Doctors

With National Doctors’ Day on March 30 and physicians working to combat the COVID-19 pandemic and administer vaccines, the personal-finance website WalletHub has released its report on 2021’s Best & Worst States for Doctors, as well as accompanying videos. To identify the best states for those in the business of saving lives, WalletHub compared the 50 states and the District of Columbia across 19 key metrics. The data set ranges from the average annual wage of physicians to hospitals per capita to the quality of the public hospital system. Texas was rated 24th in the report. Stats for practicing in Texas (1-Best, 25-Avg.):

- 30th – Avg. Annual Wage of Physicians (Adjusted for Cost of Living);
- 12th – Avg. Monthly Starting Salary of Physicians (Adjusted for Cost of Living);
- 29th – Hospitals per Capita;
- 51st – Insured Population Rate;
- 48th – Projected Percent of Population Aged 65 & Older by 2030;
- 18th – Projected Physicians per Capita by 2028;
- 20th – Punitiveness of State Medical Board;
- 1st – Malpractice Award Payout Amount per Capita; and
- 11th – Annual Malpractice Liability Insurance Rate.

The dog faked it

Russell Jones who lives in London was concerned when he noticed his dog was walking with one of its front paws raised so he took his pet to the vet for a checkup. It cost him the equivalent of $400 but the dog doctor could find nothing wrong with the pooch’s leg. It turned out that Jones, himself, had a broken ankle and that his dog was actually mimicking his limp.

UMC mobile clinic delivers vaccine to people in rural communities

EL PAOS COUNTY – The University Medical Center of El Paso (UMC) has been sending out its mobile clinic unit to communities in the outlying areas of El Paso’s city limits for about a month now in an effort to bring the COVID-19 vaccine to anxious residents living in these rural neighborhoods and in nursing homes located throughout the region.

With a staff of about 13 medical professionals, the mobile clinic has been moving from one location to another, Monday through Friday, to administer the vaccine shots to individuals who previously made appointments and to register individuals who have not yet gotten their place in line and are eligible.

The number of shots administered on a given day depends on the amount of vaccines on-hand and the location that is being served on that day, according to one of the UMC mobile unit workers. Up to 120 shots may be administered on some days, the worker stated.

The mobile clinic was in El Paso County’s upper valley recently at the Canutillo Northwest Health Center, which is situated in the Lone Star building adjacent to the Canutillo Elementary School campus in the Canutillo Independent School District.

Beginning in the early morning hours, mostly elderly residents waited their turn to enter the building as they steadily made their way to the first station, which placed them in a hallway lobby with chairs socially distanced. There, they were asked to fill-out a set of paperwork that elicited demographic, insurance, and medical history information from the individuals. UMC staff patiently assisted anyone who needed help filling out the forms. The vaccine shots are free.

Once the paperwork was completed, after a wait of about five minutes, each individual was called into the second station, a separate room where a medical staff member administered the Pfizer-

STEP RIGHT UP – Upper Valley residents recently lined up outside the Canutillo Northwest Health Center to wait for their turn to receive the Pfizer-BioNTech COVID-19 vaccine. As of March 20, over 127,000 El Paso County residents have tested positive for COVID-19, with more than 2,320 individuals dying from complications of the virus.

Presidential cliches

How is the first hundred days of a presidency like Valentine’s Day? Valentine’s is a Hallmark concoction; the first hundred days is a news concoction – a reason for papers, magazines, broadcasters, narrowcasters, social media and anti-social media to ramp up entire sections of their papers and fill the screen with graphics and analyses that have catchy titles like “Biden His Time – 100 Days.”

It’s arbitrary, particularly since, to quote then Vice President Joe Biden whispering in President Barack Obama’s ear as he signed health care reform into law, a “big [expletive] deal” has taken place in half that time. At 50-ish days, the Biden team has successfully passed through Congress a nearly $2 trillion pandemic rescue plan called, cleverly enough, the American Rescue Plan, with almost no Republican support. Expect a nonstop victory lap. In fact, it has already started. The legislation became law a day early when the legal scutwork went faster than expected, so President Biden signed it right away. “We want to move as fast as possible,” said chief of staff Ron Klain.

Then it was on to the nationwide TV speech in prime time. Was it gloating when he promised to have enough vaccine available for every arm in America by May 1? Not IN everybody’s arm, that will take a lot of time. But still, by July 4 we should be on our way, said the president, to “not only mark our independence as a nation, but we begin to mark our independence from this virus.” The keyword here is “begin.”

That was not to say that they skipped the White House celebration with every Democrat in the world present. That may be a slight exaggeration, but the way it laid out, after the bill was signed, it got not one, not two, but three televised news hits. That was not counting the Sunday talk shows and, the following week, a bunch of as many photogenic events across the country as President Biden and Vice President Kamala Harris can cram in before people get tired of hearing about COVID relief. Lost in all this is the fact that the key vaccines to all this had been developed under a remarkable

Hear ye all seniors: Get your hearing checked out

Too many older Americans – most of us, in fact – suffer from hearing loss. But the worst thing about this fact is that most seniors are not getting their hearing checked on any regular basis, and too many doctors are not encouraging their older patients to get their hearing checked, according to the Association of Mature American Citizens (AMAC).

Rebecca Weber, CEO of the Association of Mature American Citizens, says that as you might expect some 50% of seniors over the age of 75 have hearing loss. And, she notes, about one-third of those older adults 65 to 70 years of age can’t hear as well as they did when they were younger.

The National Institute on Deafness describes hearing loss as “a sudden or gradual decrease in how well you can hear. It is one of the most common conditions affecting older and elderly adults. Having trouble hearing can make it hard to understand and follow a doctor’s advice, to respond to warnings, and to hear doorbells and alarms. It can also make it hard to enjoy talking with friends and family. All of this can be frustrating, embarrassing, and even dangerous.”

According to a study reported by Newsmax recently, “A national survey of more than 2,000 adults, aged 50 to 80, found that 80% said their primary care doctor hadn’t asked about their hearing in the past two years. Nearly as many said they haven’t had their hearing checked by a professional over the same time period.”

Dr. Michael McKee headed up the study conducted by the University of Michigan’s Institute for Healthcare Policy and Innovation. It found that “Hearing loss data show a major gap in detection, and disparities between groups.”

AMAC’s Weber is recommending that seniors citizens have their hearing checked out even if they are not experiencing obvious signs of loss. “It’s a good thing to find out as soon and as often as need be that your hearing is what it should be at your specific age.”

The Healthy Hearing Website recommends that “Generally, people 60 and older should have a baseline hearing test and get rechecked every few years. (We say “generally” because medical organizations disagree on exactly when an older adult with no symptoms should have their first hearing test, and how often they should get rechecked.) This is to rule out age-related hearing loss.”

COVID Relief Bill: Bad policy, bad faith

Joe Biden has signed what may well end up being the biggest accomplishment of his presidency, an enormous $1.9 trillion COVID relief bill.

With his other priorities likely to molder in the Senate, the spending will probably stand as a signature statement of Biden’s approach to governance – and it should be a damning one.

The legislation is a misnomer; it is neither a COVID nor a relief bill. Only a tiny portion of the spending in the bill goes toward vaccinations and other priorities directly related to the pandemic.

Much of the rest of the spending is not well-suited, or even designed, to respond to current economic conditions, which are increasingly favorable.

Democrats are telling themselves that it’s like 1933, when we were in the midst of a depression, whereas it’s more like 1983, when we were coming out of a punishing recession.

Or to put it another way, the Biden bill is reacting to the wrong spring. It is no longer the cataclysmic spring of 2020, with the economy shuttered and nothing to fight the virus except social distancing and masks, but the much more hopeful spring of 2021, with the economy opening back up, COVID cases steeply declining and vaccinations ramping up massively.

Jobless claims have decreased, and personal incomes are higher than when the pandemic started. Both the Congressional Budget Office and Goldman Sachs are projecting rapid economic growth in 2021. As states open back up, nearly 20% of the U.S. population has received at least one vaccination shot.

This isn’t to say that all is well. There is an estimated $420 billion hole in the economy, although, as even center-left critics of the bill have noted, you don’t need a $1.9 trillion bill to fill it.

The latest bout of spending is spread around willy-nilly on Democratic priorities and constituencies.

Take public education, where Democratic-allied teacher unions dominate. It’s not clear why any additional spending is necessary, given that tens of billions of education funding from prior COVID relief bills are still unspent, even as many districts have already begun to reopen for in-person instruction.

Nonetheless, the bill spends roughly another $130 billion on K-12 education, which will be spread out over years. The CBO projects more spending for elementary and secondary education will occur in fiscal year 2026 than this fiscal year.

The $350 billion in aid to states and localities comes despite state and local tax revenue being down only a tick through much of 2020 compared with the year before. According to widely cited Moody’s economist Mark Zandi, the state and local funding gap will be roughly $60 billion through fiscal 2022. Still, states and localities will be showered with money, after more than $500 billion in aid to states and localities last year.

The bill spends $86 billion bailing out union-negotiated multi-employer pension plans.

Transportation gets tens of billions of new spending, which by its nature doesn’t happen quickly, and more than $30 billion goes to expanding Obamacare, a long-term Democratic policy goal.

It’s doubtful that the checks of $1,400 to individuals are necessary; it is more supply – i.e., businesses being closed or supply chains disrupted – than demand that is hampering the economy now.

The continued elevated unemployment payments make unemployment more lucrative than employment for many people, and will discourage a return to work at the margins.

For all that, the bill is popular. From where Biden sits, why not spend as much as possible under the rubric of “COVID relief”? To paraphrase Rahm Emanuel, a pandemic is a terrible thing to waste.

Assuming the bill doesn’t cause some disastrous unintended consequence, it will allow Biden to take credit for a roaring economic recovery that is already building.

This might be shrewd politics, but it is not evidence-based or bipartisan governance. It’s getting while the getting is good, and assuming that no one will notice.

Vaccine

BioNTech COVID-19 vaccine shot, seemingly a quick and painless procedure.

After the shot was given, the vaccinated person was escorted to the third station where they were advised to sit for a few minutes to ensure that no adverse reaction would occur. Having acknowledged that they felt fine, they were given a card documenting that they had received the shot, and before they left were told to expect a phone call to schedule their second shot in about three weeks. The entire process took less than an hour to complete.

“I am truly appreciative to the county hospital’s outreach program, its mobile clinic unit, because if they had not come out to my community, I probably would not have been able to get the vaccine in such a timely manner,” stated a 70-year-old Canutillo resident who asked that his name not be used.

UMC has only one mobile clinic unit in service so its daily scheduled locations are not announced in advance to the public because the county hospital medical staff does not want a rush of people who have not pre-registered to show up, according to Ryan Mielke, UMC public information officer. The best thing to do, he said, is to call the UMC phone line at (915) 200-2700 or visit the UMCelpaso.org website to pre-register.

Currently, those eligible to register for the UMC mobile clinic vaccine include Texas residents who fall under Phases 1A and 1B of the state’s guidelines. Those phases consist of first responders, health care personnel, persons 65 and older, and those 16 and older with at least one chronic medical condition. School and childcare personnel can also register for the vaccine.

For more information about UMC’s vaccine rollout and other medical services, interested individuals may visit the hospital’s website listed above.

Coronavirus money survey

Due to the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on people’s finances, around 145 million Americans say they cannot afford another year like 2020, according to WalletHub’s new Coronavirus Money Survey. This survey illustrates some of the ways in which COVID-19 has impacted Americans’ lives and spending habits. Below are additional highlights of the report, including a Q&A with WalletHub analyst Jill Gonzalez. Some key stats include:

- Money problems are a huge source of stress. Money problems have now surpassed COVID-19 as being the top stressor in America, a 15% change since last year.
- The pandemic causes more need for credit cards. 29 Million more Americans say they will apply for a new credit card this year due to coronavirus, compared to last year.
- Women’s spending has increased more. Women are 16% more likely than men to say they spend more money due to coronavirus.
- Many Americans have decided to start saving. 61% of Americans are saving more money during the coronavirus pandemic, rather than spending more.
- Touching cash is less scary. About 30% fewer people than last year believe it is possible to contract COVID-19 from money.

Q&A:
How difficult was 2020 for Americans’ finances?

Financially, 2020 was such a difficult year that roughly 145 million Americans said they cannot afford another year like it. Luckily, the U.S. is rolling out the COVID-19 vaccine, which will help conditions in the country approach normalcy more and more over the coming months. The American Rescue Plan, which comes with $1,400 direct payments, should also help ease the burden on people’s finances this year.

How are consumers reacting to the coronavirus pandemic financially?

One of the biggest ways that consumers have reacted to the COVID-19 pandemic is by opening more credit card accounts, as 29 million more Americans say they will apply for a card this year than last year. One positive way that consumers have reacted to the pandemic is by increasing the amount of money they save. Roughly 61% of adults say they are saving more, as opposed to buying more, due to COVID-19.

How are consumers feeling emotionally?

The COVID-19 pandemic is now the second biggest stressor in America, with money problems taking first place. The U.S. is rolling out the COVID-19 vaccine and people have gotten used to social distancing measures, which explains why people are worrying a bit less about the pandemic itself. The long-lasting financial consequences caused by COVID-19 are now taking a more prominent position in people’s minds.

Has the relief money provided directly to Americans been effective?

The stimulus checks provided directly to Americans have been a big help during the COVID-19 pandemic. In fact, they led to record paydowns of credit-card debt in 2020, in addition to helping people keep up with other essential bills. The additional $1,400 checks provided through the American Rescue Plan should have a similarly positive impact.

The complete survey results can be found at <https://wallethub.com/credit-cards#survey>.

March Madness is here, but not all the way back

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

Little by little, signs are showing up everywhere that the world is starting its way back to normalcy.

After going through a year unlike any the modern world has never experienced, it proves to us that we’re not as invincible as we thought we were. And maybe it’ll teach us not to take as many things for granted.

Though things are on the comeback, it’s obviously not going to be at 100 percent for a while still.

You can see this in the world of sports.

One of the very positive signs is the NCAA basketball tournament going on right now. If you’ll remember, the whole thing was cancelled at the last minute a year ago.

They call it March Madness and the United States virtually shut everything down on March 13 last year.

This year’s college basketball regular season had its share of postponements and cancellations, but it was able to limp through and make it to the Big Dance.

The tournament, which is currently in its second week, is a little different than usual.

It started with the same number of 68 teams, but unlike past years, it is being played in just one state, Indiana. Teams are being tested for the virus daily and special rules have been put in place because of covid. One of the rules is all a team needs to play a game is five healthy players; not even a coaching staff.

Virginia Commonwealth University was the only team in the first round of the tournament that had positive covid results and had to forfeit its game with Oregon.

One out of 68 isn’t bad at all. It could have been much worse.

After missing what has turned into a springtime ritual in this country, it feels so good (and normal) to have the Madness back. We’ve already had the usual upsets and blowouts and nail biters that we’ve grown accustomed to at this time of year.

But before we get too comfortable, the world’s largest sporting event is bringing us back down to earth.

As many of you may know, it has been decided that the cancelled summer Japan Olympics of 2020 will return in 2021.

That is great news... kind of.

It was also announced last weekend that no one from outside the country would be allowed to travel to Japan to attend the games.

Naturally, the decision has to do with the threat of the virus re-emerging in the country.

The Olympics have always been a place where the fans from all over the world converge in a show of competition, sportsmanship and peace.

Of course there’s always the possibility that many countries may decide to skip the games this year because of the same fears.

Officials said the risk was too great to admit ticket holders from overseas during a pandemic. The Japanese public also has opposed fans from abroad. Several surveys have shown that up to 80 percent oppose holding the Olympics, and a similar percentage opposed fans from overseas attending.

Because of all this, it wouldn’t shock me if they went ahead and cancelled the games again some time over the next four months.

Getting a Social Security representative payee

By Ray Vigil
Special to the Courier

Millions of people get monthly Social Security benefits or Supplemental Security Income payments. Some need help managing their money. When we receive information that indicates you need help, we’ll assign a representative payee to manage your benefits for you. We try to select someone who knows you and wants to help you. A representative payee receives your monthly benefit payment on your behalf and

- must use the money to pay for your current needs, including:
- Housing and utilities;
  - Food;
  - Medical and dental expenses;
  - Personal care items;
  - Clothing; and
  - Rehabilitation expenses (if you’re disabled).

If you need help managing your benefits, tell a Social Security representative that there is someone you want to be your representative payee. They should be someone you trust and see often, and who clearly understands your needs. Social service agencies, nursing homes, or other organizations are also qualified to be your representative payee. Ask them to contact us.

You can write to us within 60 days of being assigned a representative payee if you don’t agree that you need one or if you want a different representative payee.

We also offer an option, called Advance Designation, which allows you to choose a representative payee in advance. In the event you can no longer make your own financial decisions, you and your family will have peace of mind knowing you already chose someone you trust to manage your benefits.

You can submit your advance designation request when you apply for benefits or after you are already receiving benefits. You may do so through your personal my Social Security account at www.ssa.gov/myaccount, by telephone, or in person. Visit <http://www.ssa.gov/payee> for more information.

I mean the object of the games isn’t just to crown the world’s best athletes, but it’s also trying to lose as little money as possible. All the cities that host the games always lose money.

With no fans coming in from around the world, sounds like a colossal money-loser to me.

As El Paso sports fans know, the Triple-A baseball season was delayed a month due to the virus. So while the Chihuahuas are going to have a baseball season this summer, they’re moving slowly to ensure safety.

A lot of the country is starting to open its public establishments, easing mask-wearing requirements and raising capacity limits, but the idea is to proceed slowly – just like sports.

It was difficult to go through last spring without March Madness.

And without teams like Kentucky and Duke even qualifying this year, the championship seems like it’s up for grabs.

Who is going to win this thing? Who cares?

The simple fact the tournament is back and in full swing makes all of us feel like dancing.

drove off with her vehicle. Unbeknownst to him, there was a four-year-old child in the back seat. But apparently he was a conscientious thief, so he turned around, drove back to the scene of the crime, found the kid’s mother, returned her child and proceeded to give her a tongue lashing for being so careless before stealing her automobile for a second time. The police found the car some 18 miles away in Portland but not the culprit.

“Operation Warp Speed,” which was approved and pushed by the administration of President Donald Trump. Warp Speed was a Donald Trump production. Still, Republicans are busy changing the subject, talking about anything but the highly popular pandemic package. But a politician’s work is never done, and soon it will be on to the next issue, where the two sides will work on a mammoth infrastructure package. Or the one side, if bipartisanship turns out to be impossible there too. Whichever, the Biden people have been around the track a few times, so they know to take advantage of momentum. And they also know how to stick it to their opponents, [claiming that they were] responsible for the half-million-plus COVID deaths in the United States. Still, we in media latch on to the political cliches, like a hundred days and 50 days and, one more, a president’s “honeymoon.” That one may be valid, considering how the honeymoon with Joe Biden’s predecessor, Donald Trump, lasted about one day. Half of seniors have H. pylori infection

DEAR DR. ROACH: Could you give some additional information about H. pylori infection? I was diagnosed with it recently, via biopsies taken during an endoscopic procedure. I was given instructions on antibiotics to be taken, which I followed through on. When talking to my doctor’s physician assistant, I asked what could have caused the infection, to try to prevent it from recurring. I was given a very cursory response, including that it could have come from eating at “Mom and Pop” restaurants. From research I did after that, it seems that it can be present for a long period of time without being noticed, and many times the cause is unsure. After I finished the antibiotics, I was told to have a follow-up test to make sure they were effective. I was given a choice of a stool test or a breathing test; I chose the breathing test. I was surprised at how easy it was. Are those tests also used to initially detect an infection, without a biopsy? – A.J.Y.

Helicobacter pylori is an important cause of chronic gastritis (stomach inflammation), the most important cause of stomach ulcers, and is an important factor in stomach cancer and intestinal lymphoma. Between 50% and 66% of the population of the world is affected. The older a person is, the more likely he or she is to have infection: In the U.S., it’s about 10% in those between 18 and 30 years old, but 50% in those over 60. This likely represents an improvement in hygiene, as most infections are acquired in childhood and persist throughout life. It is thought that most infection occurs person-to-person, possibly through water or from poor handwashing before food preparation. H. pylori is much more common in developing nations. In the U.S., infection is more common in people of lower socioeconomic status.

Not everyone with H. pylori has symptoms or needs treatment. People with ulcers or gastritis are generally treated with several antibiotics for 10-14 days along with antacid medicine. The diagnosis can be made by biopsy, as yours was, or by the stool or breath test. The breath test is at least 95% specific (if the test is positive, it’s very likely to be a true positive) but 90% sensitive, meaning one person in 10 with the bacteria will have a false negative test. The stool test is close to 95% sensitive and specific. Blood testing is more likely to have false positive and false negative results. In addition to making the diagnosis, the stool or breath test is recommended to confirm eradication of the infection. For more reading, I’d recommend you start at <https://medlineplus.gov/helicobacterpyloriinfections.html>.

DEAR DR. ROACH: Is chlamydia easy to cure with antibiotics? – Anon. Although there are several different species of the bacterium Chlamydia, including an important one that causes pneumonia, I assume you mean chlamydia trachomatis, the kind that causes genital disease in both men and women. Yes, it can be easily cured. The cure rate with either of the first-line antibiotics, doxycycline or azithromycin, is 96% to 100%. The hard part is making the diagnosis, since the infection can be clinically silent, but can still be passed on. Unfortunately, unless all partners are treated simultaneously, it’s possible to be reinfected. Gonorrhea is often present at the same time as chlamydia, and it’s important that testing for that infection also be done.

Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual questions, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Readers may email questions to ToYourGoodHealth@med.cornell.edu. (c) 2021 North America Synd., Inc. All Rights Reserved.

Internet access for veterans

by Freddy Groves

Fifteen percent of veterans do not have an internet connection, limiting their access to Department of Veterans Affairs video telehealth services. But no longer. The VA's new Digital Divide Consult has geared up to help over 12,000 eligible veterans so far.

If you're a veteran living in a rural area, have limited broadband service, don't have a device with video, have a serious medical condition or are in temporary housing, you can get help with internet access and devices.

But there's more:

- If you're part of a HUD-VA program, you can receive a smartphone to reach telehealth.

- If you use TracFone SafeLink, T-Mobile (was Sprint) or Verizon, you can hook up with VA Video Connect health care without incurring data charges on your bill. Go to mobile.va.gov/app/va-video-connect for details. The VA will even do a test call before your visit to check your connection.

- If you're in a rural area or don't have broadband at home, the VA has coordinated with various groups and businesses to create locations for you to use for talking privately to your health care providers. The American Legion, VFW and certain Walmarts are part of the Accessing Telehealth through Local Area Stations (ATLAS) program. Go to connectedcare.va.gov/partners/atlas for locations near you.

The Microsoft Airband Initiative is charged with creating broadband (high speed) in rural areas. Look at microsoft.com/corporate-responsibility/airband. (While you're there, check into the Microsoft Software & Systems Academy, 18 weeks of training for high-paying jobs.)

- Additionally, you could be eligible for the FCC's Lifeline program, which subsidizes broadband and phone service for low-income veterans and veterans who get the following: Medicaid, SNAP, SSI, pension and survivors benefits, and more. Check lifelinesupport.org or call 800-234-9473.

Get started by contacting a VA social worker, who will have all the details and can determine your eligibility..

- If your pooch doesn't like to poop in the snow, here's a great trick to secure a patch of grass (even if frozen). Lay a square of plywood down on the ground, with a rope secured as a handle. After a snow, pull up the wood to reveal the ground underneath.

- Use mismatched socks to protect glass items when transporting them from place to place, or even in storage.

- Refillable spray bottles work best for cleaners. Refills can be economical, they put less waste in the system, and here's one more reason: less propellants used, which can be a serious irritant to lungs. Purchase an attractive bottle, and then look up some recipes for eco-friendly cleaners. You might be surprised how well they work and how great they smell!

- "Add some nuts to your morning cereal or smoothie for a nutritious boost. It's not just for oatmeal or granola. I like to crush a handful of walnuts and sprinkle them across my waffles." – J.E. in Maine

- Get rid of the smell of burned popcorn in your microwave by setting a bowl of coffee grounds in it overnight. Somehow, when you remove it in the morning, it smells of neither popcorn nor coffee!

- Before removing a splinter, ice the area. There's less fussing and a wooden splinter might absorb some liquid, causing it to swell enough to pop out a bit more.
