Cactus Trails opens

The Socorro Independent School District held the grand opening of its newest elementary campus, Cactus Trails Elementary, with a ribbon cutting ceremony Aug. 1 at the school. Cactus Trails, home of the Diamondbacks, will serve more than 900 students from Pre-K to 5th grade in the Pebble Hills feeder area. The $28.4 million school is the first Bond 2017 project to be completed. It was built on time and within budget. The school follows a proto-typical design, similar to Sgt. Jose F. Carrasco Elementary School and Purple Heart Elementary School, with an open space concept and flexible, collaborative design spaces.

Early college

Socorro Independent School District (SISD), in partnership with El Paso Community College, opened early college programs at Falcon Early College at Eastlake High School, Empire Early College at El Dorado High School, and Pebble Hills Early College at Pebble Hills High School on Aug. 2. "We are excited to be opening not one, but three new early college high school programs in Team SISD this year," said Superintendent José Espinoza, Ed.D. "SISD will be the only district in the region, and one in a few in Texas, to offer an early college high school program at each one of its comprehensive high schools." The three new early college programs will

EL PASO COUNTY – The Clint school district doesn't immediately come to mind when the topic of El Paso high school sports is raised.

After all, the smaller district doesn't get the notoriety of the bigger districts and their sheer numbers, budgets, facilities and stadiums... but Clint ISD is slowly closing the gap.

Through a number of bonds and grants,

Clint ISD has made improvements in their athletics department that now rival many of those from larger districts.

"When we invest in our students they in turn will deliver in their respective sport," said Clint ISD Superintendent, Dr. Juan I. Martinez. "We're not all about winning, but we're all about giving our students the best experience and opportunities."

"When they win we celebrate with them, when they lose we're here to support them. Our students deserve the best that we can give them."

Many of the improvements will be on display this school year, and others are still in the works.

"Mountain View and Horizon high schools have new football fields and training facilities, new weight rooms, showers, locker rooms, storage and laundry rooms," said Martinez. "We're also building a new field house at Horizon next school year."

"We're also looking to completely remodel the entrance to the Mountain View and Horizon stadiums, to include

Propaganda, pandering, and politics

For the next one and a half years we will have to endure the hyperbole, apocalyptic predictions, fake outrage, half-truths, and frank lies of politicians. Some kind soul should take pity on us and pass out beans to put in our ears.

Of course, we should expose ourselves to many opinions, but we have to be careful about propaganda. Propaganda, an ugly word, is viewed as more than mere opinion but information that is somehow manipulative, misleading, or not telling the whole truth.

Propaganda came to mind during a meeting I attended where well-heeled teenage girls sporting AOC for Congress T-shirts preached to the captive audience about how the government should pay for college tuition, books, and housing for everyone, while extolling the virtues of socialism. Had their parents heeded Vladimir Lenin’s “Give me four years to teach the children and the seed I have sown will never be uprooted”? Then some adults with vapid smiles admonished us that we should believe the young ladies, not because they provided statistics or pros and cons of the value of college for everyone, but because they are young and our future. This brings out one propaganda tool: it’s for the children.

Why would we willingly give up any of our freedoms and turn over our pocketbooks to the government because some nouveau socialists fed us propaganda? Because it works.

Look at the Social Security Act. No one would turn down the promise of financial security in old age, or as President Roosevelt said, a safeguard “against the hazards and vicissitudes of life.” I question if people think it is a good deal to pay more than 15 percent of your paycheck (including employer’s “contribution” and Medicare tax) to the government, thus taking your future savings out of your control. If you die young you get nothing; your savings go, not to your children, but into the government’s black hole.

Patients and doctors alike have been sucked in by statements of questionable accuracy. In promoting the Affordable Care Act, President Obama on multiple occasions assured us, “if you like your doctor you can keep your doctor, if you like your health plan you can keep your health plan.” The ACA likely would not have gotten traction if he had said, “We don’t know what the insurers will do after the ACA is passed, so good luck.”

Electronic Medical Records (EHRs) were part of the bumpy road to the ACA. President Obama, promised that EHRs would “cut red tape, prevent medical mistakes and help save billions of dollars each year.” The unwary believed the puffery versus the facts.

The promise: EHRs are efficient.

Reality: Hundreds of different brands mean that the records cannot be exchanged between physicians, but they can be sent to the

‘Moscow Mitch’ is a ridiculous smear

There was a time when the left considered McCarthyism the worst of all political tactics. That was before it became useful to question Mitch McConnell’s loyalty to his country.

The Senate majority leader’s offense is blocking Democratic-sponsored election security bills, which has occasioned the sort of charges that Democrats have spent the better half of the past 50 years ruling out of bounds.

The Washington Post headlined a column, “Mitch McConnell is a Russian asset.” It wasn’t tongue-in-cheek. “Let’s,” urged Post columnist Dana Milbank, “call this what it is: unpatriotic. The Kentucky Republican is, arguably more than any other American, doing Russian President Vladimir Putin’s bidding.”

Rep. John Sarbanes, D-MD., said supporting the bills was an opportunity for McConnell “to do the right thing in terms of demonstrating his patriotism.” A CNN national security analyst declared, “I believe the only reason Mitch McConnell is doing this is that he believes Donald Trump cannot win without the Russians’ help.” MSNBC host Joe Scarborough dubbed McConnell “Moscow Mitch,” a moniker that trended on Twitter and substituted alliteration for thought.

The occasion for the assault on McConnell was a naked and cynical political setup. After Robert Mueller’s testimony, Democrats tried to get so-called unanimous consent for election security bills in the Senate. This procedure is reserved for uncontroversial items that, as you might guess, have unanimous support. While everyone in the Senate agrees we should combat Russian interference, not everyone agrees on how to do it.

One of the Democratic bills would mandate the use of paper ballots as a fail-safe against hacking. This may well be the best practice, but running elections is the responsibility of states and localities, not the federal government. As supporters of state prerogatives, Republicans could be expected to oppose the bill, and sure enough it only got one Republican vote in the House.

Another bill would require campaigns to report offers of foreign assistance, a superficially appealing idea. Yet, the more comprehensive such a bill is, the more likely it is to sweep up minor and innocent interactions that fall far short of the infamous Trump Tower meeting (that itself came to nothing).

There’s no need to reach for extravagant explanations for why McConnell would oppose these bills (He’s a tool of the Kremlin! He hopes his Moscow minders will put Trump over the top in 2020!). The Kentucky senator has an extensive record as an opponent of federal activism and of poorly drafted campaign reform bills.

What the case against McConnell comes down to is the usual sophomoric Washington argument that if you don’t want to do this one specific thing, you don’t want to do anything and have the worst possible intentions.

McConnell supported the $380 million to aid in election security funding that passed Congress. And he supported the bipartisan Senate Intelligence Committee investigation into election interference that produced an alarming public report late last month.

As McConnell pointed out in a peppery defense of his record on the Senate floor, he’s been a Russian hawk going back to the Reagan administration, and has continued to call out Putin since 2016.

He doesn’t need lessons from anyone about how to be clear-eyed about Russia, let alone how to be patriotic.

The promise: EHRs save time.

It sounds so virtuous to insist that “healthcare is a right.” Thus, if you do not believe medical care should be free, you are not a moral person. This technique echoes Aldous Huxley’s view that “the propagandist’s purpose is to make one set of people forget that the other set is human.” (Of course, bearing arms is a constitutional right, but guns are not given away for free. Indeed, gunowners are thought by some to be horrible people). Free medical care for all is short, simple, and seductive.

- The program requirements are applicable to all septic tank sewage and liquid waste haulers and transporters which are defined in the Rules and Regulations including those that are undergoing changes.

"Thanks to bond issues we've provided various schools in the district with new weight rooms, new weight equipment, training facilities, ROTC shooting ranges, and in the near future some new field houses will be built," Mackeben explained. "I've been in the district for 18 years and if it's needed, our superintendent and board members seem to be all in on making sure our kids have the best, whether it's in the classroom or on the field.

"A lot of people in the city forget that we're even out here, but when other teams do make the trip here the opposing coaches, players and families express their surprise at how nice and up-to-date our facilities are.

"I think it definitely changes the attitude and the mentality of the student athletes," Mackeben added. "It raises the morale of the school and the community. People tend to look at this area as being a poor area, but that doesn't mean we have to have poor facilities."

Though much of the focus is on improving high school athletic facilities, the district's upgrades didn't end there.

"They revamped the running track here," said Clint Junior High Principal, Noemi Hernandez. "The condition of the track was really bad; in fact, it was so uneven and broken up that it quickly became a safety concern.

"There's also been talk about making improvements to our outside basketball courts and building a softball field on campus. Our current softball field is about a block or so off campus."

Hernandez added that the benefits of the new track extends beyond the students.

"The kids just love it. They're always playing on it before school, at lunch and after school. Another nice thing about the new track is that it is available to the Clint community to use after school hours.

"Our track kids are very excited because now they have something to practice on that is comparable to the other schools' tracks they compete on."

example, he noted that he will explain the origin of the colorful bandana and its use by the cowboys of the old Southwest. Salas, who grew up in El Paso County’s lower valley, stated that his interest in the life of a cowboy began when he was a member of Future Farmers of America (FFA) at Ysleta High School.

Salas related that as a youth he began working at a feed store and later as a cowboy at the Bowen Ranch, where he worked for 11 years. The Bowen Ranch is one of the few historic working cattle ranches still in existence in El Paso County. Owned by Jimmy Bowen, the massive 88,000-acre ranch is still a working cattle ranch where the Bowens raise both Hereford cattle and buffalo, both of which can be seen grazing along the mountain slopes and flatlands of the ranch, which sits along the Texas-New Mexico border near Fort Bliss north of El Paso. The Bowens have owned the ranch since the 1800s and more recently transformed it into the children’s playground and western park, as well as opening the Edge of Texas Steakhouse some 5 miles away along US Highway 54. A trip to the Bowen Ranch offers the chance to view real cowboys going about their daily work riding horses and herding cattle. After leaving the Bowen job, Salas went to work at the Serna Ranch, where he helped start the Serna Ranch Youth Leadership Program for under-privileged kids. The youth leadership program, a non-profit endeavor based in El Paso, focuses on the development of youth leadership skills and the preservation of local community’s rich Chicano and Mexican-American vaquero roots. Salas said that the Serna Ranch youth program is in partnership with Centro de Salud Familiar La Fe Inc. and works with adolescents from urban areas to teach them about the rich and vibrant vaquero history, traditions, and culture. The participants learn farming and animal-husbandry skills, agricultural and environmental responsibilities, as well as horsemanship, he stated. Additionally, Salas was a volunteer with the Huff Wagon Train Project, an educational program aimed for middle school students, where they traveled the Southwestern desert plains from the rural town of Socorro to the capitol city of Austin in wagon trains. The extraordinary journey in horse-drawn wagons brought students together to retrace the route of gold rush adventurer William P. Huff, whose 300,000-word diary shares the most detailed account available of the less-known southern gold rush trail in the mid-1800s. Salas has also worked with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Service (TPWS) as a history program presenter at the Hueco Tanks State Park. According to the program presentation, TPWS was established by the Fifty-eighth Legislature in 1963 and consolidated the operations of the Texas Game and Fish Commission and the State Parks Board. The new department was divided into six major divisions: parks, wildlife, fisheries, resource protection, law enforcement, and administrative services. By the late 1980s the Texas parks system included 129 parks, natural areas, and historic sites, totaling more than 433,000 acres. The department was responsible for the protection and management of the fish population in more than 600 public reservoirs, 16,000 miles of streams and rivers, and 370 miles of coastline. EPAS’s August guest speaker is part of the organization’s monthly meetings and lecture series. EPAS, founded in 1922, is a non-profit group. Membership is open to individuals and organizations interested in anthropology, archaeology, and in the preservation of prehistoric and historic cultural resources. Membership information can be found on the EPAS website, at <http://epas.com/membership.htm>. Currently, EPAS members have been taking part in archaeological tours and volunteer fieldwork organized by the non-profit Jornada Research Institute (JRI) of Tularosa, New Mexico. JRI’s mission is to study the archaeological, ethnohistoric, historic and natural resources of the northern Chihuahuan Desert of Arizona, New Mexico, West Texas, and adjacent regions.

Back-to-school health checklist

By S. H. Schumann, M.D.
Special to the Courier

EL PASO COUNTY – August marks back-to-school season, an ideal time for parents to help improve their children’s health. Before schedules become packed with classes, homework and extracurricular activities, here’s a back-to-school “health checklist” to help give children a better chance to succeed inside and outside the classroom:

Get a comprehensive eye exam. About 80 percent of what children learn is through their eyes. With that in mind, a child’s first comprehensive eye exam should occur before age 1, again at age 3 and before entering school. If no vision issues are detected, school-aged children should have an exam at least once every two years. Also, a school’s vision screening is not a substitute for a comprehensive eye exam, as screenings can miss conditions such as poor eye alignment, focusing issues and farsightedness.^[1]

The inability to see clearly can affect a child’s physical, emotional and social development, which in turn can affect academic and athletic performance. Children often don’t complain if their vision isn’t normal, so it’s important to look for possible signs such as squinting while reading or watching television, difficulty hitting or catching a ball, or headaches when watching 3D movies.

Also, be aware of digital eyestrain, which is caused by prolonged use of computers or smartphones. Help your child practice healthy vision habits by keeping computer screens at least 30 inches from their eyes, resting their eyes every 20 minutes and blinking frequently to avoid dry eyes.

Get a dental cleaning. Maintaining proper oral health matters more than just keeping a sparkling smile – it’s also important for good overall health. This is especially true for children, as untreated dental problems may diminish attention, decrease self-esteem and limit a child’s ability to learn at school.^[2]

Tooth decay is largely preventable, yet it ranks as the most common chronic disease among children. About 33 percent of young kids (ages 2 to 8) have cavities in their baby teeth, and 20 percent of kids in the same age group have cavities in their adult teeth.^[3] With that in mind, parents should schedule regular dental exams every six months, especially at schools that require a back-to-school dental checkup.^[4]

For parents with teenagers, it is important to recognize the risks of opioid addiction, especially after wisdom teeth removal. If you or a loved one is prescribed an opioid following a dental or other medical procedure, ask your health care professional if there are alternatives, including over-the-counter pain relievers such as a combination of acetaminophen and ibuprofen.

Get recommended immunizations. Many schools in require that children are properly immunized before they enter the classroom to help to avoid serious diseases and prevent other students from contracting them. Children’s vaccines are 90% to 99% effective and may help protect kids from diseases such as mumps, tetanus and chicken pox.^[5] By helping reduce the risk of contracting potentially preventable diseases such as the flu, children may have fewer school absences.^[6]

Parents should check with their doctor to determine what immunizations are appropriate based on age. Most shots are given by the time children are 2 years old, but some are administered into the teen years. If your child runs a low-grade fever or has swelling in the shot location after the immunization, these minor side effects typically last a couple days. Apply a cool, wet washcloth on the sore area to help ease discomfort, but check with your doctor about the appropriateness of over-the-counter pain medications.

Back-to-school season is an exciting time for many children and their parents. Consider these guidelines to help encourage your child’s health and success throughout the school year.

2019 Property Tax Rates in El Paso County Emergency Services District #1

This notice concerns 2019 property tax rates for the El Paso County Emergency Services District #1. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year’s tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year’s effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year’s rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year’s tax rate:
Last year’s operating taxes	$ 1,835,704
Last year’s debt taxes	$ 807,270
Last year’s total taxes	$ 2,642,974

(Maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearings.)

give more SISD high school students the opportunity to get ahead and save money in future college costs. The early colleges allow students to complete their high school requirements while taking college-level courses. Students in early college programs graduate with up to 60 college credit hours or an associate degree along with their high school diploma. “EPCC is proud to open three additional early college high schools with Socorro ISD,” Brian Haggerty, EPCC Board Chair said. “This is an important opportunity for students to simultaneously earn a high school diploma and an associate’s degree as well as experience first-hand that college is a realistic goal.”

El Paso’s tragedy will bring us even closer than we were before

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

As I sat down to write this column last Saturday morning there was only one problem I had to overcome – I literally had no clue what I was going to put to paper.

As I always do, and have been doing for over two decades, I wondered what in the wide world of sports was I going to write about?

I thought about the NFL players who were holding themselves out of training camp for more money. I thought about the Major League Baseball trades and resulting pennant races. I even thought about the NBA’s Christmas day TV schedule highlighted by the L.A. Lakers vs. the L.A. Clippers.

Unfortunately, I received a phone alert that morning that decided my topic for me. It read, “Active shooter situation at Walmart near Cielo Vista Mall.”

I have to be honest, I didn’t think much about it at first. I figured if anything it was one of those domestic arguments in the parking lot or maybe a kid with a BB gun.

I immediately sent a text to a friend about it and she hadn’t heard anything.

Then I received a second alert about possibly 18 people being shot. Then she suddenly began sending texts to me about what she had heard and I quickly knew this was not what I had thought.

This was major. This was a tragedy that could never happen in my city. Not in El Paso.

But sadly, my city... our city, was added to the long list of places that have had part of its heart cut out by pathetically small cowards whose hate drove them over the edge.

Like a lot of El Pasoans on that day, it was tough for me to smile. I think it’s safe to say that for all of us, it was impossible to think about anything else but our brothers and sisters, mothers and fathers, our grandparents and our children.

But I’m not talking about our blood family members – I’m talking about our other family members who were victims of the tragedy. The family members we have one thing in common with – El Paso.

I don’t know if any other place in the United States can say this, I sure some can, but El Paso is different. We are one big family.

Yes, we complain about not having much to do sometimes. We complain about the heat and then we complain about how it’s freezing when it gets down to 50 degrees. We complain about property taxes and the arena and traffic construction and so on and so forth.

But when anyone takes a swipe at us, we El Pasoans support each other like no one else.

When the call was send out for much-needed blood, we rallied in droves with lines of donators that stretched around the building.

When calls went out for water and ice for those first responders working in the 100-degree heat, we quickly arrived with tons of the stuff.

Why? We’re El Pasoans, and we have our family’s back.

A troubled coward from nearly 700 miles away may have broken our hearts. But it was the people of this city who took a punch, got back up, and put our heart back together again – stronger than before.

Every year we have players, coaches and families who come to El Paso from around the country (not knowing what to expect) to play in the Sun Bowl game.

By the time they leave they all say the same thing, “No one has ever treated us as with as much hospitality as the people of El Paso.”

There’s one reason we are one of the safest cities in the world – the people.

It’s sad that it takes a tragedy of this magnitude to get the Associated Press or CNN or Fox News to take notice of El Paso. But it also got to see our resilience, our compassion, our courage and our love.

I wish I was writing about something as insignificant as the NBA or the NCAA or the NFL, but sometimes things happen that put the world of sports in proper perspective.

This week was not a time for sports; it was a time for real life... and real death... and real tears.

Any new treatments for essential tremor?

DEAR DR. ROACH: About five years ago, I came down with essential tremor. I have tried many medicines. Currently, I'm taking propranolol and primidone, but nothing seems to help. The only thing that stops the shaking is a glass of wine. I have inquired about a laser procedure, but I found out that it's risky. An MRI was normal. I am 82 and in excellent health. I would like to know if there is anything new to help me. – J.M.

A lot of people have essential tremor – 5 percent of people worldwide. It causes a noticeable tremor, usually of the hands and arms, but also may affect the head or other body parts. The severity is variable. Some people will be annoyed by symptoms, while others have real difficulty eating or writing. An expert sometimes is needed to confirm the diagnosis, as it can appear to be similar to Parkinson's disease or other neurological conditions. However, improvement with alcohol is suggestive of essential tremor. Unfortunately, alcohol is not a good long-term treatment, as people build tolerance.

Propranolol is a beta blocker, and primidone is an anti-epilepsy drug. They are the most common pharmacologic treatments for essential tremor. You probably have tried gabapentin and topiramate, two other anti-epilepsy drugs that work for some people but may have significant side effects.

My first patient to go through ultrasound treatment for essential tremor did so a few months ago. This uses many focused ultrasound beams to heat an area of the brain called the thalamus, destroying the cells responsible for the tremor. This procedure is effective for most people, but it can have side effects, including weakness, gait disturbance and numbness. It is not clear how long the relief will last. It is an option for people whose symptoms are significantly interfering with their quality of life and who have not gotten good relief from medications. Medicare is starting to approve payment for the procedure, but it is not yet covered by most insurances. You can read more about ultrasound treatment for essential tremor at <http://bit.ly/2FPF1f9>.

DEAR DR. ROACH: On three separate occasions, I experienced a very audible high-pitched sound in my left ear, and immediately, without other warning, fell to the floor. One time I injured myself enough to require treatment from the emergency room. These happen without warning. Do you have any insight on the sounds and the falls that follow? – R.C.

Two concerns come immediately to mind; one is serious, the other not. The first is a simple faint, also called “vasovagal syncope.” Occasionally a faint is preceded by a loud rushing sound, although it usually is experienced in both ears. It’s a warning sign to sit down immediately – that often can prevent the faint from happening. However, nearly everybody with a faint has some lightheadedness, so I am not 100 percent sure of this possibility. The second possibility is both rarer and more concerning. The blood vessels in the back of the skull can be compressed or made abnormal due to tumors, abnormalities in the bone and aneurisms. Some of these can be associated with sudden loss of consciousness, often with no warning. This deserves an immediate evaluation from your regular doctor or a neurologist, perhaps even an MRI scan.

Honor Flight
needs our help

by Freddy Groves

The number of World War II veterans topped 16 million during the war. Now there are fewer than half a million still alive, all in their 80s and 90s. We’re losing over 300 WWII veterans each day. Most of them have never seen the memorial in Washington, D.C., that was built in their honor.

Honor Flights Network, a nonprofit, works to change that. Since 2010, it has escorted 222,133 veterans to see the memorial, at no cost to the veteran. Last year HFN took 21,000 veterans to Washington. The one-day trips leave from a “hub” in most states and fly to Washington, where they visit the memorial dedicated to them, as well as the Vietnam and Korean memorials. These trips are scheduled multiple times a year.

But it takes money and volunteers (guardian escorts) to pull it off, and there are over 38,000 veterans on a wait list. We’re running out of time to get all the vets to Washington who want to go.

There are programs to help more veterans get there. The Solo program is for those who have friends and family who can fund the air trip and hotel for one to three days. The Lone Eagle program is for veterans who are not near an airport hub. Once in Washington, the veteran and his escort will join the main group for all their activities. In addition, Honor Flights has expanded to include Korean War and Vietnam War veterans.

If you can send money, please do. The address is Honor Flight, Inc., 175 South Tuttle Road, Springfield, OH 45505, or donate at www.honorflight.org. (Don’t miss the video on the website).

If you want information or can serve as an escort, call Honor Flight at 937-521-2400, or Jane Julian at 614-558-6220.

If you have any medical experience, that’s a bonus, but there are many roles you can fill.

(c) 2019 King Features Synd., Inc.

• To test the seals on your refrigerator and freezer, close a piece of paper in the door. If you can pull it out easily, it’s likely that your seal is loose. Clean or replace door gaskets for a better seal.

• To clean the microwave, try adding the juice of half a lemon to a cup of water and setting to boil (four minutes) in the microwave. Let the steam circulate for an additional four minutes, then remove the cup and wipe down all sides of interior. Use the cut lemon to clean a wooden cutting board. Sprinkle with salt and scrub, then rinse and dry.

• Use a seam ripper, meant for sewing, to remove hair that is wrapped around the beater bar of your vacuum.

• “To keep plywood or thin materials from splitting, I tape my cut line with low-tack masking tape. It keeps my cut sharp, reduces the fraying and it’s easy to remove when I’m done.”
– G.S. in Minnesota

• “Old flowerpots can be brought back to new life with a good scrub, a coat of paint and a healthy dose of sealant. This works especially well on pots with some detailing. The new paint and seal really bring out the decoration, and you can make a group of mishmash pots have a cohesive look.”
– M.W. in Oregon

• Packing small jewelry for a trip? Consider using a pill minder – the plastic storage bins with seven days or more that are used to organize medicine. These work very well.

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string’s word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.
