Socorro runoff election set for August 26

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

SOCORRO – The City of Socorro runoff election to decide the next mayor and District 2 representative is heating up, as early voting currently continues through Tuesday, August 22.

The Early Voting polling place is the Socorro City Council Chambers, 860 N. Rio Vista Road, and the hours of operation are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., with August 21 and 22 being from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Election officials noted that there will be no early voting on Saturday, August 19 and Sunday, August 20, but that early voting would resume on Monday, August 21.

Election Day voting will be from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday, August 26.

Election Day polling places include: Precinct 160- H.D. Hilley Elementary School, 693 N. Rio Vista Road; Precinct 161 and 163 – Robert R. Rojas ES, 500 Bauman Road; Precinct 162 – Socorro High School, 10150 Alameda Avenue; Precinct 164- Escontrias ES, 205 Buford Road; and Precinct 165 and 170 – Campestre ES, 113999 Socorro Road.

Candidates in the mayoral race are Ivy Avalos and Elia Garcia. The winner will fill the unexpired term of Gloria Macias Rodriguez, who was elected mayor in the city’s election held in November but was ousted out of office this past March by the city’s council members.

Candidates for District 2 Representative are Jesus Ruiz, former mayor of Socorro, and Ralph Duran. Socorro’s city council is composed of four district representatives, one at-large representative, and a mayor. There is an uneven number of voting members on the council, so the mayor only votes in cases of ties.

The total number of registered voters for the City of Socorro is 16,758, according to El Paso County Election Department’s statistics. The city’s population is approximately 33,277. The city’s proposed budget for the 2016-2017 fiscal year is $8,326,894.

Mayoral candidate Avalos stated on her Facebook page that she may not have experience in politics, but that she does bring other things to the table that are important. She cited that she has studied biology and chemistry and worked in a small engineering firm where she did chemical analysis on soil and water.

Because of her experience in chemical analysis, Avalos stated that that would help her better understand what the city is doing with the ponding areas that are being proposed and the studies that will be required.

“I’ve also worked most of my life for my parent’s small businesses, and as a realtor I know much about business, professionalism, and customer service,” Avalos stated. “I was also a listing agent for a builder so I know how to lead a team. These, I believe are quite significant. If elected I’d like to be a hands-on type of mayor. Talk to the community and listen to their needs,” she stated.

“Unfortunately, our city doesn’t have much funds to do the projects that are necessary and which I would love to give the people, but I think instead of going more into debt with certificates of obligation, we need to target grants to finish projects,” Avalos stated.

“I’ve seen so many of my friends leave Socorro because there are no good jobs, and the city is unkempt. We need to create and attract jobs and clean up our city to keep them here. I see much potential in our city but no direction, and I hope to change that,” Avalos asserted.

Garcia, the other mayoral candidate, stated that she decided to run for mayor in the City of Socorro because she would like to give back to her community. She stated that she was raised in this community, and began to be involved in the city after she returned from law school.

“I served in the Civil Service Commission for a year, and I was the first member appointed to the Ethics Commission. After that, I served as the Municipal Court Judge for three years,” Garcia stated. “This position opened my eyes to the needs of the Socorro constituents. Living here all my life, and interacting with the city administrators, as well as the population, as a whole, helped me understand the needs, concerns, and anguishes of the citizens,” she added.

Garcia stated that her involvement with the City of Socorro

Alcohol stings continue through September

By Chris Porter
Special to the Courier

TEXAS – The Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission (TABC) is conducting a series of undercover operations throughout August and September as tens of thousands of college and university students return to class across the state. The operations will identify retailers who illegally sell alcohol to persons under 21.

The undercover operations, known as Minor Stings, will take place at thousands of alcohol retailers located in communities near major colleges or universities. During the operation, a minor-aged person will attempt to purchase alcohol at a TABC-licensed retail location. If the sale is successful, the business and its employees could face administrative and possible criminal charges.

The stings will take place at a variety of retailers including bars, restaurants, convenience stores and liquor stores. Any location that sells alcohol for on-premise or off-premise consumption could be included in the operation, according to TABC Executive Chief Robert Saenz.

“Our retailers take the lead in preventing alcohol from falling into the hands of minors,” said Saenz. “This year, as in years past, we’re urging all retailers to make sure their employees have the tools they need to ensure anyone who purchases alcohol is of legal age to do so.”

During last year’s back-to-school operation, TABC agents went undercover at 1,337 retail locations and found that more than 90 percent were in compliance with the law. Over the past 12 months, agents conducted a total of 12,327 Minor Stings, finding a total of 1,333 violations for a total compliance rate of 89 percent. Of those operations, 2,380 were at on-premise locations such as bars or restaurants, finding a total of 424 violations. The remaining 9,947 stings targeted off-premise retailers such as convenience stores and found a total of 909 violations.

Veterans Post By Freddy Groves

New GI Bill boosts benefits

A new GI Bill has been in the works, and now it’s here. Dubbed the Forever GI Bill, it corrects many of the problems and inadequacies of previous veteran education-benefits legislation. In an amazing show of cooperation, both the House and Senate pushed through the final bill in only a few weeks. There was snarling along the way, but they got it done.

The biggest change? There will no longer be a 15-year limit on using educational benefits. Veterans who have been out for years and realize they need more education to progress in their careers will now be able to do it.

Here are some other changes:

- The Yellow Ribbon Program, which provides benefits to surviving spouses and dependents of service members who died in the line of duty, are expanded.

- Veterans who were partway through their education when their school abruptly closed will be able to have benefits restored for any credits that don’t transfer.

- Reservists and Purple Heart recipients will now get their benefits.

- Veterans who seek degrees in STEM (science, technology, engineering, math) will get more benefits, either a lump sum or nine extra months of benefits.

- Schools will be required to train those who help enroll veterans, and to provide more campus vocation and educational counseling.

One potential glitch: To pay for all this, living stipends will be decreased so they’re equal to active-duty service members’ housing allowances.

None of this happens today. Some changes will be effective Jan. 1, 2018, and some next August. Some might not happen for a few years. But it’s there; it’s in writing.

If you hear the legislation title The Harry W. Colmery Veterans Educational Assistance Act of 2017 and wonder who Colmery is, he was the commander of the American Legion who originally wrote (by hand) the GI Bill... back in 1944. You have him to thank.

North Korea still threatens world peace

Communist nation says it won't give up its nukes

Dan Weber, president of the Association of Mature American Citizens (AMAC) has issued a statement praising “the resolve of the U.S. under the leadership of President Trump to neutralize the clear and present threat to world peace posed by North Korea (DPRK). But, it may not be enough to make the country’s strongman Kim Jung Un concede defeat.”

In recent days Kim’s rhetoric has become more belligerent than ever before. He has even threatened to attack the U.S. territory of Guam, home to 160,000 people-the great majority of whom are American citizens, including 7,000 U.S. troops. Just yesterday, the DPRK regime presented a detailed plan to encircle Guam next week with a ring of fire using multiple nuclear-armed missiles.

The solidarity expressed by the international community in condemning bellicose diatribes initiated by Kim should go a long way toward potentially ensuring the war of words does not escalate into a full-fledged nuclear war. China is a particularly important player as Washington Post opinion writer, David Ignatius, recently pointed out, Weber noted.

Ignatius put it this way: “President Trump’s bullying style, even in dealing with trivial matters of domestic politics, obscures the extent to which he has tried to marry U.S. policy on North Korea with that of China. For the most part, he has been surprisingly successful. Beijing and Washington have mostly been aligned, as in this past weekend’s unanimous U.N. Security Council vote in favor of additional sanctions against Pyongyang to punish its continued missile tests.”

Two things are noteworthy about the sanctions the United Nations has imposed on the obstinate Communist nation, Weber pointed out. “The vote to enforce severe economic punishment on North Korea was unanimous. Even China and Russia were on board, although it is hard to know just how far they are willing to go to enforce the sanctions. And, the sanctions, which were proposed and drafted by the US, are designed to deal a devastating blow to the country’s already weak economy by slashing trade revenue by one third. It won’t diminish the lifestyles of the inner circle in Pyongyang. But, how much more can the underfed and undernourished ordinary citizens of North Korea stand.”

Soon after the sanctions were adopted, it became clear that that the DPRK’s leader Kim Jong Un remains determined to turn his postage-stamp nation into a threatening nuclear power, Weber said.

Within a few days of the sanctions being imposed, the North Koreans issued new threats against the U.S. and its allies in the region and backed them up with a mobilization of patrol boats armed with anti-ship cruise missiles. They were spotted by American intelligence agencies and are presumably intended as a warning to U.S. warships in the region.

And, North Korea issued a bizarre statement, saying that “the more desperately the U.S. works to realize its ambition for nuclear dismantlement of the north through maximum pressure and engagement, the more dynamically the DPRK has stepped up diversifying and modernizing the nuclear force before the U.S. and its vassal forces come to their senses.”

Weber said that Kim is a very unstable individual. “He’s like a very dangerous and petulant child. His classmates at boarding school called him unpredictable and explained that he is prone to violence. In fact, he is known to have murdered family members in paranoiac fits of rage. Any reasonable person – friend or foe – would have come to his senses by now and realized that the only choice he has is to put a stop to his war dance. Does he really think that he is dealing with the Obama administration with its timid approach to diplomacy? President Trump has made known that he prefers a peaceful approach to resolving the matter. But, he has shown that he is prepared to deal with the situation in a more forceful manner, if necessary. And, as UN Ambassador Nikki Haley has pointed out, all options are on the table.”

Will the UN sanctions be enough to convince the North Korea to cease and desist? Weber believes that diplomatic pressure is mounting rapidly as evidenced by the 15-0 vote in the UN to enforce strict sanctions on the DPRK. And, he says, if international condemnation of the country’s lawlessness does not move Kim Jung Un to behave, perhaps it might encourage dissidents within the regime to act.

The Association of Mature American Citizens (<http://www.amac.us>) is a senior advocacy organization that takes its marching orders from its members. We act and speak on their behalf, protecting their interests and offering a practical insight on how to best solve the problems they face today.

As an attorney, I have learned to be compassionate, patient, and above all diligent in my duties to my clients. I will be able to bring that passion to the City of Socorro, as mayor,” she affirmed.

Ruiz, District 2 Representative candidate, served as mayor of the City of Socorro from 2013 through November 2016, when he lost his re-election bid to Macias Rodriguez. Ruiz has lived in Socorro since 2000. He was graduated from Socorro High School in 2006 and earned a Bachelors of Art degree in History from New Mexico State University (NMSU) in 2010.

Duran, the other District 2 Representative candidate, stated that he is a self-employed businessman and farmer. He also was graduated from Socorro HS and studied computer science at Pierce College in California. Duran stated that he has been chairman of the civil service commission for eight years and that he has served on the board of adjustments for the past two years.

NFL throws the book at Zeke, appeal is in the works

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

Life is filled with its share of highs and lows.

One day you’re up, walking around whistling a happy tune, and the next day you’re slumped over, feeling like the whole world is against you.

Last week Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones was celebrated by his peers, being enshrined into the NFL Hall of Fame.

Jones is loved by some and hated by others, but there’s no doubting his impact on the NFL, on the Dallas Cowboys and thanks to “Jerryworld,” on sports in general.

Now that he’s entering the twilight of his career, it must have been an emotionally satisfying experience to receive the accolades he did during the Hall of Fame festivities.

What a high that must have been.

Then, almost as soon as his bust was placed in its permanent Canton, Ohio home, the smile on Jerry’s face faded quickly.

His prized running back Ezekiel Elliott was given a six-game suspension by the league.

To be honest most people thought he would maybe receive a one- or two-game fine. But no one saw six games coming.

Elliott burst onto the scene last year by easily leading the NFL in rushing as a rookie.

Enhancing his popularity was his easy-going, fun-loving nature. But it’s also that nature that has brought him a lot of negative press over the last year.

While Elliott hasn’t been charged with breaking any laws, right or wrong, his choices and antics are like those of a kid who has just turned 22.

Oh wait, he is a kid who just turned 22.

Only thing is, compared to the rest of the youngsters, every single move he makes is recorded by someone just hoping to have that footage that goes viral.

So Elliott has to quickly grow up and learn that his actions, seemingly insignificant or not, have consequences.

The obvious question here is why the NFL went so hard on Elliott.

It was learned over a year ago that his ex-girlfriend filed a physical abuse charge on him

After an investigation, the Columbus City District Attorney’s office declined to pursue the case because of what they said were “conflicting and inconsistent information.”

It also said Elliott was cooperative in the investigation and offered up affidavits and photographs to support his case.

The NFL is within its right to continue investigating an allegation even if the authorities find no reason to do so.

That’s exactly what the league did and their investigators said they found enough to issue a big suspension.

This can only mean one of two things, either the league will embarrass itself again by overreaching, or the Columbus DA will be embarrassed by not finding evidence that the NFL did.

I am of the belief that no matter who you are, breaking the law is breaking the law... period. But there better be absolute proof that the accused is guilty.

Remember the Duke lacrosse team?

I wasn’t invited to sit in on the NFL’s personal conduct meetings on Elliott, but I believe this was a calculated move by the league.

Because the NFL took so much decided to throw the book at Elliott, even with the evidence being as sketchy as it is.

They know he’ll appeal; the suspension will be reduced to two or three games and the NFL can always say, “hey, don’t blame us, we threw the book at him.”

As far as Elliott goes, no matter which way this thing plays out, this will hopefully be a good thing for him.

It should scare him straight and prove to him that he could quickly fall into Johnny Manziel territory if he continues on the same path.

Doing the “feed me” sign after a long run and jumping into an oversized Salvation Army kettle is all nice and well, but pulling a woman’s blouse up and exposing her breast in public isn’t a mature move.

I just can’t picture Dak Prescott doing that.

I really hope Jerry enjoyed the high of his HOF induction week, because with all the suspensions, he and his Cowboys could be in for a long season of lows.

A sporting view By Mark Vasto

A Rose by any other game

If ever there was a more relevant irrelevant athlete in the history of sports, it is Pete Rose.

Everyone remembers that kid in class when we were growing up who just couldn’t seem to control himself or stay out of trouble but was the first guy you’d pick for your kickball team. Wherever Pete Rose went to school, he was that guy.

Pete Rose manages to stay in the news, and he does it better than any other player with the exception of Jackie Robinson. Nobody sits around these days and talks about, say, Walter Johnson, George Sisler, Johnny Mize or Nap Lajoie. But we still talk about Pete Rose. The kid stays in the picture.

The Philadelphia Phillies wanted to induct Rose into their hall of fame a week ago, and they had planned on passing out little bobbleheads of his likeness to all the fans in attendance. As per the norm, the deal didn’t go down because Rose has some alleged NSFW issues. The Phillies had good intentions, but if there’s anything Pete Rose does better than hitting a ball with a bat, it’s staying out of halls of fame.

I love Philadelphia, and I love Philadelphia fans. I can relate a story about the time I was in a very famous resort town in New Jersey, and one day, over ice-cream sodas, conversation occurred with a few darling tourists from Dallas.

Texas and New Jersey have some sort of kindred spirit. We don’t ever care about the price of gas, we don’t mind talking loud, and you have to presume that we’re packing heat. The person across the way started talking smack about Eli Manning and the Giants, and the Giant fans, in turn, returned fire about Tony Romo and Gov. Chris Christie, whom everyone in New Jersey hates. (There were no Jets fans in attendance because nobody ever talks about the Jets.)

For dangerous fun, I pointed out one of the patrons in an Eagles hat and said to the Dallas fans to pay close attention.

“At least we’re not EAGLE fans,” I said with exaggeration, and like clockwork, within a microsecond, the Eagle fan’s head shot up.

“DON’T EVEN GO THERE!”

In context, it wasn’t a very genial reply, but it did beg my next question.

“Go where? The Super Bowl? Where the Eagles will never go in your lifetime?”

The barstool screeched across the floor. He tried to make a rush, but just like the Eagles front line he was subdued with ease, and the staff quickly punted him out the door.

“See?” I said to the Dallas fan.

“That’s a Philadelphia fan. Half of that city will literally fight you if you talk smack about their team.” And this is the town that won’t stand by Pete Rose and toss around a little doll?

I’m not in any way suggesting that the allegations regarding Rose are something to make light of, but they are just that – allegations. We don’t know what happened in his private life, but I think we all know far too much about Pete Rose’s life anyway. And seriously, Pete... Philadelphia didn’t back you up? That’s hall of fame stuff right there.

We know you’re the hit king, but after a while you have to admit that you’ve taken too many hits, too. Sooner or later you have to call the game.

Scenic Drive

Scenic Drive, from Wheeling Avenue to Alabama, will be closed to all traffic for several weeks to complete the next phase of the Kentucky Dam stormwater improvement project. Additionally, small portions of neighboring streets will be restricted to local traffic during construction:

- Streets between Scenic Drive and Alabama; and
- Streets between Wheeling Avenue and Altura Avenue.

Drivers will still be able to enter and exit Scenic Drive by detouring around the closure on Alabama Street and turning north onto Wheeling Avenue. The $3.9 million project will help reduce flooding in Central El Paso. The project will increase the capacity of nearby ponds and add piping that keeps water off the streets by directing stormwater into the dam. Additionally, the project will improve service in the area by replacing water and wastewater lines.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I have had several kidney stones and was advised to avoid oxalate. I was told that green, leafy vegetables and grains are high in oxalate. How can my diet be healthy if I avoid these healthy foods? – D.F.

Calcium oxalate is the most common type of kidney stone, so limiting dietary oxalate makes sense. However, increasing water intake, dietary calcium and potassium can help prevent kidney stones. It is paradoxical, but dietary calcium reduces kidney stone risk while calcium supplements increase kidney stone risk. Also, vitamin C increases kidney stone risk, so it's not recommended to take supplemental vitamin C.

There are many places to find the oxalate content of food, starting with your dietician, but websites like www.lowoxalate.info and www.ohf.org have nice lists. There you can find many fruits and vegetables that have little or no oxalate, including broccoli, lettuce and cucumber. You do need to avoid spinach, beets and similar vegetables. As far as grains go, corn, rice and wild rice are good choices.

DEAR DR. ROACH: For a young couple wanting a baby, is there any help available for a man with a low sperm count? – N.N.

Identifying the cause of a couple's infertility is often difficult. In one large study, 20 percent of cases were attributed to male factors, and 38 percent to female. In 27 percent, there were reasons for infertility in both partners, and in 15 percent of cases no cause could be found.

Clearly, both partners need to be evaluated. Low sperm count isn't a diagnosis; many separate systems can be affected, all leading to reduced sperm count. Abnormalities in hormonal function, mechanical obstruction and testicular disease all are possibilities. Although many causes of low sperm count are untreatable, not all are. For example, elevated prolactin levels from a tumor or medication can be treated, leading to improved fertility. Low sex-hormone levels can be replaced. Many men are advised to wear boxer shorts, as high temperatures affect fertility, but it's not clear this is effective. Assistive procedures, such as intrauterine insemination, in-vitro fertilization and intracytoplasmic sperm injection (a single spermatozoa injected into an egg) can be effective, but these procedures are always expensive, rarely covered by insurance, not 100 percent effective and have a small increased risk of birth defects.

DEAR DR. ROACH: Is secondhand vapor (from the electronic cigarettes) harmful? – B.S.B.

While the evidence that secondhand smoke from regular cigarettes is harmful to people around smokers, causing increased risks of lung cancer and heart disease, the data just aren't clear about the vapor from electronic cigarettes. It is known that the vapor contains nicotine and potentially cancer-causing chemicals, but the amounts are much lower than with regular of financing is relatively new to most drivers and the terminology (<http://www.cars.com/advice/>) can be daunting. But generally, the best deals depend on two major factors – negotiating the lowest price on the vehicle going in and making sure it’s a vehicle that has a high estimated post-lease value. In short, the lessor’s ability to keep making money on a high-value leased vehicle allows a lower monthly payment at the start.

Bottom line: If you need a vehicle, it pays to evaluate whether lease or purchase makes the most sense for you. Know your needs and get advice so you can make the most affordable choice for you.
