Socorro ISD schools on ERP honor roll

Eleven schools in the Socorro Independent School District have been named to the Educational Results Partnership (ERP) 2019-2020 Honor Roll for exceptional student achievement and closing achievement gaps. The SISD schools on the honor roll are: Bill Sybert School, Dr. Sue A Shook Elementary, Horizon Heights Elementary, James P. Butler Elementary, John Drugan School, Loma Verde Elementary, Lujan-Chavez Elementary, Mission Early College High School, O'Shea Keleher Elementary, Paso Del Norte Elementary, and Sgt. Roberto Ituarte Elementary. "Congratulations to our SISD schools on the 2019-2020 ERP Honor Roll. Our teachers, administrators and instructional support staff at these campuses and ALL Team SISD schools continue their laser-sharp focus on preparing students for college, careers and beyond," said SISD Superintendent Jose Espinoza, Ed.D.

An easy win

Why strain your brain trying to win the lottery by coming up with a set of random numbers? The South African Lottery Commission says that a very lucky winner of a recent PowerBall drawing took home a prize equal to about 370,000 U.S. dollars with a numbers pick of the not-so-random sequence 5-6-7-8-9-10. The Commission says it uses a random number generator but that sometimes it can come up with a simple sequence, though it's rare.

Incentive

More people died in South Korea than were born in 2020. And so, faced with a declining population one municipality, the town of Changwon, is providing a cash incentive for married couples to have babies. The city has announced that it will give married couples "loans" of $100,000 each. Those who have an only child would have the interest on their loan waived. Couples who bear two children would have the principal reduced by 30%. And those who have three children would have their loans completely forgiven.

El Paso Zoo reopens

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

EL PASO COUNTY – Borderland residents longing for a fun family outing will be able to visit The El Paso Zoo and Botanical Gardens again, beginning Wednesday, February 10.

Hours and services, however, have been scaled back, and health and safety protocols will be followed including face covering requirements and social distancing constraints, according to zoo officials. Also, hand sanitizer dispensers and informational signs have been added throughout the zoo grounds, officials said.

The zoo's new limited hours will be from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., Wednesday through Friday and 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday. The zoo will be closed Monday and Tuesday.

Some indoor buildings will also remain

TINY ARTIST, BIG WIN – Amariah Adame is the elementary level state winner in the Youth Art Month flag design contest. Her art may advance to a national competition.

EL PASO COUNTY – Amariah Adame, a first-grade student at Sgt. Jose F. Carrasco Elementary was the elementary state winner in the Youth Art Month flag design contest. The Socorro Independent School District (SISD) student was the top elementary school winner across the state of Texas. She won for her flag drawing representing peace and love. The Texas Art Education Association sponsored the contest.

She was one of three winners in the prestigious statewide art contest, which awarded the top elementary, middle and high school students. Adame's work now may be displayed at the national level if she is chosen over the middle and high school winners to represent Texas. The Texas representative goes on to the National Art Education Association Youth Art Month flag design contest and is incorporated into a flag for display at the Youth Art Month Museum at the NAEA annual national convention.

The SISD Fine Arts Department and school employees surprised Adame with the news that she won and honored her with a certificate, balloons, and an art kit.

Claudia Cardenas, the art teacher at Carrasco Elementary, submitted Adame's flag design into the contest and was

TEA releases 2020 Annual Report and SY 2019-20 Pocket Edition

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

TEXAS – The Texas Education Agency (TEA) announced recently the release of the 2020 Annual Report and School Year 2019-20 Pocket Edition.

TEA's annual report gives an overview of the progress and advancements taking place in Texas's more than 1,200 public school systems, according to agency officials. It also serves as a helpful resource for illustrating areas where Texas must maintain its investment in ensuring every student, regardless of circumstance, is prepared for success in college, a career, or the military, TEA officials asserted.

Officials explained that the 2020 Annual Report focuses on key areas of achievement based on TEA's strategic priorities including recruit, support, and retain teachers and principals; build a foundation of reading and math; connect high school to career and college; and improve low performing schools.

The report also chronicles the agency's comprehensive stops impromptu, causing his phalanx of Secret Service agents to collide because he can’t resist a conversation and a selfie.

This is the man who urged American “folks” to “start afresh” after his predecessor (I’ve decided not to name him; we need a break) talked of “American carnage” as he described the nation in his inaugural address four years ago, turning it into a self-fulfilling prophecy. Starting afresh is easy to say, but the devil is in the details.

Now, one might think that West Palm is not your idea of Hades, with its golf courses, but the previous POTUS faces a future of meeting with his attorneys to fend off a seemingly infinite number of legal actions that are piled up with his name as defendant. And if you don’t think endlessly meeting with a bunch of lawyers ain’t hell, you have never received an itemized account of billable hours.

Of course, the lawyers face their own anguish too, trying to collect the money that he invariably stiffes them on, along with everyone else with whom he does business.

Meanwhile, back in The Swamp, protected by thousands of police and armed soldiers, Joe – excuse me, Mr. President – is guaranteed a bit of a honeymoon. He can start by just cleaning up the obvious garbage that has been left behind by you-know-who. It’s a massive pile of rubbish, complete with a writer’s cramp worth of executive orders that need his signature. This includes reversing policies inspired by cruel xenophobia that defined the past four years, tax breaks for the wealthy and deregulation to enrich them too. There is joining the world in fighting off calamitous climate change before the entire planet is consumed – in fact, joining the world in general – repairing alliances and rejecting tyranny.

Speaking of repairing, he is going to have to pretend he likes journalists or at least can tolerate skeptical news coverage, as opposed to treating media as “the enemy of the people.” That should be easy, considering how Biden used to hang out and schmooze with reporters every chance he got. Actually, Vice President Kamala Harris did too. We’ll see how long it takes for all that glad-handing to turn into a fist.

And the new Biden administration has made some grandiose promises about defeating the coronavirus pandemic and its economic wreckage, beyond acknowledging them, as his prior job holder refused to do. A moving tribute to the 400,000 Americans who died is one thing,

Small changes can minimize waste, conserve water

By John Balliew
Special to the Courier

EL PASO COUNTY – We all have a responsibility to be good environmental stewards.

El Paso Water has helped make water conservation a way of life in our community. For three decades, water conservation has been a priority for us, and as a result we have seen total water usage per person decline by 30 percent.

During the pandemic, many households at home for work or school saw water use rise as we used more water for drinking, cooking and washing. Similarly, residential waste volumes have risen as the City’s Environmental Services Department had to pause recycling because of pandemic-related staffing shortages.

Increases in water use and waste also impact energy use since waste removal relies on transportation and water production and pumping depend on electricity.

M a k i n g small changes at home have the potential to make a significant impact in our community.

El Pasoans know that minor changes such as washing clothes in cold water and using their dishwasher instead of washing dishes by hand make a difference in your water bill.

But conserving water isn’t just about turning off the tap while brushing or using water-saving toilets, it also means making conscious, responsible decisions that will minimize waste as well.

• At EPWater, we always say no to bottled water. Unlike bottled water, tap water faces more rigid quality and health standards. Trust your tap, and carry a reusable water bottle.

• The largest component sent to the Environmental Protection Agency. Wasting food is not only money down the drain, but a waste of energy, land, water and fertilizers needed to grow and distribute food. Make a shopping list with specific meals in mind, get creative in the kitchen with your leftovers or learn how to compost your food scraps at home.

• Buy foods with little or no packaging.

• Use reusable containers to store your food instead of plastic bags, aluminum foil or plastic cling wrap.

• Avoid disposable cups, plates, utensils and straws.

• Clean with reusable rags instead of paper towels.

Unfortunately, the pandemic spurred excessive waste in the form of disposable masks, gloves and sanitizer bottles. But, as people stayed at home to prevent the spread of COVID, it also opened up the opportunity for many of us to improve our sustainable living skills.

According to the EPA, the average American generates 4.9 pounds of trash daily. We can all set personal goals for reducing the household trash we generate each week.

If each household makes these minor adjustments, we can make a big difference to build a more sustainable community for our children and grandchildren. Together, we can ensure that El Paso has a more sustainable environment and reliable, high quality water for years to come.

John Balliew is President/CEO of El Paso Water.

Thought police seek to strangle free speech

Long a stalwart defender of the First Amendment, the American media is now having second thoughts.

For decades, it was a commonplace sentiment among journalists that freedom of the press was one of the glories of our system. It helped to make the government accountable and to air diverse points of view – even unpopular ones – to be tested in the marketplace of ideas.

Media organizations were at the forefront of the fight to vindicate First Amendment rights, with The New York Times involved in two landmark Supreme Court decisions (New York Times Co. v. Sullivan and the Pentagon Papers case) and tended to rise as one against any perceived threat to their prerogatives and freedoms.

This advocacy has been sincere, although, if nothing else, journalists should be First Amendment purists out of a sense of self-interest. In a 2018 essay in The Atlantic representing the bygone conventional wisdom, titled “Why a Free Press Matters,” the longtime newscaster Dan Rather noted, “As a working journalist, I know I have a stake in this concept.”

One would think so. Yet, now journalists have lurched from finding a threat to freedom to the press in every criticism of reporters and news outlets by former President Donald Trump to themselves calling for unwelcome media organizations to be shut down.

They’ve become the thing they profess to hate – closed-minded censors who want to stifle free expression, First Amendment be damned.

Perversely, the TV program and email newsletter of the top media analyst at CNN, Brian Stelter, has been a clearinghouse for such advocacy, whether it is demands to get right-wingers removed from social media or – more astonishingly – to keep conservative cable networks off the airwaves.

Stelter’s colleague, media reporter Oliver Darcy, tweeted about his effort to get cable companies to answer why they carry pro-Trump channels like Newsmax and One America News Network. “Do they have any second thoughts about distributing these channels given their election denialism content?” he asked on Twitter. “They won’t say.”

In the same vein, Washington Post columnist Max Boot drew a direct line between how we deal with foreign terror groups and how we should treat right-wing media organizations. “We need,” he wrote, “to shut down the influencers who radicalize people and set them on the path toward violence and sedition.”

Boot noted, approvingly, that the U.K. doesn’t have the equivalent of Fox News because regulators won’t allow it. The U.K. also doesn’t have a First Amendment, a small detail that might be worth considering if the point is to protect our freedoms rather than destroy them in a fit of ideological vengeance.

A writer at the progressive publication Mother Jones argued for an advertiser boycott instead of regulatory action in a post called, charmingly, “It’s Time to among the first to know that she won. Cardenas was thrilled to let her know she was a state champion.

When Adame was told that she won, she said she could not believe it and was happy to know she was representing her school and the El Paso region.

“I received a lot of gifts because I won the contest,” Adame said. “It feels good. I’m happy.”

SISD employees, Carrasco staff and the school’s mascot were excited to congratulate Adame for the creativity in her artwork.

“We are so proud of (Amariah) for representing herself and the district, with her flag which represents unity and love,” said Armando Martinez, SISD Fine Arts director. “Considering the times that we are going through these days... it represents what our nation needs.”

but moving on to snuffing out COVID is an imperative.

Also imperative is making good on the inequities that have plagued the United States since before our beginning, when our colonists brought the first people of color here in chains. The promise made in the Declaration of Independence was a big lie:

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are

The time for patience is over. First we need to destroy the vicious white supremacist militias, then we need to attack the vestiges of polite racism. Valentine, TX prepares for annual tradition

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

VALENTINE – Valentine, Texas has been offering lovers worldwide a novel way to commemorate Valentine’s Day (February 14) for more than 30 years, and this year’s observance is no exception. The quaint West Texas town, which is about 150 miles east of El Paso County on Texas Highway 90, announced recently that its special Valentine’s Day postmark for 2021 has been selected and that its post office is prepared for the annual tradition.

A customized pictorial postmark design is selected every year as part of a contest among the town’s school students. This year, the winner is eighth-grader Arturo A. Gutierrez III, who featured a pair of deer whose horns come together in the shape of a heart. Valentine’s Day Gutierrez related to town officials that he got the inspiration from a pair of deer he would often see while visiting his grandmother’s gravesite. Valentine’s Day enthusiasts can have their Valentine’s Day cards sent to their sweethearts with the special Valentine, Texas postmark by mailing them to the town’s post office. To send a card with the Valentine, TX postmark, interested individuals may address the card to that special person, affix a first-class postage stamp (like the Love 2021 Forever Stamp) and put it into a larger envelope, also with appropriate postage. Then, address the larger, outer envelope to: Valentine’s Day Postmark, Postmaster, 311 W. California Ave., Valentine, Texas 79854-9998.

The agency has also released its School Year (SY) 2019-20 Pocket Edition, which annually provides a detailed, easy-to-access summary of the public-school landscape in Texas with details on student population, students by program, special education services, kindergarten readiness, and a review of public education spending for fiscal year (FY) 2019, officials noted.

The Super Bowl is here and the winner will be...

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

Well, it’s finally here. In a year that many of us thought it might not come at all, the Super Bowl is upon us.

This Sunday the Kansas City Chiefs and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers will meet in America’s greatest sporting event.

And for the first time in league history, a team will play the big game on its home field as the Bucs will play in their own Raymond James Stadium.

Normally, that would give the home team a big advantage, but because of covid restrictions, only about 22,000 fans will be allowed in the nearly 66,000-capacity arena.

And because the Super Bowl is a national event, not all those fans buying the expensive tickets will be Tampa Bay fans.

But nevertheless, the big news is that the game is here. Despite all the problems with the virus, somehow the NFL was able to get through its regular season and the playoffs with very few hitches.

And what a matchup!

This game will pit the best quarterback in NFL history against a young man who many believe may eventually be the greatest quarterback in NFL history.

Tom Brady did an amazing job in his first season with the Bucs. He took a 7-9 team from a year ago and has led them all the way to the title game. Let’s face it, if anyone doubted (and I am one of them) that Brady is the best of all time what he’s done this season should erase all questions.

In fact, Brady affected two teams, his arrival in Tampa made them a winner, and his departure from New England made them a loser.

On the other side of the field will be the defending Super Bowl-winning quarterback, Patrick Mahomes.

At 25, Mahomes has already been an NFL MVP, a Super Bowl winner, a Super Bowl MVP and is only one of two quarterbacks (Peyton Manning) to have thrown for 50 touchdowns and 5,000 yards in a single season.

How much older is Brady than Mahomes? Brady, 43, who will be playing in his 10th Super Bowl, was a freshman at Michigan when Mahomes was literally in diapers.

Here’s another, Brady won his first Super Bowl when Mahomes was just six years old.

Of course there are many other players who are going to help decide the outcome of the game. Kansas City has a wide variety of offensive weapons like receivers Tyreek Hill and Travis Kelce and Sammy Watkins and Mecole Hardman.

The running game for the Chiefs isn’t especially strong, but it’s adequate.

The Bucs have some fire power too with receivers Mike Evans, Antonio Brown, Rob Gronkowski, Chris Godwin and Scott Miller.

The running game advantage definitely goes to the Bucs with Ronald Jones and Leonard Fournette.

When you break these teams down, the biggest difference may be in the defenses. Tampa Bay gave Aaron Rodgers and the Packers all kinds of problems with constant pressure.

The Chiefs have improved on defense, but aren’t nearly as disruptive as the Bucs.

So to me, it all comes down to the old vs. the new; Brady vs. Mahomes.

Saftey tips for driving near big rigs

By Jeff Salzgeber
Special to the Courier

AUSTIN – TxDOT is reminding all drivers to take extra precautions when driving around trucks.

Thousands of large trucks and tractor-trailers travel busy Texas highways every day. Weighing 20 times more than an average car, “big rigs” require more time to accelerate and decelerate and have large blind spots that other motorists need to be aware of to help avoid a potentially deadly crash.

An 80,000-pound, loaded tractor-trailer going 65 mph can take as much as the length of a football field to come to a complete stop, which is why motorists should avoid driving too closely or swerving in front of a large truck.

Tractor-trailers and large trucks also have more and larger blind spots than passenger vehicles do. It’s important to try to stay out of these blind spots around the front, back and sides of trucks. A good rule of thumb for motorists to remember is that if they can’t see the truck driver in the truck’s side mirror, that truck driver can’t see them or their vehicle either.

To help keep everyone safe on the road, TxDOT asks

- motorists to give trucks plenty of room and observe the following safety tips when driving around large trucks:
- Pass trucks safely by waiting until you can see both truck headlights in your rearview mirror before moving back into your lane. Pass a truck only when it’s legal and safe.
 - Stay away from a truck’s “No Zones,” blind spot areas in which crashes are more likely to occur. No Zones include the blind spots along each side, the space up to 20 feet in front of the cab, and the area up to 200 feet behind the trailer.
 - Maintain a safe following distance. Be sure you can see the driver in the truck’s side mirror.
 - Never cross behind a truck that is backing up.

- Don’t squeeze between a truck and the curb. Trucks make wide right turns, and the driver may not see you.

“Be Safe. Drive Smart.” is a key component of #EndTheStreakTX, a broader social media and word-of-mouth effort that encourages drivers to make safer choices while behind the wheel such as wearing a seat belt, driving the speed limit, never texting and driving and never driving under the influence of alcohol or other drugs. Nov. 7, 2000 was the last deathless day on Texas roadways. #EndTheStreakTX asks all Texans to commit to driving safely to help end the streak of daily deaths on Texas roadways.

Nov. 7, 2000 was the last deathless day on Texas roadways.

Crush Fox News.”

A boycott wouldn’t violate the First Amendment like a direct crackdown on Fox and others. Still, it would be private action undertaken in the service of a profoundly illiberal goal, running counter to the country’s culture of free speech.

All of this would be bad enough if it weren’t people who write and comment on TV for a living advocating it. But journalists have been moving in this direction for a while now, as Armin Rosen catalogues in a disturbing report for Tablet magazine.

The author, Steve Coll, who is no less than the dean of the Graduate School of Journalism at Columbia University, said last December, “Those of us in journalism have to come to terms with the fact that free speech, a principle that we hold sacred, is being weaponized against the principles of journalism.” The former managing editor of Time magazine, Richard

Office test alone

can’t diagnose COPD

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am a healthy 70-year-old woman. The only prescription medication I take is for dry eyes. I recently visited my new primary physician for the first time, and she had me do a breathing test, where I exhaled into a tube to measure airflow. I was told to breathe deeply and exhale completely into the tube three times in succession. It took less than a minute to complete. It is apparently a routine test she orders for new patients. She then told me I have COPD, on the basis of that test alone. She asked if I had ever smoked or been exposed to secondhand smoke. That was her only question – coughing or shortness of breath was never mentioned. I have never smoked, but my father was a smoker when I was growing up. I actually do have a slightly productive cough most mornings. I probably walk about 10 miles a week, and I do notice some shortness of breath on long uphill sections, though I can walk briskly in level areas for miles with no problem. She said it is not advanced enough to require an inhaler at this time. I am bothered by this very easy “diagnosis” on the basis of one simple test. I wonder if I should ask to be referred to a pulmonologist for a more thorough evaluation. – O.P.

The test your doctor performed is called office spirometry, and it is useful for monitoring known pulmonary diseases, especially COPD and asthma. However, by itself, it is inadequate to make the diagnosis of COPD, which I am not sure you have.

The diagnosis of COPD is made in people with persistent respiratory symptoms, usually shortness of breath or coughing. Spirometry will usually show obstruction to airflow. Formal pulmonary function testing, which is an extensive process taking an hour or so with a skilled and experienced technician, is ideal for determining severity.

The problem with getting a breathing test in someone who has no significant symptoms is that you can find someone whose test results are at or just below the lower limit of normal, and the diagnosis is unclear. The prognosis for people with mild airway obstruction but with no symptoms of COPD is much better than for people with COPD and who continue to smoke. For this reason, using spirometry as a screening test for everyone is not recommended.

Without knowing the exact results of your spirometry, I suspect you do not have COPD, given your absence of smoking and your extremely mild symptoms. A comprehensive exam by a pulmonologist would be definitive and may help you be less anxious about the results you have now.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I saw your recent column on enlarged prostate, and I have the same problem. I have no history of cancer, but I do have a high PSA and symptoms of frequent urination. Because of other medications, I cannot take ibuprofen, so I am curious if Tylenol has the same anti-inflammatory effect. I do occasionally use Tylenol for headaches and arthritis pain. – J.B.

The exact mechanism of how Tylenol reduces pain remains a mystery. However, it is not an anti-inflammatory drug like ibuprofen, so would not be expected to have the benefit in prostate symptoms that some men get from taking an ibuprofen at bedtime.

Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual questions, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Readers may email questions to ToYourGoodHealth@med.cornell.edu. (c) 2021 North America Synd., Inc. All Rights Reserved.

Has the VA called about Solid Start?

by Freddy Groves

Have you been separated from the service for less than a year? Did you receive your phone calls from the Department of Veterans Affairs? They will try to contact you at the 90, 180 and 365-day point. The reason: Solid Start.

Solid Start is a program to ensure that newly separated veterans know what their benefits are. Some that you might have questions about are housing assistance, health care, home loans, pension and employment. (Be sure you've updated contact info on eBenefits so they know how to find you.)

Solid Start is more than just benefits info. Many of us have a tough time when we make the switch to civilian life. With so many changes, some of us don't do well with all the upheaval to our lives. But you're not alone. We've all made that trek.

If the stress is too much, the VA can help there, too. Even if you haven't signed up yet for VA health care, if you're struggling, walk into any VA medical center, day or night, or a Vet Center clinic during open hours. Just walk in.

Meanwhile, be sure you're signed up for VA health care. Start by calling (1-877-222-8387) Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. ET.

To learn more about Solid Start, go online to www.benefits.va.gov/transition/solid-start.asp and scroll around. Don't miss the Find Resources button. You'll see links to medical centers, PTSD programs, benefits, substance disorder programs, all of it.

If you get a call from 1-800-827-0611, that's the Solid Start folks. That's also their hotline should you need help. Call them if you haven't heard anything in the first 90 days.

Just a heads up: When these VA reps call you, they won't be asking for any financial info.

If someone does, they're fakes and thieves, so hang up.

• N.B. of Texas, writes: "I never could find the time to exercise. When I got home, I had to rush to get supper, etc., and afterward all I wanted to do was plop down and watch television. Then I got an exercise mat and a stationary bicycle. When I couldn't work out very long, I worked out during commercials. I've lost 3 pounds so far!" Great idea for all those with fitness on their New Year's Resolution lists, Nancy!

• Two wonderful tips came in from G.K. of Minnesota: "To protect floors from being damaged by chairs being pushed around, glue rounds of carpeting beneath the chair legs. They are easily removed for replacing as they wear down. Also, when making bread or rolls, warm the flour in the oven or microwave so as not to chill the butter. The dough will rise faster."

• B.W. of Colorado swears by brake cleaner to get rid of bad spots on carpets. "Regular automotive brake cleaner on the spot and a clean rag will remove almost all stains," he says.

• "In cold winter months, keep your robe (and slippers or whatever else) under the covers with you when you sleep. Pull it next to or over you a few minutes before you get up. It'll be toasty and will help make the transition into the cold a little less harsh." – B.M. in New York

• If your animals try to get out when you go into or out of the house, keep some toys or treats in your pocket or near the door to throw across the room, giving you a few seconds to slip in or out.

• As tax time draws closer, try taping a large manila envelope to the fridge, leaving the top open. Immediately place all tax-related forms and receipts in the envelope as they come in. This way, when you are ready to start your taxes, all items will be together and easy to find.

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string's word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.
