State economies

With certain state economies hurt more than others during the COVID-19 pandemic, such as Hawaii, which has a 9-percent unemployment rate, the personal-finance website WalletHub has released its report on 2021's Best & Worst State Economies, as well as accompanying videos. In order to determine America's top economic performers, WalletHub compared the 50 states and the District of Columbia across 29 key indicators of economic performance and strength. The data set ranges from change in GDP to startup activity to the share of jobs in high-tech industries. Texas was rated 15th in the report, (1-Best; 25-Avg.):

- 24th – Change in GDP;
- 1st – Exports per Capita;
- 10th – Startup Activity;
- 21st – Percent of Jobs in High-Tech Industries;
- 9th – Annual Median Household Income;
- 15th – Change in Nonfarm Payrolls;
- 38th – Government Surplus/Deficit per Capita;
- 37th – Unemployment Rate; and
- 32nd – WalletHub's States that are Recovering the Quickest from COVID-19 Rank.

Unemployment recovery

Texas is struggling to recover from new unemployment claims, with last week's claims higher than at the start of 2020, according to WalletHub's updated rankings for the States Whose Unemployment Claims Are Recovering the Quickest, along with accompanying videos and audio files. Texas was rated 26h in the report. Other stats:

- Weekly unemployment claims in Texas increased by 72.83% compared to the same week in 2019. This was the 16th smallest increase in the U.S.
- Weekly unemployment claims in Texas increased by 78.51% compared to the start of 2020. This was the 16th biggest increase in the U.S.
- Weekly unemployment claims in Texas decreased by 79.31% compared

EL PASO COUNTY – Are you looking for something cool to do Thursday evenings this summer?

Consider the concert series in El Paso's McKelligon Canyon Amphitheatre (1331 McKelligon Canyon Road), which is nestled in the foothills of the Franklin Mountains.

The concert series presentations, titled Cool Canyon Nights, are slated for 6 to 9 p.m., every Thursday, beginning June 17 and continue through September 2.

The family-friendly concerts will start with live performers on the patio followed by the main act in the amphitheater. Along with the music, food and drinks will be available for purchase during the evening activities.

The popular outdoor concerts, which were cancelled last summer due to the COVID-19 pandemic, will be free to the public this year. So, interested individuals are encouraged to get to the amphitheater early because space is limited.

The free music series hosted in the beautiful McKelligon Canyon Amphitheatre, will feature local performers on the patio stage starting at 6 p.m. with the Amphitheater doors scheduled to open between 6:30 and 7 p.m., event coordinators announced.

The series, in its tenth year, is sponsored by WestStar and produced by Townsquare Media and El Paso Live.

There are several clues that Donald Trump is taking the possibility of his criminal prosecution seriously. First of all, he’s calling the investigations “witch hunts,” which is what he always does when he’s guilty as sin. “Which witch hunt?” those of you who have managed to put

Prosecuting Trump

Trump out of your mind might ask. You and the fam might be deep in planning a summer vacation – perhaps a ballgame. The spotlight on COVID and that other disease, the deadly Trump blight, has faded. Still, it could flare up again. Right now, he’s not rattling around the White House, so the walls protecting him from prosecution have come tumbling down. As a result, now Trump can face legal jeopardy, the serious criminal kind that potentially carries with it incarceration. A step closer, and the investigations cannot be deflected as “fake news.” The two main issues have focused on business practices of the Trump Organization that were simmering beneath the surface mainly as a civil matter. Now they have seeped into reality with a criminal grand jury and all its awesome subpoena power. And the Don is squirming. He blasted in a statement: “There is nothing more corrupt than an investigation that is in desperate search of a crime.” The crimes that prosecutors may be exploring are the fraud type. The Trump Organization may have intentionally cooked the books when describing the value of its assets, but poor-mouthed those same assets when listing them for tax purposes. That’s a serious violation, fraud, and while the company had many individuals who could theoretically make those types of big decisions, few of them were carried out without Trump personally signing off on them. But it’s a long way from here to there, “there” being an indictment of Donald Trump, 45th president of the United States. And a huge problem for the 46th, Joe Biden. Suppose Trump is officially accused of criminal actions. There is only so much Biden can do. These are state charges; they would be tried in state courts, which is not in Joe Biden’s direct chain of command. However, Biden could decide whether the feds get involved by instructing his Department of Justice to begin a process of investigations. Actually, it’s an open

Moriel faced international challenges for degree

EL PASO COUNTY – For many international students, their life consists of crossing the border every day to go to school, work and even clinics. This is the case of Nancy Moriel, an El Paso Community College (EPCC) Surgical Technology student. Spending hours at the international bridge, cultural and language barriers, and not spending as much time as she would want with her loved ones, are some other obstacles Moriel had to face. “One of my most recent obstacles was when the pandemic started. Due to the restrictions on the borders, it was very difficult and intriguing to see how the laws changed at the border,” Moriel said. “As an international student you have to have everything in order, because laws can also change our visa status from one moment to another and that involves more stress and concern.” The EPCC International Students Office helps international students to stay in compliance with the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) regulations while attending EPCC. “Nancy developed a strong sense of commitment and determination to complete her degree,” Dr. Dora Perez, EPCC Admissions Registration Assistant said. “EPCC listened to and recognized the barriers Nancy encountered and worked to reduce and remove them so she would have a successful path.” EPCC has a dedicated staff at each campus serving the needs of the international student from the admission application process through transfer or graduation. Moriel graduated in May with an Associate of Applied Science in Surgical Technology. Her plans are to continue in the medical profession, to provide help in the community of El Paso, continue with her studies and be able to finish a bachelor’s and later a master’s degree.

urban outdoor grant awarded by the Texas Park and Wildlife Commission (TPWC). The county’s new grant monies will go towards proposed renovations of sport court, skatepark, and playground facilities in its county parks which include Agua Dulce, Westway, Estrella, Sparks, Gallegos, and Ascarate Lake. TPWC recently approved more than $21.6 million in competitive local park grants to help fund projects that will create and enhance outdoor recreational opportunities like nature trails, native gardens, playgrounds, splash pads, dog parks, and sports fields at 38 community parks state-wide. The grants, allocated to local governments, provide state and federal funding dedicated for the acquisition and development of public recreation areas and facilities in Texas on a 50/50 reimbursement match basis, TPWC officials said. Once funded, all grant-assisted sites must be dedicated as parkland in perpetuity, properly maintained and open to the public, officials noted. The commission, which administers the local park grants program for the state of Texas, awarded projects based on community population size and scope in three basic categories- urban outdoor recreation, non-urban outdoor recreation, and small community recreation. Urban Outdoor Recreation Grants are reserved for local units of government having populations exceeding 500,000, with projects in five communities receiving grants. The Non-Urban Outdoor Recreation Grants are dedicated to funding park projects in municipalities under 500,000 and the commission-approved awards to projects in 21 communities. The Small Community Recreation Grants are for park projects in towns of less than 20,000 and were awarded to 12 communities. “The parks maintained by El Paso County can always use some improvements,” stated Jose Luis Quinones, a resident of the county’s upper valley. “I hope the renovations are done right and in a timely manner,” he added.

Yes, Democrats should fear the crime wave

On the anniversary of the death of George Floyd, dozens of gunshots rang out in the middle of the day at George Floyd Square in Minneapolis, forcing reporters and bystanders to duck and cover.

The symbolism was unmistakable – the yearlong bout of protest after Floyd’s killing has coincided with a surge of urban crime that has made gunplay dismayingly common.

Indeed, the intersection where Floyd was killed, now a memorial blocked to vehicular traffic, has become a watchword for mayhem.

The issue of public safety may be about to play its most significant role in our politics since the mid-1990s, the beginning of a decades-long decline in crime that steadily eroded its political salience.

Donald Trump tried to make law and order a defining issue in 2020, but the rioting he so forcefully denounced was, in most places, too transitory to become an overwhelming issue.

Now, more than a year into a serious crime wave, Democrats are fooling themselves if they think they won’t be blamed for rising violence in Democratic-run cities.

Overall, murder increased by more than 25% in the United States last year, the biggest jump in 60 years. Surely, the dislocations of the pandemic have been a factor, but it’s also obvious that anti-police agitation has put the cops on their back feet. Exhibit A is Minneapolis.

In the fevered aftermath of the Floyd killing, the City Council pledged to do away with the police department, among the most outlandishly unachievable and self-destructive promises ever made by an elected body. Of course, it couldn’t follow through on it any more than it could have followed through on a promise to eliminate traffic lights or municipal snow removal.

Still, cops have fled the force while crime has soared. The impeccably progressive mayor of Minneapolis, Jacob Frey, who desperately wanted to ingratiate himself at a tribunal-like anti-police rally last summer, but, to his credit, wouldn’t commit to defunding the police, now occasionally sounds like he’s channeling Rudy Giuliani circa 1993.

Another dyed-in-the-wool progressive, Portland Mayor Ted Wheeler, faced with ongoing unrest that once was blamed on Trump, has called for the city’s residents to “take the city back,” and for unmasking, arresting and prosecuting rioters.

Los Angeles cut its police budget by 8% in the wake of the Floyd protests, and now is adding it right back. In South Los Angeles, the LAPD is increasing patrols and vehicle stops to search for guns and gang members.

Irving Kristol famously said a neoconservative is a liberal who has been mugged by reality. If progressive politicians who are now sounding friendlier to the police haven’t been mugged, they at least have been alarmed by the sound of approaching gunfire.

The turnabout isn’t universal. White House press secretary Jen Psaki was asked the other day whether there’s a crime problem and, sounding as evasive as when she discusses the border, would only say there is a “guns problem.” This was a reference to the completely unconvincing argument that increased gun sales have led to the spike in crime when surges in gun sales since the mid-1990s never before led to higher crime.

The problem that Democrats have is that they have accepted – and celebrated – the people making a comprehensive case against the police as systematically racist.

This argument doesn’t naturally allow for nuance. In fact, it logically entails calling for fewer cops and less police funding, an agenda that will be hard to sell to most people in the best of circumstances but is toxic in an environment of rising crime.

Black Lives Matter has already been losing support in the polls, while trust in the police has been rising. Things would have to get much worse for crime to become as central an issue as it was in the 1970s. But Democrats who aren’t alarmed that reporters are dodging bullets at the George Floyd memorial are tempting political fate.

Some NBA fans have apparently lost their marbles

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

The NBA playoffs are proceeding smoothly through their second round, and even better news is the fact that arenas across the country are beginning to allow larger crowds to the games. In game 6 between the Dallas Mavericks and Los Angeles Clippers, 18,500 fans were in attendance.

Thanks to the diminishing number of covid-19 cases, more and more fans are being let in.

But at the same time, thanks to growing number of knucklehead fans who feel they can do whatever they want at NBA games, more and more of them are being banned from arenas for life.

I know the last year has been challenging for all of us, to say the least. But nothing has happened to cause some fans to completely lose their ability to tell right and wrong.

Fans have always had the freedom to dress in the most insane costumes and have always been able to cheer loudly and boo the visiting team as if they were yelling at a member of the IRS.

As long as the profanities weren't too personal and as long as they did all this from their respective seat area, all was fine.

Some of the recent behavior from fans would be totally expected in any kindergarten class or among the animals in the African wild, but it doesn't belong in any social setting that contains human beings over the age of ten.

So far, there have been five separate incidents where fans crossed the line and the NBA has stepped in to ban them from ever attending a game in that particular arena again.

In case you didn't hear, Washington Wizards superstar guard Russell Westbrook was leaving the court after game two of his series with Philadelphia, when a Philly fan poured a tub of popcorn over his head.

Naturally, Westbrook took offense and had to be held back from charging the fan.

After things settled, Westbrook took the time to comment, "I'm all for the fans enjoying the game and having fun. It's part of sports. I get it. But there's certain things that cross the line."

Then there was the New York Knicks fan that didn't wait until after the game to do his thing.

While Atlanta Hawks star Trae Young was going to inbound the ball, a New York fan actually spit on him. Fortunately, the fan was identified and is banned from any events at Madison Square Garden.

After the game, Young spoke, "for spitting and things like that, that's uncalled for in any arena and any environment, that's disgusting, but we got to move forward and for me, I just focus on this team."

Then there were the three fans – morons – that were removed from Utah's Vivint Arena after taunting Memphis star Ja Morant's parents in the stands. One horrible quote yelled at his father was, "I'll put a nickel in your back and watch you dance, boy."

I have to ask, what year is this? Thankfully, Utah officials have banned these three individuals for life.

Then there was the Boston Celtics fan that really must hate former Celtic Kyrie Irving. See, Irving left the Celtics to play with the Brooklyn Nets, who eliminated Boston from the playoffs.

This guy was so upset that he hurled a bottle of water at Irving as he left the court in the Boston Garden arena.

In this case, not only was the fan banned from all future Boston Garden events, but was charged with assault.

Irving spoke about the incident after the game, "they paid for their tickets – great, I'm grateful that they're coming in to watch a great performance. But we're not at the theater. We're not throwing tomatoes and other random stuff at the people that are performing. It's just too much."

Then finally, at DC's Capital One Arena, a fan was tackled by security after running onto the court during another Wizards-76ers game.

Nothing happened, but with all that's been going on, including covid, you never know.

After a year off, things are quickly coming back to normal in the world of sports.

The pandemic should have put things in perspective, but for some fans, sports still evidently makes them lose their marbles.

Cops cited him for not driving

We all know that you can get ticketed for driving without a license. But we are living in the 21st century and these days you can also get pulled over for driving without a driver. Such was the case for Param Sharma when the California Highway Patrol pulled him over after they spotted him tooling along the highway sitting in the backseat of his car with no one behind the wheel. The CHPs say they saw him quickly jump into the driver's seat when he saw the police coming. His car was a Tesla self-driving car and it is likely Sharma had engaged the vehicle's Autopilot or its "Full Self-Driving" system. But even so the Tesla's owner's manual specifically tells drivers to stay behind the wheel so they can intervene should the self-drive system fail.

question of semantics, whether it’s “his” Department of Justice or whether it is responsible to “the people.” Tradition calls for a president to stay out of such DOJ matters, tradition that Trump, as president, routinely ignored. And Biden would have to decide whether he could get personally involved and credibly pull it off.

Whether he does or not, Biden could face the spectacle of a former chief executive standing trial in criminal court, something that has never happened before. Not only would that be a disgrace to Trump, it would disgrace the United States of America.

Furthermore, our leaders would loudly insist that they would not be intimidated by the violence of huge crowds of Donald Trump supporters, whipped into a frenzy by opportunistic white supremacists and other extremists. Yes, the feds could be intimidated, if nothing else than by the prospect of watching the collapse of our nation.

Remember, the mobs were the same revved up Americans, persuaded by Trump’s ridiculous lies that he had the election stolen from him. They were willing to shred the most sacred U.S. tradition, the vote, on the word of one man, a known liar. They invaded the U.S. Capitol building, and they could take over other buildings, possibly bringing the government to its knees. Not only would the country not be “exceptional,” it might be rubble, with a deranged authoritarian bent on revenge taking charge, the same one who was previously charged with violating the law.

It would be a test of democracy, a test that this country might fail. Given the cynicism that nearly everyone has about politics and politicians, America is weakened. We are a fragile country, so Donald Trump’s biggest crimes of all may be yet to come.

Removal is best option for tumor inside kidney

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am 62 years of age and in excellent health. I run or hike 3 miles or more on most days, and road bike, swim and weight train. I eat sensibly, and I don't drink, smoke or take drugs. I don't drink coffee or even take aspirin for pain. My last physical exam showed no problems, and my blood and urine tests were fine. Recently, I was diagnosed with a small tumor inside my right kidney. It's about a 2.5 cm solid mass with no rough edges at this time. The MRI showed "a 2.4 cm mildly enhancing solid mass concerning for a renal neoplasm." It also showed that the left kidney has a single 1.2 cm cortical cyst over its upper pole aspect. Please explain what this means. The options for treatment are to completely remove the kidney and see if it is cancerous or just monitor the tumor and see if it continues to grow and remove later. The doctor said the whole kidney has to be removed, because of the central location of the tumor. The doctor also said a biopsy is not a good idea where the mass is located for fear of releasing cancerous cells within the kidney that could move quickly throughout the body. Removal is a drastic measure, no doubt, to test for kidney cancer. Should I just monitor and wait to see what the tumor does or operate and have the kidney removed. What medical action do you suggest that I do? – B.J.R.

I am sorry to hear about your kidney tumor. A solitary kidney mass in a man in his 60s is always suspicious for kidney cancer. A 2.4 cm tumor is large enough to provoke serious concern: In a recent study, in people who had their tumors removed, 83 percent of tumors that size were kidney cancer.

Because of the location, a partial removal of just the mass is impossible, so the choice between watching and waiting versus taking the whole tumor out should take into consideration the very high likelihood that this is cancer. Kidney cancer can spread to other organs. If you were my patient, I likely would advise surgery. If you were not a good risk for surgery (say, in your 80s with multiple medical problems), then I might consider watchful waiting. In your case, I think going for surgery is the wiser course. Being so healthy will make your treatment much less risky.

DEAR DR. ROACH: Does BPH increase the possibility of prostate cancer? – A.L.

Benign prostatic hypertrophy is a common condition in men. About half of men in their 50s have an enlarged prostate, and the proportion gets even higher as men age. The major symptoms of enlarged prostate are difficulty with urine flow, a sensation of decreased emptying, difficulty initiating urination, and increased frequency of urinating, including at night. As symptoms worsen, incontinence can occur and even kidney damage may result due to the high pressure in the bladder.

The first word in “BPH” is “benign”: It is not a cancerous condition. It does not protect against developing cancer, but there does not appear to be an increased risk for cancer among men with symptoms of BPH, according to the most recent studies.

Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual questions, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Readers may email questions to ToYourGoodHealth@med.cornell.edu. (c) 2021 North America Synd., Inc. All Rights Reserved.

Once-homeless vets test job market

by Freddy Groves

In the month since the homeless veterans had moved into the attic dormitory, three of them had gotten jobs of one kind or another. Sarge had gone banging on doors up and down the main street, looking for available work within walking distance.

The accountant-to-be, he of the formerly long hair and a face hidden by an immense beard, was keeping books and answering phones afternoons at a real estate office, wearing a clip-on tie and a collared shirt with the sleeves rolled down to cover the tattoos on his arm.

Another veteran was only working three nights a week washing dishes at a restaurant. “But he’s trying,” said Sarge. “He was out on the streets a long time, has PTSD, and a noisy restaurant kitchen is hard on him. He goes outside a couple times each shift and does breathing exercises with the stress app on his phone. He’s really trying. Restaurant owner loves him.”

The third dormitory veteran was working the building supplies pro desk at the hardware store, quietly mulling his options. “Store manager called me,” said Sarge as we stood outside the coffee shop’s back door. “Asked if I knew my veteran had once owned a construction company. I did not know that.”

Sarge had looked the guy up online and found an old website full of what he said were the most beautiful, high-end kitchens he’d ever seen, along with additions and custom playhouses. “And our boy was the company owner. He never said a word. Never says much of anything.”

“But here,” he said, pulling some pages out of his pocket and handing them to me. “I found these drawings in the trash.”

The sketches were floor plans for tiny homes with storage built-ins and loft bedroom space. At the top of the pages was the notation Veterans Village. The veteran’s initials were penciled in the lower corner.

Sarge smiled. “At least we know what he’s thinking about.”

• There are many fancy cleaners for sale for wood and laminate floors. Truth is, all you need is regular sweeping and a clean, damp mop. Never use harsh cleaners on wood, and do not use too much moisture.

• D.D. in Missouri keeps morning cereal crisp by using two bowls. Bite by bite dipped in milk is the perfect remedy for avoiding a soggy spoonful!

• Use white chalk to fill pin holes in the wall before painting. You can also use this tactic to hide holes if you are unable to paint the white walls of a rental. It simply fills the hole, making it “disappear.”

• Save prescription medicine bottles and use them to sort beads or findings for beadwork or jewelry making. Bonus: Store the bottles upside down in a plastic storage bin so you can see what’s in the bottles without having to sort through all of them.

• Add chocolate syrup to your cake mix for a deliciously deep flavor when making a chocolate cake.

• Check your pillows: Press into the pillow at the spot where your head rests. If the pillow doesn’t spring back when you remove your hands, it’s time to replace it.

• Add these to the list of items to eliminate the odor of cooking cabbage: a heel of bread, a whole walnut or a pinch of baking soda.

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string’s word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.
