it leads,” – sports reporters stumble all over themselves to find that next major controversial story.

They look for the athlete with a gun, an arrest, a cheating scandal, domestic abuse, drug possession, assault and battery, blah blah blah.

But when it comes to an athlete going out of his or her way to do something noble or decent, hardly a word is mentioned.

How refreshing it is to hear that an athlete of the stature of a Christian McCaffrey hasn’t grown a head too large to still care for others who aren’t as fortunate as he is.

How refreshing it is to hear that an athlete gets just as much from of those who aren’t as fortunate as he is.

The cheers and the accolades from fans at football games will surround McCaffrey for years to come, but it’s the work and time he gives to his camp that he should really be applauded for.

A sporting view By Mark Vasto

The artful Dodger

This has been a season of losses.

Muhammad Ali, Gordie Howe, Arnold Palmer... icons, idols and champions measured on a mythical scale that can never be tipped. But for every great player, there has been an equally masterful play-caller broadcasting their every move. They are the ones who paint the vivid, indelible pictures of their exploits into our minds and weave each significant moment into the fabric of time.

They are the men and women who make calling singular moments of a game into their life’s calling. When Bobby Thompson hit one out of the Polo Grounds to send the New York Giants to the postseason, it wasn’t a mere home run, it was “the shot heard ‘round the world” that saw “The Giants win the pennant! The Giants win the pennant!” When George Foreman jacked up the champ, the moment was described as “Down Goes Frazier! Down goes Frazier!”

Would anyone remember Bobby Thompson, a lifetime .270 hitter, if Russ Hodges hadn’t made that call? Would Foreman be the wrecking machine Ali used to shock the world with his “rope-a-dope” if Cosell didn’t set the scene? Would you remember who won the 1980 gold medal in hockey had Al Michaels not been there to ask if you believed in miracles?

In California, residents and sports fans have a peculiar sadness to deal with, for they have lost not one, but two broadcasting legends on the very same day – Vin Scully and Dick Enberg – yet both are still alive. Enberg not only did wonderful play-by-play for the Padres, he was the happy yet dignified play caller, the one who exclaimed “Oh my!” for every great shot at Wimbledon for decades. For fans in Los Angeles – and really, for all baseball fans – the loss of Scully is particularly painful. Nobody called a game better than Scully, and it’s unlikely anyone ever will again.

For anyone under the age of 67, his was the only voice they heard broadcasting Dodger games. His genuine warmth and ability to make every game seem special had to be heard to be believed. Maybe that’s why his final sign off was enough to bring tears to adults everywhere:

“You know friends, so many people have wished me congratulations on a 67-year career in baseball, and they wished me a wonderful retirement with my family, and now, all I can do is tell you what I wish for you.

*May God give you...
For every storm, a rainbow,
For every tear, a smile,
For every care, a promise,
And a blessing in each trial.
For every problem life sends,
A faithful friend to share,
For every sigh, a sweet song,
And an answer for each prayer.*

“You and I have been friends for a long time, but I know in my heart I’ve always needed you more than you’ve ever needed me. And I’ll miss our time

Your good health

By Keith Roach, M.D.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am a 64-year-old male in good health. I had an outbreak of blisterlike sores on my upper torso, in my mouth and near my eyes. I had an almost-incapacitating feeling and was able to consume only liquids and shakes because of the mouth blisters. The blisters took their course in seven to 10 days and scabbed over. These episodes reoccurred three separate times, returning two to three weeks apart. Just prior to the outbreaks, I started taking Aleve because of sore knees while I was walking. On the third outbreak, I consulted my dermatologist, and he observed a reddened throat without any noticeable soreness on my part, so he swabbed the throat, and it showed strep throat. The sore throat was treated, and I believe I was also given steroids. The physician's diagnosis was erythema multiforme. The doctor thought the EM was related to the strep throat, and he wasn't sure if the Aleve played a role. I am interested in your thoughts on the possible causes of the EM and the chances of it returning. I have been blister-free for a year now, but fear that the EM will return or that there is some underlying autoimmune issue. – T.C.

Erythema multiforme is a skin rash with a characteristic target appearance. They tend to appear on the backs of hands to the elbows, or on the legs from the top of the feet to the knees, and then appear closer toward the body. They stay for a few days and then leave after two weeks or so. EM has been associated with many medical conditions, including autoimmune diseases; however, 90 percent of EM is related to infection. The most common infection is herpes simplex (the cause of cold sores as well as genital herpes). Strep throat is not a common cause of EM. However, the naproxen (Aleve) is a well-known cause. I would advise against using Aleve or related medications, and reassure you that the likelihood of a hidden autoimmune disease is low.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am in good general health. My problem is not being able to drink enough water to quench my thirst, especially in warm weather. If I drink more than 25 ounces per day, my stomach becomes upset. In warm weather, I have to balance my fluid intake between dehydration and an upset stomach. I am not diabetic. Is there a solution? – E.K.

A sensation of feeling bloated after fluid intake is not uncommon among athletes during competitions. I have heard many possible treatments. These include sipping fluids slowly over time; however, some people seem to find relief by gulping fluids down in large amounts, the theory being that distending the stomach stimulates it to contract and send the fluid into the intestines to be absorbed. Having some food with the fluid helps many people, especially starchy foods (like cereals or crackers) to absorb lots of water. Tepid water may be more easily absorbed than ice-cold water. If none of these

Social Security Q&A By Ray Vigil

60 years of disability benefits

August 1, 2016, marked the 60th anniversary of the Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) program, signed into law by President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1956. Originally, the program was limited to individuals who were age 50 or older. It also had a six-month waiting period, and there were no benefits payable to spouses or children.

The disability program has undergone many changes to become the program it is today. Now, people who receive Social Security disability benefits can also receive Medicare coverage after 24 months, and their dependents may be eligible to receive benefits on their earnings records. There are also work incentives in place to help people with disabilities go back to work.

As of June 2016, there are more than 10 million disabled workers and dependents receiving a portion of the more than $11 billion that are sent each month in Social Security disability payments. It can happen to anyone: studies show that a 20-year-old worker has a 1-in-4 chance of becoming disabled before reaching their full retirement age.

To meet the challenges of providing benefits to so many, the agency has evolved, using technology to operate more efficiently.

Access to online applications for disability benefits, reconsiderations, and hearings have given applicants more service options when applying for benefits. Our health IT initiative allows Social Security to access electronic medical records, including those from the U.S. Department of Defense, which reduces administrative costs, streamlines operations, and speeds up service to veterans.

Social Security is committed to securing today and tomorrow for our millions of disabled workers. For more information about the disability program, please visit www.socialsecurity.gov/disabilityssi.

For more information on any of the topic above, visit our website at www.socialsecurity.gov or call us at 1-800-772-1213. If you have any questions, please mail them to the Social Security Office, 11111 Gateway West, Attn: Ray Vigil, El Paso, Texas 79935.

Aging athletes

Growing old is not for the faint of heart, says the Association of Mature American Citizens; it’s the toughest thing with which we will have deal in our lifetimes. It takes true grit, the kind that The National Senior Games Association seeks to encourage. The NSGA recently presented a Personal Best Award to 85-year-old Don Hoeppner, during the 2016 Wisconsin Senior Olympics in Milwaukee. They described him as “a man who never met a sport he didn’t like.” Don doesn’t do it for the accolades. “Winning medals has never been the biggest motivator. What drives him is maintaining his best health, enjoying social connections, testing his own limits, and sharing experiences in a team environment,” according to the NSGA.
